Hanoi Tells Army To Give Support To Viet Cong As Ho Chi Minh Acts

U Thant Asks Reds Not To Try Pilots

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General U Thant made a public appeal to North Viet Nam Saturday not to try American prisoners. He said any such trial would "generate still more intense escalation" of a war he said already threatens to become World War III.

In a statement that a spokesman read to correspondents, Thant also appealed to all parties in the Viet Nam war to comply with the 1949 Geneva convention against mistreatment of war prisoners.

Finally, he repeated his three-point proposal for cessation of the U.S. bombing of North Viet Nam, scaling down of all military operations in South Viet Nam and a willingness of all sides to negotiate with the Viet Cong rebels.

North Viet Nam has been talking about trying U.S. pilots shot down in bombing and reconnaissance missions over its territory.

Hanoi radio has promised a special announcement Saturday night, and there was speculation here it would deal with this subject.

Thant's statement referred to Friday's appeal of several U.S. senators against a trial or execution of the prisoners.

LIFE SACRED

His spokesman said the secretary-general "believes that human life is sacred," views all forms of violence and all wars as evil," and so has been seeking a just and peaceful solution for Viet Nam.

"When the news of the impending trial of American prisoners in North Viet Nam was brought to his notice, he expressed his concern over the possible fate of those prisoners," the spokesman went on.

"In addition to humanitarian grounds, he feels that the possible trial of American prisoners is certain to generate still more intense escalation of the war. The Viet Nam war already has potentialities of developing into World War III.

"The secretary-general has noted the statement of several U.S. senators, made yesterday, that the trial and execution of American prisoners would lead to 'new levels of suffering and sorrow, fixing more firmly still the seal of an implacable war.'

"The secretary-general wishes, therefore, to appeal to the government of North Viet Nam to exercise restraint in the treatment of American prisoners. He also appeals to all parties to comply with the provisions of the Geneva convention of Aug. 12, 1949, irrespective of various conflicting interpretations."

The statement concluded with a repetition of the three points, saying:

"The secretary-general feels very strongly that these steps alone can create an atmosphere congenial for discussions and negotiations."

Asked how he was conveying his appeal to North Viet Nam the spokesman replied: "Through you gentlemen."

Girl Credited With Rescue Of 2 Women

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — A nineteen - year - old girl was credited with rescuing two elderly women Friday from a house set afire by lightning during a thunderstorm.

The storm caused damage estimated in the thousands. Other damage was reported in Selma and Tuscaloosa.

Barbara Wade, a student at the University of Alabama, said she saw smoke coming out of the two - story brick and wood - frame house. She ran across the street and brought out Mrs. Lillian Latow, 71, and Mrs. Dora Scott, 88.

The house — known as the Pinkard Home — was an old capital heights landmark and was destroyed.

The western section of the city was hardest hit by high winds and considerable damage was reported to business and residential property along the Old Selma Road.

Winds took a 30 by 100 - foot roof off a warehouse owned by W. O. Smith Contractors and laid it down about 300 feet away.

Hudson - Thompson Co., on Highway 80 east estimated damages at $40,000 to their warehouse. A bolt of lightning struck a girder at one end of the structure causing the steel framework to collapse.

Police reported downed trees and power lines blocked roads in many areas.

Firemen answered at least 32 calls due to lightning striking electrical transformers and wires.

The U. S. Weather Bureau said that .30 inches of rain fell and winds whipped up to 50 miles per hour.

An electrical storm at Tuscaloosa brought heavy rain and 50 - mile - an - hour winds which knocked limbs of one-inch in diameter from trees.

A Selma television station reported severe weather has interrupted transmission for a while and some damage was reported to business establishments.

President May Face Pressure

WASHINGTON (AP) — It became increasingly apparent Saturday that should Hanoi execute captured American fliers President Johnson would be brought under intense pressure to destroy North Viet Nam — even at the risk of bringing on an all-out conventional war.

This probability was underscored by the grim statements of several senators.

The hard-line sentiment was typified by Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., and chairman of the Armed Services Committee, who warned Hanoi leaders that executions "will bring about the application of power that will make a desert of their country."

Others used terms nearly as strongly — and going, by implication, far beyond earlier demands for heavier bombing of military targets and closing of the port of Haiphong.

It was learned that the United States has told Hanoi through unspecified diplomatic channels that any trials would be a very grave action.

Ex-Convict Is Sought In Killings

CHICAGO (AP) — A coast-to-coast hunt began Saturday for a tattooed ex-convict named in a murder warrant as the methodical butcher of eight student nurses.

Police Supt. O. W. Wilson said fingerprints lifted from the blood-splattered town house where the massacre occurred last Thursday matched those of Richard B. Speck.

Miss Corazon Amurao, the only survivor of the massacre, also identified Speck from a coin-machine photograph.

Police found the photo in files at the maritime union hall, a block from the townhouse, where they said Speck had tried a few days before the murders to get a job on a boat sailing down the Mississippi River to New Orleans.

An hour after the state warrant was signed charging

Speck with murder a federal warrant was issued charging unlawful flight. This authorized the FBI to join the hunt.

The fugitive was described as a white man, 25 years old, 6 feet 1, 160 pounds, blue eyes, light brown hair. The description matched in its essentials the one given to police earlier by Miss Amurao.

TATTOOS ON ARMS

Speck also was said to have tattoos on both arms. One tattoo says, "born to raise h—."

Speck has a long police record in Texas, where he served two terms in the penitentiary. The second term ended June 2, 1965.

While on parole after his first term, Texas police records show, Speck was found guilty of threatening a "58 year old woman with a butcher knife. The incident occurred Jan. 29, 1965.

Monmouth, Ill. police said Speck also was wanted for questioning there in connection with the murder of a barmaid last April. Speck has a brother in Monmouth and had been questioned by police there after a series of burglaries.

Texas prison records list Speck's wife and mother at a Dallas address. A woman at the address, who said she was Speck's stepsister, said none of the family had seen him in four months.

Chicago Police Supt. Wilson said his detectives had found 39 fingerprints at the house which he said were Speck's.

He said the print used to identify him was taken from the wooden door of the bedroom where the nine girls had been herded and trussed and eight of them dragged by the killer one by one to their deaths in other rooms of the house. The eight were strangled and stabbed repeatedly.

The ninth Miss Amurao, saved her life by wriggling under a bunk bed during one of the killer's absences.

33 Men Bail Out As Plane Catches Fire

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Thirty-three men—including 2 National Guard special forces paratroopers—bailed out of their burning C119 transport plane Saturday night before it crashed into the woods.

The plane had just taken off from Jacksonville Naval Air Station. A spokesman there, Lt. Cmdr. Ralph McClure, said all 33 men aboard parachuted to safety.

According to a Federal Aviation Agency spokesman, the men had only three minutes to leap before the plane crashed.

"There was a fire of some sort and the order was given to bail out," McClure said. "They were all suited up in 'chutes as the regulations say they should be. This proved to be a most helpful regulation."

The 26 passengers were members of C Co. of the 20th Special Forces Group Airborne, a branch of the Florida National Guard. They were en route to Gulfport, Miss., for two weeks of summer training.

The plane, an Air Force Reserve C119 from Brookley AFB at Mobile, Ala., crashed in a desolate wooded area 20 miles west of here. Its four-man crew was with the 908th Troop Carrier Group.

The FAA spokesman said the pilot signaled he had ordered the men to bail out at 8:01 p.m., CST and the plane crashed at 1:04 p.m. "This would have left them only three minutes," he said.

Views On Aid Expressed By Sen. Ellender

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., said Saturday he opposes congressional authorization of foreign aid programs for more than a year at a time.

Extending Authorizations beyond the one - year period, he said, would "substantially lessen congressional control over the program."

And, he added, "If any program needs to be watched and controlled by the Congress, this one needs it most of all."

Ellender, in a talk for broadcast in Louisiana, noted that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has approved a bill to provide new authorization of the foreign aid program for one year but that the House has approved a two-year program.

He said he is following the matter closely since "the foreign aid legislation has been of continuing concern to me."

"I have always attempted to protect the interest of the American taxpayer, who must supply every dollar of the funds," Ellender said. "All too often, I fear, the administrators and supporters of this program on the Washington level are inclined to forget this interest, or take it for granted, in their efforts to aid foreign governments."

He said the Senate committee bill contains many guidelines which he has advocated in past years.

National Guard Keeps Peace In Chicago Area

CHICAGO (AP) — National guard-imposed peace prevailed for the second straight night Saturday in Chicago's violence-scarred West Side Negro district.

It seemed like a normal Saturday night — the streets crowded, but orderly — as 2,000 troops wearing helmets and carrying bayonet-tipped rifles went on patrol at dusk.

In contrast with Friday night, when residents seemed awed and even afraid at the show of force, the guard was largely ignored — except by kids.

As a guard truck rumbled by one apartment, Negro youngsters leaned out windows, clapped and cheered. On a sidewalk in another area a bunch of kids teased guardsmen. Some asked for money. Others offered guardsmen — white and Negro — licks off their ice cream cones. All oohed and aahed at the weapons.

One strapping trooper got a big grin when he reached out and chucked a youngster under the chin.

OUT OF CONTROL

Friday night, 1,500 guardsmen, mobilized after police said they couldn't control crowds up to 5,000 which had looted, burned, hurled rocks and fired shots since Tuesday night, put an abrupt end to the disturbances with their businesslike patrols. The streets were quiet Saturday.

Aside from a few jibes, the troops for the second night encountered little hostility.

As one officer put it: "If there's anything more tranquilizing than an M-1 carbine with a bayonet, it's 1,500 of them."

WON'T FIGHT

A Negro in his 30s, standing by a smashed supermarket window, gave a newsman a representative comment: "I was mad, too, mad enough to fight. But I won't fight the guard. I respect those uniforms and so do the kids I was with."

A Negro in his late teens, who said he was a member of a youth gang, was asked what young people were angry about. "This issue is not police or whites," he said. "We want more basketball courts. We want more swimming pools."

A newsman encountered a woman planting flowers in a tiny side yard, her son at her side. Wasn't it a strange time to plant? "No," was the answer. "I love flowers and I'm not going to let this business stop me."

Allies Slash Reds; Planes Seek Missiles

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — U.S. Marines and government troops slashed at Communist units just south of the 17th Parallel Saturday while fresh waves of U.S. jets sought out missile sites, truck convoys and other targets north of the border.

Helicopters supported a task force of several thousand men in a sweep called Operation Hastings, launched at dawn Friday.

COMMUNIST DEAD

The Marines said they have counted 62 Communist dead and believed 56 others have been killed. Their own casualties were reported light. But five helicopters have crashed, two from enemy fire.

U.S. Navy Secretary Paul H. Nitze, winding up a six-day tour of Viet Nam, contributed to a flow of optimistic statements voiced lately by both South Vietnamese and American officials:

"The progress in all phases of our Navy and Marine operations has been much more dramatic than I expected before I left Washington. Everywhere the effort is expanding in scope, numbers and effectiveness."

American pilots maintained over North Viet Nam the intensified aerial campaign marked Friday by a record high of 121 missions, assignments ordinarily executed by two to four planes.

Objectives that day included six missile sites, from seven to 45 miles from Hanoi, and three widely separated oil depots. Two of the missile sites were written off as destroyed.

U.S. Air Force raiders who struck at 31 staging and storage areas near Dong Hoi, 40 miles north of the border, reported they had set off more than 50 fires and 27 secondary explosions such as would come from ignited stocks of oil or ammunition.

Against a Hanoi claim that seven planes had been shot down, the U.S. command stuck by its announcement at the time that one was lost. This was a Navy A4 Skyhawk, the 291st American plane acknowledged destroyed in the 17-month-old campaign.

A spokesman said Navy planes had eluded 16 Soviet-built missiles during the attacks on the missile sites, but antiaircraft artillery got the Skyhawk. The pilot bailed out. Pilots of rescue craft reported they could not reach him because of heavy flak and he might have been captured.

Area Cooler By 4 Degrees

Twin Cities and area residents may not have know it, but it was cooler Saturday than Friday. The temperature rose to a high of 97, four degrees cooler than Friday's 101.

The high today is forecast to range between 90 and 96 degrees. Low tonight may dip to 72 - 76.

Last year's high on this date was 96, with the low 69.

Partly cloudy with scattered mainly afternoon and evening thundershowers are included in the forecast.

Fifty Arrested

CANTON, Miss. (UPI)—About 50 civil rights demonstrators were arrested here late Saturday when marchers protesting the use of tear gas during a stop-over here during the "Meredith freedom march" last month ignored orders to disperse.

Police Chief Dan Thomas said the Negroes were arrested after police ordered them to halt a march around the county courthouse. He said the marchers would be charged with obstructing the sidewalk.

North Viet Nam President Orders Troop Mobilization

TOKYO (AP) — North Viet Nam's President Ho Chi Minh today ordered a partial mobilization, and Hanoi told its army to "extend all out support" to the Viet Cong in South Viet Nam.

Ho's mobilization order and a Supreme National Defense Council communique were reported by the North Viet Nam news agency in a special news transmission monitored in Tokyo.

The agency said Ho promulgated partial mobilization after the standing committee of the National Assembly "decided to mobilize part of reserve officers, noncommissioned officers and army men, and part of the citizens belonging to the reserves of the army."

In words strongly indicating that Hanoi planned to step up its dispatch of troops to South Viet Nam, the news agency quoted the Defense Council communique as saying:

"For the sake of our kith-and-kin sentiments and the glorious obligation of the great rear to the great frontline, let the army and people of the North extend all-out support to the patriotic resistance war of our Southern compatriots."

LONG STATEMENT

In his 800-word statement, Ho declared: "The U.S. aggressors have brazenly launched air attacks on North Viet Nam in an attempt to get out of the quagmire in the South and to impose on us 'negotiation' on their terms.

"But North Viet Nam will not falter. Our army and people have shown redoubled eagerness in the emulation to produce and fight heroically. So far, we have blasted out of the skies over 1,200 enemy aircraft. We are determined to defeat the enemy's war of destruction and at the same time to extend all-out support to our dear compatriots in the South."

The North Vietnamese president, whose statement was described by the Hanoi agency as an "appeal," declared that even if the United States throws one million men or more into the Viet Nam war and intensifies its bombings, and though the war may last "5, 10, 20 years or longer," and Hanoi, Haiphong and other cities and enterprises may be destroyed, "the Vietnamese people will not be intimidated."

SPECULATION

There had been wide speculation in Saigon and Washington before the broadcast that Hanoi might announce punitive action against captured American fliers, whom it has repeatedly branded as war criminals.

But there was no mention Sunday of the captured Americans. By latest Pentagon count they number 34, including 22 Air Force personnel. It has not been disclosed how many of the 22 are fliers.

Ho's speech also appeared to constitute a full rejection of the latest U.S. peace feelers.

The communique from the Supreme National Defense Council followed Ho's speech. It said the council had met under Ho's chairmanship early in July and took "important decisions to mobilize the forces of the whole people and strengthen the people's armed forces and the people's national defense."

The agency carried the partial mobilization order issued by Ho and the test of the National Assembly decision proposing such a mobilization.

Accusation Cuts Off Strike Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A union accusation that Northwest Airlines is improperly soliciting passengers for military charter flights interrupted Saturday the talks aimed at ending the airline strike.

Assistant Secretary of Labor James J. Reynolds, presiding over the negotiations, said the new charges made it impracticable to hold joint negotiations Saturday.

He asked the opposing parties, the AFL-CIO International Association of Machinists and the five airlines struck by the union July 8, to meet with him again this morning.

Reynolds said he would insist that both sides proceed with negotiations "regardless of whether this matter has been changed or corrected to the satisfaction of the union."

"I will insist that they do so and will see that they do so," he said.

The principal union negotiator, Machinists' Vice President Joseph W. Ramsey, said his people are prepared to meet today in joint session with the company representatives but added: "They may not like what we have to say."

Earlier Ramsey had said "we have been waiting all day for management even to talk to us."

William J. Curtin, chief spokesman for the airlines, declined comment, saying Reynolds' statement covered the situation.

Ramsey said Northwest has been soliciting military passengers in violation of an agreement not to do so. He added that if the airline does not discontinue this violation immediately, the union will "take appropriate steps."

Asked what these might be, Ramsey said: "I don't intend to say. Let them guess."

U.S. Warns Reds About Prisoners

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Hanoi was warned Saturday that the American public would demand decimation of North Viet Nam if the Communists should execute captured American pilots.

The warnings against such vengeance came from high-level U.S. officials while free world revulsion against the threat mounted. United Nations Secretary General Thant and British Prime Minister Harold Wilson joined the growing appeals to North Viet Nam not to carry out its plan.

President Johnson refrained from immediate comment. But he and other high officials were standing by for a special broadcast promised for late Saturday by Hanoi.

The broadcast was expected by some to be formal announcement that the Communists planned to try the American prisoners as war criminals.

URGES INTERVENTION

Wilson, in Moscow to make a new bid to get the Russians to help bring off Viet Nam peace talks, urged the Soviets to intervene with Hanoi to drop the trial plans.

Thant, who has frequently scored U.S. involvement in Viet Nam, appealed to the Communists to observe international agreements on treatment of prisoners of war. A Thant spokesman said the Burmese leader felt that trial of the pilots would be sure to escalate the war.

Both Sens. George D. Aiken, R-Vt., and Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., asserted that if the worst should occur—that the pilots were shot—the American public would demand total destruction of North Viet Nam. Russell added that this would be "completely justified."

U.S. Ambassador at large W. Averell Harriman one of the President's ace diplomats, declared that the trials would bring on serious and long-lasting consequences for North Viet Nam. Harriman was interviewed on the Voice of America.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey said the emotions that such trials would turn loose in this country "would be hard to control."

33 Men Bail Out As Plane Catches Fire

JACKSONVILLE, Fla (UPI) — Thirty-three men—including 2 National Guard special forces paratroopers—bailed out of their burning C119 transport plane Saturday night before it crashed into the woods.

The plane had just taken off from Jacksonville Naval Air Station. A spokesman there, Lt. Cmdr. Ralph McClure, said all 33 men aboard parachuted to safety.

According to a Federal Aviation Agency spokesman, the men had only three minutes to leap before the plane crashed

"There was a fire of some sort and the order was given to bail out," McClure said. "They were all suited up in 'chutes as the regulations say they should be. This proved to be a most helpful regulation."

The 29 passengers were members of C Co. of the 20th Special Forces Group Airborne, a branch of the Florida National Guard. They were en route to Gulfport, Miss., for two weeks of summer training.

The plane, an Air Force Reserve C119 from Brookley AFB at Mobile, Ala., crashed in a desolate wooded area 20 miles west of here. Its four-man crew was with the 908th Troop Carrier Group.

The FAA spokesman said the pilot signaled he had ordered the men to bail out at 8:01 p.m., CST and the plane crashed at 1:04 p.m., "this would have left them only three minutes," he said.

Views On Aid Expressed By Sen. Ellender

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., said Saturday he opposes congressional authorization of foreign aid programs for more than a year at a time.

Extending Authorizations beyond the one - year period, he said, would "substantially lessen congressional control over the program."

And, he added, "If any program needs to be watched and controlled by the Congress, this one needs it most of all."

Ellender, in a talk for broadcast in Louisiana, noted that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has approved a bill to provide new authorization of the foreign aid program for one year but that the House has approved a two-year program.

He said he is following the matter closely since "the foreign aid legislation has been of continuing concern to me."

"I have always attempted to protect the interest of the American taxpayer, who must supply every dollar of the funds," Ellender said. "All too often, I fear, the administrators and supporters of this program on the Washington level are inclined to forget this interest, or take it for granted, in their efforts to aid foreign governments."

He said the Senate committee bill contains many guidelines which he has advocated in past years.

National Guard Keeps Peace In Chicago Area

CHICAGO (AP) — National guard-imposed peace prevailed for the second straight night Saturday in Chicago's violence-scarred West Side Negro district.

It seemed like a normal Saturday night — the streets crowded, but orderly — as 2,000 troops wearing helmets and carrying bayonet-tipped rifles went on patrol at dusk.

In contrast with Friday night, when residents seemed awed and even afraid at the show of force, the guard was largely ignored — except by kids.

As a guard truck rumbled by one apartment, Negro youngsters leaned out windows, clapped and cheered. On a sidewalk in another area a bunch of kids teased guardsmen. Some asked for money. Others offered guardsmen — white and Negro — licks off their ice cream cones. All oohed and aahed at the weapons.

One strapping trooper got a big grin when he reached out and chucked a youngster under the chin.

OUT OF CONTROL

Friday night, 1,500 guardsmen, mobilized after police said they couldn't control crowds up to 5,000 which had looted, burned, hurled rocks and fired shots since Tuesday night, put an abrupt end to the disturbances with their businesslike patrols. The streets were quiet Saturday.

Aside from a few jibes, the troops for the second night encountered little hostility.

As one officer put it: "If there's anything more tranquilizing than an M-1 carbine with a bayonet, it's 1,500 of them."

WON'T FIGHT

A Negro in his 30s, standing by a smashed supermarket window, gave a newsman a representative comment: "I was mad, too, mad enough to fight. But I won't fight the guard. I respect those uniforms and so do the kids I was with."

A Negro in his late teens, who said he was a member of a youth gang, was asked what young people were angry about. "This issue is not police or whites," he said. "We want more basketball courts. We want more swimming pools."

A newsman encountered a woman planting flowers in a tiny side yard, her son at her side. Wasn't it a strange time to plant? "No," was the answer. "I love flowers and I'm not going to let this business stop me."

Allies Slash Reds; Planes Seek Missiles

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — U.S. Marines and government troops slashed at Communist units just south of the 17th Parallel Saturday while fresh waves of U.S. jets sought out missile sites, truck convoys and other targets north of the border.

Helicopters supported a task force of several thousand men in a sweep called Operation Hastings, launched at dawn Friday.

COMMUNIST DEAD

The Marines said they have counted 62 Communist dead and believed 56 others have been killed. Their own casualties were reported light. But five helicopters have crashed, two from enemy fire.

U.S. Navy Secretary Paul H. Nitze, winding up a six-day tour of Viet Nam, contributed to a flow of optimistic statements voiced lately by both South Vietnamese and American officials:

"The progress in all phases of our Navy and Marine operations has been much more dramatic than I expected before I left Washington. Everywhere the effort is expanding in scope, numbers and effectiveness."

American pilots maintained over North Viet Nam the intensified aerial campaign marked Friday by a record high of 121 missions, assignments ordinarily executed by two to four planes.

Objectives that day included six missile sites, from seven to 45 miles from Hanoi, and three widely separated oil depots. Two of the missile sites were written off as destroyed.

U.S. Air Force raiders who struck at 31 staging and storage areas near Dong Hoi, 40 miles north of the border, reported they had set off more than 50 fires and 27 secondary explosions such as would come from ignited stocks of oil or ammunition.

Against a Hanoi claim that seven planes had been shot down, the U.S. command stuck by its announcement at the time that one was lost. This was a Navy A4 Skyhawk, the 291st American plane acknowledged destroyed in the 17-month-old campaign.

A spokesman said Navy planes had eluded 10 Soviet-built missiles during the attacks on the missile sites, but antiaircraft artillery got the Skyhawk. The pilot bailed out. Pilots of rescue craft reported they could not reach him because of heavy flak and he might have been captured.

Area Cooler By 4 Degrees

Twin Cities and area residents may not have know it, but it was cooler Saturday than Friday. The temperature rose to a high of 97, four degrees cooler than Friday's 101.

The high today is forecast to range between 90 and 96 degrees. Low tonight may dip to 72 - 76.

Last year's high on this date was 96, with the low 69.

Partly cloudy with scattered mainly afternoon and evening thundershowers are included in the forecast.

Fifty Arrested

CANTON, Miss. (UPI)—About 50 civil rights demonstrators were arrested here late Saturday when marchers protesting the use of tear gas during a stop-over here during the "Meredith freedom march" last month ignored orders to disperse.

Police Chief Dan Thomas said the Negroes were arrested after police ordered them to halt a march around the county courthouse. He said the marchers would be charged with obstructing the sidewalk.

North Viet Nam President Orders Troop Mobilization

TOKYO (AP) — North Viet Nam's President Ho Chi Minh today ordered a partial mobilization, and Hanoi told its army to "extend all out support" to the Viet Cong in South Viet Nam.

Ho's mobilization order and a Supreme National Defense Council communique were reported by the North Viet Nam news agency in a special news transmission monitored in Tokyo.

The agency said Ho promulgated partial mobilization after the standing committee of the National Assembly "decided to mobilize part of reserve officers, noncommissioned officers and army men, and part of the citizens belonging to the reserves of the army."

In words strongly indicating that Hanoi planned to step up its dispatch of troops to South Viet Nam, the news agency quoted the Defense Council communique as saying:

"For the sake of our kith-and-kin sentiments and the glorious obligation of the great rear to the great frontline, let the army and people of the North extend all-out support to the patriotic resistance war of our Southern compatriots."

LONG STATEMENT

In his 800-word statement, Ho declared: "The U.S. aggressors have brazenly launched air attacks on North Viet Nam in an attempt to get out of the quagmire in the South and to impose on us 'negotiation' on their terms.

"But North Viet Nam will not falter. Our army and people have shown redoubled eagerness in the emulation to produce and fight heroically. So far, we have blasted out of the skies over 1,200 enemy aircraft. We are determined to defeat the enemy's war of destruction and at the same time to extend all-out support to our dear compatriots in the South."

The North Vietnamese president, whose statement was described by the Hanoi agency as an "appeal," declared that even if the United States throws one million men or more into the Viet Nam war and intensifies its bombings, and though the war may last "5, 10, 20 years or longer," and Hanoi, Haiphong and other cities and enterprises may be destroyed, "the Vietnamese people will not be intimidated."

SPECULATION

There had been wide speculation in Saigon and Washington before the broadcast that Hanoi might announce punitive action against captured American fliers, whom it has repeatedly branded as war criminals.

But there was no mention Sunday of the captured Americans. By latest Pentagon count they number 34, including 22 Air Force personnel. It has not been disclosed how many of the 22 are fliers.

Ho's speech also appeared to constitute a full rejection of the latest U.S. peace feelers.

The communique from the Supreme National Defense Council followed Ho's speech. It said the council had met under Ho's chairmanship early in July and took "important decisions to mobilize the forces of the whole people and strengthen the people's armed forces and the people's national defense."

The agency carried the partial mobilization order issued by Ho and the test of the National Assembly decision proposing such a mobilization.

Accusation Cuts Off Strike Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A union accusation that Northwest Airlines is improperly soliciting passengers for military charter flights interrupted Saturday the talks aimed at ending the airline strike.

Assistant Secretary of Labor James J. Reynolds, presiding over the negotiations, said the new charges made it impracticable to hold joint negotiations Saturday.

He asked the opposing parties, the AFL-CIO International Association of Machinists and the five airlines struck by the union July 8, to meet with him again this morning.

Reynolds said he would insist that both sides proceed with negotiations "regardless of whether this matter has been changed or corrected to the satisfaction of the union."

"I will insist that they do so and will see that they do so," he said.

The principal union negotiator, Machinists' Vice President Joseph W. Ramsey, said his people are prepared to meet today in joint session with the company representatives but added: "They may not like what we have to say."

Earlier Ramsey had said "we have been waiting all day for management even to talk to us."

William J. Curtin, chief spokesman for the airlines, declined comment, saying Reynolds' statement covered the situation.

Ramsey said Northwest has been soliciting military passengers in violation of an agreement not to do so. He added that if the airline does not discontinue this violation immediately, the union will "take appropriate steps."

Asked what these might be, Ramsey said: "I don't intend to say. Let them guess."

U.S. Warns Reds About Prisoners

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Hanoi was warned Saturday that the American public would demand decimation of North Viet Nam if the Communists should execute captured American pilots.

The warnings against such vengeance came from high-level U.S. officials while free world revulsion against the threat mounted. United Nations Secretary General Thant and British Prime Minister Harold Wilson joined the growing appeals to North Viet Nam not to carry out its plan.

President Johnson refrained from immediate comment. But he and other high officials were standing by for a special broadcast promised for late Saturday by Hanoi.

The broadcast was expected by some to be formal announcement that the Communists planned to try the American prisoners as war criminals.

URGES INTERVENTION

Wilson, in Moscow to make a new bid to get the Russians to help bring off Viet Nam peace talks, urged the Soviets to intervene with Hanoi to drop the trial plans.

Thant, who has frequently scored U.S. involvement in Viet Nam, appealed to the Communists to observe international agreements on treatment of prisoners of war. A Thant spokesman said the Burmese leader felt that trial of the pilots would be sure to escalate the war.

Both Sens. George D. Aiken, R-Vt., and Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., asserted that if the worst should occur—that the pilots were shot—the American public would demand total destruction of North Viet Nam. Russell added that this would be "completely justified."

U.S. Ambassador at large W. Averell Harriman one of the President's ace diplomats, declared that the trials would bring on serious and long-lasting consequences for North Viet Nam. Harriman was interviewed on the Voice of America.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey said the emotions that such trials would turn loose in this country "would be hard to control."

Wets Win Mississippi Liquor Vote

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) —Liquor won legalization in Mississippi for the first time since 1909 Saturday when two counties voted wet by wide majorities.

The elections in Harrison and Washington counties were the first in the state under the new liquor control act.

In Harrison, on the tourist-conscious Gulf Coast, the 1st Judicial District (Gulfport) vote was 7,069 for and 1,635 against in 35 of 38 precincts. The three missing precincts have less than 100 votes.

Harrison's 2nd Judicial District (Biloxi) voted 4,546 for legalization and 569 against in complete returns from 11 precincts.

In Washington County, Greenville), along the Mississippi River, legalization won 4,784 to 1,491 in returns from all 19 precincts.

Legal liquor, however, will not be available until about Aug. 1. It will take that long for retail applications to be processed by the Alcoholic Beverage Control (ABC) division, which will sell all wholesale liquor in the state.

3 Persons Killed At Lake Charles

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) -- Three persons died by violence in or near lounges in the Lake Charles area early Saturday.

The dead were Nathan Minor, 52; Mrs. Earline Vallorie, 25, both of Lake Charles, and Robert Wayne Trahan, 25, of Sulphur.

Sheriff Henry A. Reid Jr. said Minor was shot in a north Lake Charles cocktail lounge. Reid said Ora H. Gillyard, 39, described as Minor's wife, was jailed pending completion of an investigation.

Mrs. Vallorie was stabbed after she backed her car out of the parking lot of a lounge. Reid said Horace Joseph Latigue, 27, of Lake Charles, was sought by Louisiana and Texas officers.

Reid said he was informed that Trahan was shot by Homer Trahan, 27, no relation, a bouncer in a lounge on U.S. 90 west of Lake Charles. The sheriff said Homer Trahan was jailed, pending completion of the investigation.

In each case, said the sheriff, the principals had been involved in arguments prior to the violence.

Antihoneymoon Taken By Man

LONDON (UPI) —Viscount Weymouth, 34-year-old heir of the Marquis of Bath who wears his shoulder-length hair tied in back with a ribbon and favors ruffled shirts, left Saturday on an antihoneymoon.

He got antimarried last week. There was no ceremony, just a party to celebrate the fact that he now regards a 17-year-old Ceylonese model as his wife.

"I don't really have time to talk about it now," his lordship said Saturday. "We're off on our antihoneymoon to France."

His father, who lets lions roam the grounds of his stately home as a tourist attraction, had only a terse "no comment' on the antinuptials.

Nordic Beauty Wins Title But Declares She Is 'Sad'

By KAY BARTLETT

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A typical Nordic beauty, blonde, blue-eyed Margareta Arvidsson of Sweden, was crowned Miss Universe Saturday night, then wept bitterly.

"I am sad," she said as soon as the television cameras turned away. "If it is the same as here, I won't go through with it."

But she added, "I don't think it will be."

She referred to a rigorous week of rehearsing and to a year of touring the world that goes with the crown.

Asked what she did not like about her week here, she said, "I start work early in the morning. I work until late in the evening. Then up again early in the morning. I see nothing. Just work."

The 18-year-old photographer's model, who said her ambition is to be a bare-back rider in a circus, was picked from among 58 of the most beautiful girls in the world at the end of a week of pageantry.

First runner-up was Miss Finland, 19-year-old Satu Charlotta Ostring. Miss Thailand, Cheranand Savetanand of Bangkok, was second runner-up.

Miss India, Yasmin Daji, was third runner-up while Miss Israel, Aviva Israeli rounded out the top five.

"I'm going to go home and embrace my mother," said Miss Finland, "but I'm happy Miss Sweden won. She was a very popular girl and the perfect beauty. She was flawless.

"I thought she was going to win before the winners were announced because she was just so stunning."

Miss Thailand, said she was surprised to be among the top 15.

"My country did not expect me to be among the semifinalists," she said. "They just sent me to show the spirit of Thailand. Now I can bring honor to my country."

Miss India said the honor will not affect her plans to become a surgeon. "But," she said, "this is nice for a change."

Miss India, who wore the shoes of her chaperone, Emily Cirlin of Miami Beach, for good luck, slipped out of them as soon as she got backstage. "They brought me good luck, but they were a little too narrow," she said. "My feet hurt."

Miss Israel said she was not at all excited. "I am just tired." she said. "I just want to go to sleep."

Some Squeezed By Boycott

GRENADA, Miss. (AP) — The Negro civil rights boycott put a squeeze on some white mechants Saturday as the Grenada "blackout" clamped a little tighter.

"We have had reports that some folks have been threatened in order to make them stay out of a store," said Jim McRae Criss, Grenada County attorney.

"The thing that is hard to understand is that the ones they are hitting hardest are the ones that have been their friends."

Relocation Of Station Is Scheduled

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — The Coast Guard air station at Keesler Air Force Base will be relocated to Bates Field, Mobile, Ala.

Coast Guard Cmdr. John R. Butler said Saturday the move may be made in mid-October. Butler said Bates Field offers better runways and additional space.

The station, which has been at Keesler since World War II, is a search and rescue unit, equipped with three amphibious planes. There are 33 enlisted men and 12 officers with the unit.

Keesler, the Coast Guard air station has only one runway, and at times when there were strong crosswinds, Butler said, flying was restricted.

Youth Brags Of Taking Girl's Body

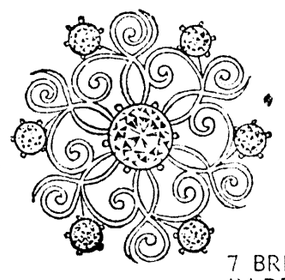

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — An 18-year-old youth was arrested Saturday after reportedly bragging about the bizarre theft of a young girl's body from a funeral home two years ago.

Polcie Chief Kenneth B. Chamberlain said Carlos Savilla, of Evanston, was arrested at a dance in nearby Deerfield after two teen-age girls told detectives he had boasted to them about the crime.

Theresa Koertgen, 14, of Skokie died July 22, 1964 of a cerebral hemorrhage. Two days later her body, clad in a yellow dress she had worn to her elementary school graduation, was lifted from its casket in the Haben Funeral Home.

Tourist Day May Result In Settlers

COLUMBIA (Special)—A New York soldier and his wife said their arrest by Town Marshal Charles Thompson may ultimately end in their setting here.

Sp-4 (U. S. Army) and Mrs. Van Buren of Lockport, N. Y. were guests of the town of Columbia as the town observed tourist appreciation day.

The couple was apprehended Friday as they passed through here and taken to Town Hall where Mayor James Sherman made them honorary citizens of Columbia.

They were en route to Ft. Polk, where Van Buren, 25, had been assigned after a recent tour in Viet Nam.

Officials took the couple on a tour of Caldwell parish which included Gov. John J. McKeithen's home.

After a luncheon — during which their car was gassed and serviced — the couple told Mayor Sherman and other townspeople that they had often though of and talked about moving to the South.

"As it turned out, we're certainly going to consider Columbia", they said.

Tourist Day May Result In Settlers

COLUMBIA (Special)—A New York soldier and his wife said their arrest by Town Marshal Charles Thompson may ultimately end in their setting here.

Sp-4 (U. S. Army) and Mrs. Van Buren of Lockport, N. Y. were guests of the town of Columbia as the town observed tourist appreciation day.

The couple was apprehended Friday as they passed through here and taken to Town Hall where Mayor James Sherman made them honorary citizens of Columbia.

They were en route to Ft. Polk, where Van Buren, 25, had been assigned after a recent tour in Viet Nam.

Officials took the couple on a tour of Caldwell parish which included Gov. John J. McKeithen's home.

After a luncheon — during which their car was gassed and serviced — the couple told Mayor Sherman and other townspeople that they had often though of and talked about moving to the South.

"As it turned out, we're certainly going to consider Columbia", they said.

No Warning On Gas Sale Is Foreseen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gas facilities totaling some $100 million "will be sold to the highest bidder with no advance warning given the public," an attorney representing three Louisiana municipalities said here Saturday.

John T. Miller Jr., a utilities and anti-trust lawyer representing Lake Charles, Crowley and Sulpher, lodged the charge against United Gas Co. and Pennzoil.

Miller said perhaps 100 municipalities in Louisiana will not open their eyes to the situaton until it is too late.

Under Louisiana law, Miller said, a municipality may cut its public facilities, but "they aren't being given the chance."

The attorney said the $100 million transfer is the result of some "high financial wizardry."

He said in December 1965, Pennzoil borrowed some $200 million to buy 42 per cent, a controlling interest of United Gas Co.

This move, Miller explained, made Pennzoil a holding company because of United's public facility holdings.

"Pennzoil is now trying to get out by selling the public facilities to the highest bidder," Miller said.

He said the Security Exchange Commission on June 27 approved Pennzoil's plan to sell United as facilities in 392 communities in four states serving some 660,000 private customers.

Bids on the facilities were opened Friday, and Lake Charles, Crowley and Sulpher filed petitions with the SEC to ask reconsideration of the June 27 approval.

"I understand a large number of communities are interested but have not been well informed of the impact of United's proposal on them," Miller said.

The municipalities fear higher rates for their citizens using United's gas facilities, and there is an additional fear that the firm getting control of the facilities will sell them to municipalities at an increased rate.

The three Louisiana municipalities that filed suits propose to buy their local gas facilities directly from United.

FIREMEN SPRAY foam on one of three Colorado and Southern tank cars which derailed at Berthoud, Colo., Friday night. The tankers contained a total of 30,000 gallons of gasoline. Long Tells Of Move On Shipbuilding

NEW ORLEANS (AP) —Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., said Saturday that President Johnson has asked Vice President Hubert Humphrey to accept the responsibility for developing constructive policies for improvement and strengthening of American flag shipping and shipbuilding.

Long did not elaborate on procedures. He spoke at the launching of the $12 million S. S. Velma Lykes at Avondale Shipyards on the Mississippi River.

The $12 million Velma Lykes is one of the nation's most highly automated merchant ships. It will serve mainly in the Far East trade routes. The ship is 540 feet long, has a deadweight of 14,000 tons, and a speed of more than 20 knots.

The ship was christened by Miss Pamela Rust Long of Baton Rouge, daughter of the senator.

Exchange Of Prisoners May Be Best Solution

WASHINGTON (AP) — For captured American fliers under threat of execution in North Viet Nam, the peculiar circumstances of this unorthodox war close a classic avenue to safety —the exchange of prisoners.

Such exchanges have been worked out from time immemorial in wars declared and undeclared. But they are impossible now because:

—Hanoi does not concede that it has any fighting men in South Viet Nam — to do so would support U.S. charges of North Vietnamese aggression.

—Since it does not acknowledge that any of its men are fighting, it cannot recognize the existence of any prisoners.

—Thus, so far as official Hanoi is concerned, there is no basis for any talk of exchanges.

The situation with regard to prisoners taken by South Vietnamese and American and allied forces in the South Viet Nam fighting is an anomalous one.

All such captives have been turned over to the South Vietnamese so U.S. forces have no official connection with them.

This official attitude is maintained to such an extent that efforts to determine at the Pentagon how many prisoners the South Vietnamese hold and to obtain a breakdown of them into Viet Cong and North Vietnamese have been fruitless.

The official Defense Department answer has been that the prisoners are a concern of the South Vietnamese.

Presumably, however, if Hanoi were to reverse course and acknowledge its role in the fighting — a highly unlikely development at present — arrangements could be made to work out exchanges.

Should Hanoi go through with its threats to execute American fliers as war criminals, it is possible that there might be some cililian demand for retailiation against North Vietnamese prisoners. But the United States if formerly committed observing the Geneva conventions on warfare and there is no prospect that such eye-for-an-eye retaliation would even be considered.

Air Force Plane Crash Is Reported

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — An Air Force C123 with nine persons aboard crashed near Cape Lisburne, about 600 miles northwest of Anchorage Saturday, the Air Force said.

A spokesman for the Alaskan Air Command said first reports indicated there were no known survivors.

Personnel at the cape were near the scene checking for survivors. An Air Force C130 from Elmendorf Air Force Base was sent to the area, but had to turn back because of bad weather.

The Air Force said the plane crashed in the water about 200 yards from shore.

The nine aboard included passengers and crew. Names were not immediately released.

Cape Lisburne is on the Arctic Ocean.

WILBUR KEKO
. . . Heads United Givers

Keko Heads Sterlington 67 'Givers

Wilbur Keko, plant manager of Commercial Solvents has accepted the position of Sterlington Area Chairman in the 1967 United Givers Fund campaign, it was announced by Charles Bird, general campaign chairman.

Keko has long been associated with the United Fund activities before coming to this area. During 1961, he was general campaign chairman of the United Fund of Virgo County, Terre Haute, Ind. In 1962, he was elected president of the board of directors and in 1963 served as chairman of the board.

As Sterlington Area UGF chairman, Keko will be in charge of organizing the recruiting, training, and soliciting efforts of volunteer workers in three major divisions of the campaign: Advance Gifts, Large Business, and Small Business. These three divisions are in the process of completing their organization requirements and will be set to begin solicitation in September. Keko also served in this same capacity in the 1966 campaign.

"We are indeed fortunate in having Wilbur Keko join our campaign leaders for his past experience will greatly benefit the community efforts to meet the goal this year. His wholehearted and faithful support of the United Way is gratefully acknowledge," Bird said.

Keko is presently a member of the Grace Episcopal Church, the Monroe Rotary Club, the Bayou DeSiard Country Club, the American Chemical Society, and a member of the board of trustees of the Little Theatre.

A graduate of Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., he joined Commercial Solvents in Terre Haute, Ind., as a chemist where he worked in research and production, before becoming plant manager. He was transferred to the Sterlington operation of Commercial Solvents as plant manager in March, 1964.

Mr. and Mrs. Keko are the parents of two children, Randall, a graduate of Indiana State University, and Susan, a junior at Neville High School. They reside at 3610 Forsythe, Monroe.

Keko commented, "People helping people is an American tradition and September and October are the traditional months when communities throughout Ouachita Parish unite their efforts to raise money for voluntary health, recreation, and welfare services. This united effort saves money and manpower—and provides help for those who need it in a businesslike, efficient way. I am glad to participate in the UGF campaign through which we can build a better community for ourselves and our children."

The campaign funds raised are to provide for 13 member agencies which comprise the United Givers Fund of Ouachita Parish.

Klein Slated To Appear At Session

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Julius Klein, high-powered Chicago public relations merchant whose insistent demands on their long friendship played a vital part in charges of misconduct against Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, will detail his dealings with the Connecticut Democrat to the Senate Ethics Committee next Tuesday.

The committee, somewhat reluctantly, summoned the 64 year old Klein who is a registered foreign agent and self-professed intimate of the political mighty, to cap the first phase of the Dodd investigation.

Klein's testimony as an agent for West German business interests is expected to complete the committee's inquiry into his relationship with Dodd.

Both Klein and Dodd have denied any wrong-doing. Sen. Stephen M. Young, D-Ohio, charged this week that the law firm defending Dodd had attempted to intimidate anti-Dodd witnesses. He called for a Senate inquiry and demanded to know whether the FBI had—or would—look into the charges.

Additional hearings are not expected to begin before August. These will deal with allegations that Dodd pocketed for his own use huge campaign contributions and that he accepted favors from a Connecticut firm with a government contract.

"We are indeed fortunate in having Wilbur Keko join our campaign leaders for his past experience will greatly benefit the community efforts to meet the goal this year. His wholehearted and faithful support of the United Way is gratefully acknowledge," Bird said.

Keko is presently a member of the Grace Episcopal Church, the Monroe Rotary Club, the Bayou DeSiard Country Club, the American Chemical Society, and a member of the board of trustees of the Little Theatre.

A graduate of Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., he joined Commercial Solvents in Terre Haute, Ind., as a chemist where he worked in research and production, before becoming plant manager. He was transferred to the Sterlington operation of Commercial Solvents as plant manager in March, 1964.

Mr. and Mrs. Keko are the parents of two children, Randall, a graduate of Indiana State University, and Susan, a junior at Neville High School. They reside at 3610 Forsythe, Monroe.

Keko commented, "People helping people is an American tradition and September and October are the traditional months when communities throughout Ouachita Parish unite their efforts to raise money for voluntary health, recreation, and welfare services. This united effort saves money and manpower—and provides help for those who need it in a businesslike, efficient way. I am glad to participate in the UGF campaign through which we can build a better community for ourselves and our children."

The campaign funds raised are to provide for 13 member agencies which comprise the United Givers Fund of Ouachita Parish.

Klein Slated To Appear At Session

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Julius Klein, high-powered Chicago public relations merchant whose insistent demands on their long friendship played a vital part in charges of misconduct against Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, will detail his dealings with the Connecticut Democrat to the Senate Ethics Committee next Tuesday.

The committee, somewhat reluctantly, summoned the 64 year old Klein who is a registered foreign agent and self-professed intimate of the political mighty, to cap the first phase of the Dodd investigation.

Klein's testimony as an agent for West German business interests is expected to complete the committee's inquiry into his relationship with Dodd.

Both Klein and Dodd have denied any wrong-doing. Sen. Stephen M. Young, D-Ohio, charged this week that the law firm defending Dodd had attempted to intimidate anti-Dodd witnesses. He called for a Senate inquiry and demanded to know whether the FBI had—or would—look into the charges.

Additional hearings are not expected to begin before August. These will deal with allegations that Dodd pocketed for his own use huge campaign contributions and that he accepted favors from a Connecticut firm with a government contract.

Lone Survivor Silent; Man Identified

CHICAGO (AP) — Corazon Amurao received with silent relief Saturday the news that the killer of her fellow student nurses had been identified.

Miss Amurao, who escaped the butchery by hiding under a bed, still is under a physician's care in South Chicago Community Hospital.

A.S. Daniel, executive director of the hospital informed her that police had announced the killer had been identified through fingerprints as Richard B. Speck.

A hospital spokesman said Miss Amurao "actually didn't say anything at all, but the change of expression on her face showed great relief."

Daniel visited Miss Amurao in her hospital room, where she has been recovering from the shock of her brush with death.

A police guard is stationed at her door and a spokesman said Miss Amurao "won't be able to talk to anyone for at least a week."

She can and does, of course, talk with investigators and hospital officials, but reporters, photographers and others have not been permitted to see her.

Asks Federal Aid

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)— Mississippi has asked for some $1.7 in federal funds for a "dollar-matching" program to improve airports in the state.

The Mississippi Aeronautics Commission seeks the funds from the Federal Aviation Agency's aid to airports program.

In addition to improvements at many Mississippi airports, the grant would build a new airport in Hancock County for the Mississippi Test Facility and another near McComb.

SOVIET PREMIER Alexei Kosygin, center, welcomes British Prime Minister Harold Wilson in Moscow Saturday on Wilson's arrival for talks with Soviet leaders. (AP Wirephoto by cable from Moscow)

Identification News Sweeps Vicinity

CHICAGO (AP) — News of the identification of the slayer of eight student nurses swept Saturday through the placid neighborhood where they lived.

Just fifty-seven hours earlier the same area had been stunned by the news of the mass murders.

Edward Zavala, a neighbor, talked with a reporter in front of the house where the girls had been killed one by one. Zavala, whose wife is a nurse at the South Chicago Community Hospital, where the victims worked, reported the neighborhood is "very much relieved."

A policeman on guard duty in front of the town house unit where the young women lived at 2319 E. 100th St., reported that many men, women and children had come to look at the house of death.

Peter Sieracki, another neighbor, hailed the news as "wonderful."

"I've never locked my screen door," he said. "But we've been locking it the past two days."

Wilson In Moscow To Make New Peace Try

MOSCOW (AP) — British Prime Minister Harold Wilson arrived in Moscow on Saturday to make new efforts at bringing peace to Viet Nam despite the failure here of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India.

Mrs. Gandhi, who left an hour before Wilson arrived, told a news conference that Soviet leaders had turned down her proposal to reconvene the 1954 Geneva peace conference.

Soviet Premier Alexi N. Kosygin, talking separate to reporters, said he explained to her "our position — that American agression should be stopped and all foreign troops withdrawn."

The Soviet premier said "that is the only possible solution to Viet Nam."

It is one that the United States has repeatedly rejected.

Wilson announced his three-day Moscow visit after American bombings of oil facilities in the Hanoi and Haiphong areas produced Soviet warnings that the Vietnamese war had entered a new and dangerous phase. Left-wingers in Wilson's Labor party had been showing increasing discontent over his firm support for the United States in Viet Nam.

So far, the Kremlin has indicated no interest in talking peace in Viet Nam with Wilson and has treated his visit as if the sole purpose were his tour today of the British Trade Fair.

The prime minister was given a minimal welcome, ostensibly because he is making a working visit. Kosygin turned out to greet him and a British spokesman said later the leaders talked for 45 minutes riding in from the airport.

But there were no speeches, no ceremonies, no crowds and no flags along the route into the city.

British sources said the prime minister will spend today at the trade fair, designed to promote British exports and help the country's troubled economy.

Wilson is scheduled to talk with the Soviet premier on Monday and leave either that night or the next morning. An economic crisis has shaped up in Britain and he said before leaving that his mind was mainly on that.

Wilson has not ruled out that he might be able to achieve something toward peace in Viet Nam.

Lee Parker Dead At 86; Rites Today

Lee G. Parker, 86, retired policeman and detective of the Monroe Police Department, died in St. Joseph's Home Saturday afternoon after a long illness.

Mr. Parker, a native of Brandon, Miss., served on the Monroe Police force for 27 years. His service included detective work. He retired in 1948.

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. today at Mulhearn Funeral Home Chapel in Monroe with the Rev. Walter Mangham officiating.

He is survived by two brothers, Harry B. Parker, Monroe, and Quitman Parker, Brandon, Miss.; and one sister, Mrs. Ina Sing Sing, Brandon, Miss.

Pallbearers will be Frank Kirby, V. W. Cummins, Jack Oglesbee, Allen Corbin, Floyd Van and H. B. Johnson.

Collects Garbage

PITTSBURGH (UPI) —Alexander J. Jaffurs, mayor of suburban Wilkinsburg who once was a quarterback at the University of Pennsylvania, called the signals Saturday for his team of garbage collectors —from the sidelines.

It was Borough Manager Richard Griffith's turn to carry the ball—er, garbage.

Acting to prevent a smelly situation after 20 refuse collectors went on strike, Jaffurs personally collected the garbage Friday.

Medicare Problem Said Deadlocked

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Medical care for up to 130,000 needy persons in Louisiana depended Saturday on whether sharp differences could be worked out out between private hospitals and the Department of Public Welfare.

Both sides indicated a deadlock may be broken over spending of federal and state funds on the disabled, the blind and dependent children.

Until recently Louisiana hospitals massively resisted the new federal program sometimes called "Medicaid," which is administered under Title 19 of the Social Security Act.

They refused to go along, even temporarily, with the state welfare department plan to provide a maximum $35 a day for medical services through private hospitals for children and the needy under 65.

This program is not to be confused with Medicare, the plan which provides medical services for the elderly needy and other elderly persons who buy hospital insurance through social security.

In an interview, Welfare Commissioner Garland Bonin said officials of the Louisiana Hospital Association agreed to give his department until Sept. 1 to find ways to pay more toward charity patients' care before refusing to accept them.

Top level conferences were held between the association and welfare officials over their differences.

The upshot was an agreement that President H. E. Hamilton of the association would name a committee to work with Bonin and his department experts to determine how much more than the maximum $35 a day would be paid by the department on charity patients' care.

Hamilton named as chairman Lloyd Verrett of Lake Charles and as members Clifford Lofberg, New Orleans, Frank Jerome, Ruston, and Joe Allen, Shreveport.

Four hospitals, Baton Rouge General, Lincoln General in Ruston, Seventh Ward in Tangipahoa, and West Jefferson General in Marrero, gave notice they could not accept only $35 a day for such welfare patients, even for 60 days. They said they would refer their charity cases to state hospitals.

Bonin said 47 Louisiana hospitals figure their daily costs per patient at more than $35.

"I feel confident," Bonin said, "that we are going to be able to work it out so these can be paid more."

Bonin said, for one thing, the new federally supported program had not been as big at the start as expected, and in the first month the department was finding some unspent money.

The Verett Committee, meanwhile, is scheduled to meet Thursday and Friday in New Orleans during a summer workshop of the hospital association. Later it will get together with Bonin's department concerning costs.

Questioned about the program and its problems, Hamilton said hospitals felt outraged at the way the government was treating them.

He said the government agreed to pay basic costs in the allied program on medical care for the aged, although it excluded some costs claimed by hospitals.

On the other hand, he said, the medical air program administered by welfare under Title 19 arbitrarily used a repayment figure far less than the costs of many hospitals, and refused to allow these costs to be absorbed from one system to the other.

This, in effect, meant the government was shortchanging private hospitals in welfare cases and requiring that they pass the added costs on to paying patients, he said. The government, for instance, has ruled out bad debts as a cost that may be shared by the funds for welfare patients.

"We are saying," Hamilton said, "that we can't continue to take the welfare and other type patients at below cost, and at the same time take the medicare patients without contributing other costs to them."

Supposing, he said, half the patients in a hospital would be paying only their actual minimum costs, and the other half was paying well below costs.

"The hospitals would be bankrupt, immediately," Hamilton said. "This puts us in a tragic financial position."

Bonin and Hamilton said many Louisiana hospitals have daily costs per patient less than the $35 ceiling which stems from an earlier welfare hospitalization program.

The larger hospitals were hit by the limit. Hamilton said these have cost factors not present in smaller hospitals, such as heart surgery and other specialty units.

Louisiana has about 260,000 persons eligible either for Medicare or Madicaid, half in each category.

The department children under 18 and their families eligible for welfare hospital services total some 106,000. The disabled come to over 20,000 and the blind over 2,000.

All would have to go to state hospitals or do without hospital care unless the welfare department and the private hospitals got together on how much of their costs would be paid by the government.

Germany Reminded Of War

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI) — Two apparently unrelated border incidents within hours of each other have reminded Germans — and the world — that the cold war is ever-present in this divided country.

The game is still just as deadly, the stakes just as high.

First, a Soviet helicopter crossed from East into West Germany Friday and forced a U.S. helicopter to the ground at gunpoint. U.S. authorities lodged an immediate and vigorous protest.

A short time later, an armed East German patrol boat swooped on a disabled West German customs craft on the Elbe River, still a disputed border point two decades after World War. II.

With drawn guns and supported by machine-gun-toting East German troops on their own bank, the Communists tried to board the Western vessel. Only sharp protest from the West Germans kept them off.

But they held the Western boat immobile at midstream for four hours before moving off. No explanation was given. None will probably be forthcoming.

Coincidence? Perhaps, but then again, as veteran cold war observers are quick to point out, maybe not.

First, it was only a week ago that the Communist Warsaw Pact defense alliance—the Eastern bloc's answer to NATO—capped four days of meetings in Bucharest with a renewed and especially slashing attack on America's role in the Viet Nam war, most notably the bombing attacks near Hanoi and Haiphong.

It was during this meeting, attended by top leaders from all East European Communist nations except Peking-leaning Albania, that the Warsaw Pact members unanimously voted to send volunteers to fight for the Hanoi regime if requested.

Their resolution came amid conflicting reports and specula lation—and Pentagon reassurance—about the actual size of America's troop withdrawals from its vital West German commands due to increased Viet Nam commitments.

Despite repeated Washington denials, reports in Germany persist that the United States is pulling far more men out of West Germany—and replacing them with far fewer—than it wants to let on.

Along the East-West border, twisting its mine and barbed-wire-stitched way 868 miles through the heart of a land, death continues to lie patiently in wait for those who will court her.

Supposing, he said, half the patients in a hospital would be paying only their actual minimum costs, and the other half was paying well below costs.

"The hospitals would be bankrupt, immediately," Hamilton said. "This puts us in a tragic financial position."

Bonin and Hamilton said many Louisiana hospitals have daily costs per patient less than the $35 ceiling which stems from an earlier welfare hospitalization program.

The larger hospitals were hit by the limit. Hamilton said these have cost factors not present in smaller hospitals, such as heart surgery and other specialty units.

Louisiana has about 260,000 persons eligible either for Medicare or Madicaid, half in each category.

The department children under 18 and their families eligible for welfare hospital services total some 106,000. The disabled come to over 20,000 and the blind over 2,000.

All would have to go to state hospitals or do without hospital care unless the welfare department and the private hospitals got together on how much of their costs would be paid by the government.

Germany Reminded Of War

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI) — Two apparently unrelated border incidents within hours of each other have reminded Germans — and the world — that the cold war is ever-present in this divided country.

The game is still just as deadly, the stakes just as high.

First, a Soviet helicopter crossed from East into West Germany Friday and forced a U.S. helicopter to the ground at gunpoint. U.S. authorities lodged an immediate and vigorous protest.

A short time later, an armed East German patrol boat swooped on a disabled West German customs craft on the Elbe River, still a disputed border point two decades after World War. II.

With drawn guns and supported by machine-gun-toting East German troops on their own bank, the Communists tried to board the Western vessel. Only sharp protest from the West Germans kept them off.

But they held the Western boat immobile at midstream for four hours before moving off. No explanation was given. None will probably be forthcoming.

Coincidence? Perhaps, but then again, as veteran cold war observers are quick to point out, maybe not.

First, it was only a week ago that the Communist Warsaw Pact defense alliance—the Eastern bloc's answer to NATO—capped four days of meetings in Bucharest with a renewed and especially slashing attack on America's role in the Viet Nam war, most notably the bombing attacks near Hanoi and Haiphong.

It was during this meeting, attended by top leaders from all East European Communist nations except Peking-leaning Albania, that the Warsaw Pact members unanimously voted to send volunteers to fight for the Hanoi regime if requested.

Their resolution came amid conflicting reports and speculation—and Pentagon reassurance—about the actual size of America's troop withdrawals from its vital West German commands due to increased Viet Nam commitments.

Despite repeated Washington denials, reports in Germany persist that the United States is pulling far more men out of West Germany—and replacing them with far fewer—than it wants to let on.

Along the East-West border, twisting its mine and barbed-wire-stitched way 868 miles through the heart of a land, death continues to lie patiently in wait for those who will court her.

18 Local, Area Scouts Leave For Rugged Ranch

Philmont Scout Ranch in New Mexico is the destination for 24 Explorers, older Boy Scouts, and adult leaders who left Monroe at 8 Saturday morning for a 12-day rugged camping experience.

The Philmont Scout Ranch, which celebrates its 28th anniversary this year according to Arnold Fisher, group adult leader, is a national camping area for the Boy Scout movement. It comprises 137,221 acres of rugged western country on the slopes of the Sangre de Cristo Range of the Rocky Mountain chain.

Arnold Fisher is assisted in the group leadership by Larce Holder of Farmerville. Robert James of Farmerville is the junior adult leader. Bob Cuthbert of Rayville is senior boy leader. This is young Cuthbert's second trip to Philmont. Assistant boy leader and correspondent is Harold Evans of Monroe.

Other members of the contingent are Dalton Miller and Tal Lanius of Troop 24, Waterproof; Mike Taylor of Troop 77, Sicily Island; Larry Barfield of Troop 17, Ferriday; William W. Talley and Joel Edgar Avery of Troop 22, Jonesboro; Leslie Furr of Troop 10, West Monroe; Marc Rabun, Noel James, T. T. Fields Jr., Howard McMurrian, Jimmy Hall, Steve Post, and Leonard Hicks, of Troop 16, Farmerville; Lavid Harris, Calvin Beason, and Danny Galyean of Troop 39, Oak Ridge; Keith Webb, David Simmons; of Troop 7, Monroe; and Bill Smith of Troop 32, Monroe.

The Philmont Scout Ranch was the gift of Waite Phillips in 1938 and 1941. The grant included land, a residence, ranch buildings, livestock, and operating ranch equipment. To help develop and maintain the Philmont Ranch, he also presented to the Boy Scouts of America as an endowment the Philtower Building, a 23-story modern office building in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Philmont Ranch is rich in wild game, according to Fisher. It has deer, elk, coyote, antelope, mountain lion, buffalo, wild turkey, and bear. Its hills and canyons teem with bird life. Its flashing streams abound with game fish. There is a wilderness of trees, flowers, grasses, and the timeless record of the rocks is a lesson in geology.

This summer about 18,000 Explorers and older Boy Scouts will test their camping skills on 12-day expeditions. They will camp out on the trail, carrying their own equipment and cooking their food. Horseback riding, burro packing, and wilderness survival are combined into these expeditions.

Explorers from all parts of the nation participate in pioneering treks, mountain climbing, fishing, horseback riding, geological explorations, field sports, and many other acitvities.

The tour of the local group will also include visits to Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico and sightseeing in Old Mexico.

VFW Awards High Honor To Local Man

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (Special) — The Commander of District 14 of the Louisiana Veterans of Foreign Wars, Alvis E. Gossett, 401 Grayling Ln., Monroe, has been selected to receive the highest honor awarded by the national organization, according to VFW Commander - in - Chief Andy Borg.

Gossett was named All American District Commander in recognition of his success in increasing total V.F.W. membership within his district and expanding all other programs sponsored by the national organization. There are 900 V.F.W. districts and Gossett was one of only 11 district commanders selected to receive this honor.

In making the announcement, Borg emphasized the importance of membership to the work of the organization. "In every American city, town and village where there is a VFW post we have rallied support for the servicemen in Viet Nam; we engage in community service work, rehabilitation and youth activities; we promote patriotism. It should be remembered, however, that none of these programs would be possible without a strong and growing membership to back them up.

"It is the ambition of every officer on every level of our organization to be named an All-American Commander. Mr. Gossett richly deserves this honor because he has done a conspicuously fine job in his district, and, in so doing, has demonstrated the highest qualities of leadership."

Men's Dorm Life Brings Top Grades

RUSTON (Special) — Life in the men's dormitories at Louisiana Tech consistently is conducive to good scholarship, it is pointed out by E. S. Foster, dean of men.

In a summer-time analysis of grades for the past spring semester conducted by Thomas D. Allen, director of men's housing, it was learned that of all the single men attending Tech those living in the campus residence halls averaged 2.243 out of a possible 4.000 points.

That was the highest scholastic average of any group of single men. A similar distinction was noted in a study of men's grades for last fall and in other semesters.

The recent study, involving the grades of 3,781 men, shows that married men students outscored all other men's groups with an average of 2.410.

Other statistics were as follows:

Men students living at home in Ruston, 2,189; fraternity house students, 2.100; drive-in men students, 2.084, and men students renting rooms in Ruston, 2.032.

The average of all men students for the spring semester was 2.144, the dean of men's office reported.

Men's dormitories at Tech this fall will accommodate 2,495 students. This includes the John D. Caruthers dormitory for men, to be ready for occupancy in September, which will house 602 men students.

Grambling Man Set For Harvard

GRAMBLING (Special) — Freddie Wright, senior history major at Grambling College, is enrolled at Harvard Law School in Cambridge, Mass., in a special program designed to encourage Negro college students to consider law as a possible career.

Purpose of the eight-week program is to help students find out whether they have abilities and interests which indicate law should be considered as a career choice, and to give students a chance to assess their capacity for this kind of work while testing their ability to successfully handle problems which law students and lawyers must meet.

No Inspection

PHILADELPHIA Miss. (UPI) —Neshoba County General Hospital Administrator Lamar G. Salter refused to allow another inspection of his 82-bed hospital by Department of Health, Education and Welfare officials Saturday.

Receives Grant

HOMER (Special) — Claiborne Community Action Association Inc. has received a grant of $13,500, Harold Hollenshead, executive director, announced.

The grant is to make a survey of poverty conditions in the parish and to devise programs to attack poverty, he explained.

Top Pupils Named At Debate Camp

RUSTON (Special) — Four top pupils participating in the seventh annual debate camp at Louisiana Tech have been announced by Dr. E. R. Minchew, head of the speech department, which sponsors the program.

The four leading debaters are David Middleton of Woodlawn High School, Shreveport; Kenny Peoples of Ruston High School; and Margaret Micholet and Suzanne Adams, both of St. Mary's Dominican School of New Orleans.

These four were among 16 students selected on the basis of practice debating at the camp.

The other 12 leaders included Kathy Peres of St. Mary's Dominican; Shelly Schroeder of Holy Angels, New Orleans; Jim Hazel, Marilee Cole and David Kelly of Broadmoore, Baton Rouge; Craig Latimer, Lafayette High School; Clark Fuller, John Helm, Jr., John Manion Roy Raspanti and Richard Richoux, all of Cor Jesu, New Orleans; and Barbara Davies, Archbishop Blenk of New Orleans.

The debate camp, attracting 86 students from 30 high schools, began on July 5 and ended Saturday.

The topic for discussion was the national debate topic which is "Resolved, That the Foreign Aid Program of the United States Should Be Limited to Non-Military Assistance."

Excavations

BEERSHEBA, Israel (AP) — Three Byzantine underground chambers of the 5th and 6th centuries were unearthed in excavations here for a new bus station, Mayor Eliahu Navi announced.

Winn Demos Pick Commissioners

WINNFIELD (Special)—The Winn Parish Democratic Executive Committee met Saturday and drew names of 155 voters to serve as commissioners at the 31 voting precincts in Winn at the Aug. 13 Democratic primary election.

According to Winn Parish Registrar of Voters, Mrs. Edna W. Crain, 8,334 Democrats are eligible to vote in the upcoming primary election.

Of the 8,334 total, 6,944 are white and 1,390 are Negroes.

During the past two years, white registration has had a gain of 49 while Negro registration total was 217.

USL Changing Housing Rules

LAFAYETTE (Special) — With early registration for the fall semester getting underway Monday at the University of Southwestern Louisiana, prospective students are being reminded of changes in housing regulations and fees for special students.

The early registration period will end on August 10. Prospective students to USL are urged to take advantage of the early registration period to avoid possible closed sections and other delays later. Approximately 10,000 students are expected to register at USL this fall.

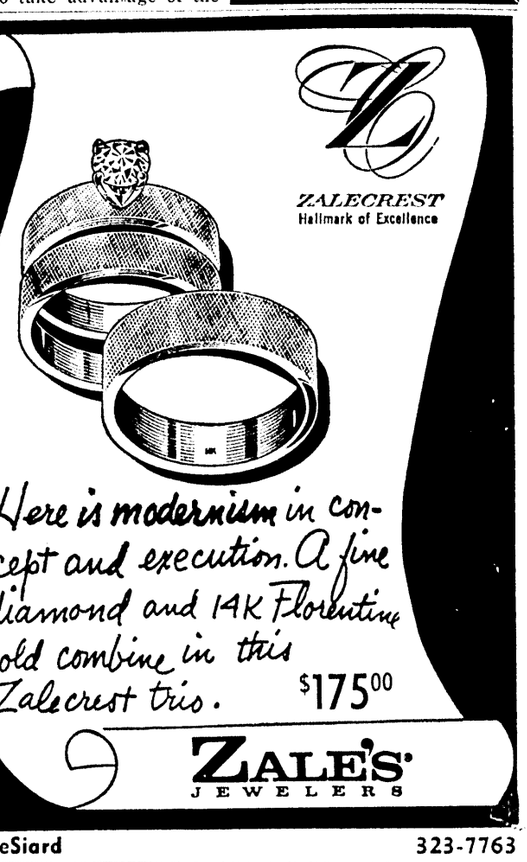

United Gas Takes Bids On Property

SHREVEPORT (Special) — United Gas Corp. announced bids had been received for the purpose of its distribution properties and that it will probably take several weeks to evaluate them.

Ed Parkes, president of United Gas, made the announcement. United Gas did not disclose the number of bids received or the names of the bidders.

Deadline for bids on the retail distribution system, which serves almost 400 communities in Texas, Louisiana, Florida and Mississippi was July 15. Bids were requested in a public invitation issued April 22, 1966.

Men's Dorm Life Brings Top Grades

RUSTON (Special) — Life in the men's dormitories at Louisiana Tech consistently is conducive to good scholarship, it is pointed out by E. S. Foster, dean of men.

In a summer-time analysis of grades for the past spring semester conducted by Thomas D. Allen, director of men's housing, it was learned that of all the single men attending Tech those living in the campus residence halls averaged 2.243 out of a possible 4.000 points.

That was the highest scholastic average of any group of single men. A similar distinction was noted in a study of men's grades for last fall and in other semesters.

The recent study, involving the grades of 3,781 men, shows that married men students outscored all other men's groups with an average of 2.410.

Other statistics were as follows:

Men students living at home in Ruston, 2,189; fraternity house students, 2.100; drive-in men students, 2.084, and men students renting rooms in Ruston, 2.032.

The average of all men students for the spring semester was 2.144, the dean of men's office reported.

Men's dormitories at Tech this fall will accommodate 2,495 students. This includes the John D. Caruthers dormitory for men, to be ready for occupancy in September, which will house 602 men students.

Grambling Man Set For Harvard

GRAMBLING (Special) — Freddie Wright, senior history major at Grambling College, is enrolled at Harvard Law School in Cambridge, Mass., in a special program designed to encourage Negro college students to consider law as a possible career.

Purpose of the eight-week program is to help students find out whether they have abilities and interests which indicate law should be considered as a career choice, and to give students a chance to assess their capacity for this kind of work while testing their ability to successfully handle problems which law students and lawyers must meet.

The grant is to make a survey of poverty conditions in the parish and to devise programs to attack poverty, he explained.

Top Pupils Named At Debate Camp

RUSTON (Special) — Four top pupils participating in the seventh annual debate camp at Louisiana Tech have been announced by Dr. E. R. Minchew, head of the speech department, which sponsors the program.

The four leading debaters are David Middleton of Woodlawn High School, Shreveport; Kenny Peoples of Ruston High School; and Margaret Micholet and Suzanne Adams, both of St. Mary's Dominican School of New Orleans.

These four were among 16 students selected on the basis of practice debating at the camp.

The other 12 leaders included Kathy Peres of St. Mary's Dominican; Shelly Schroeder of Holy Angels, New Orleans; Jim Hazel, Marilee Cole and David Kelly of Broadmoore, Baton Rouge; Craig Latimer, Lafayette High School; Clark Fuller, John Helm, Jr., John Manion Roy Raspanti and Richard Richoux, all of Cor Jesu, New Orleans; and Barbara Davies, Archbishop Blenk of New Orleans.

The debate camp, attracting 86 students from 30 high schools, began on July 5 and ended Saturday.

The topic for discussion was the national debate topic which is "Resolved, That the Foreign Aid Program of the United States Should Be Limited to Non-Military Assistance."

Monroe Singers View Past Year

As official ambassadors for Monroe, the 40-voice Monroe Civic Singers are looking back upon their first year with pride and looking to the future with apprehension.

In looking back, says director Dennis Cooke, the singers realize the worst is behind them but the future still poses some difficult problems. One of the greatest problems, Cooke says, springs from the very nature of the organization.

If they are to reflect the goodwill and community spirit of Monroe, they cannot afford to be anything less than the best, both in professional appearance and in performing talent, Cooke emphasizes.

The Civic Singers hope one day to expand to 75 voices and to be able to travel in the North Louisiana area to promote the city and its new Civic Center. Cooke feels that the Monroe success story needs to be celebrated throughout the state, and with an impressive advertisement.

So that they would be able to make a uniform appearance, the singers purchased gowns and jackets with funds received from their premiere concert and with contributions made by the singers themselves. But the singers need more sheet music, Cooke points out, and they need to erase the remaining debts made during a year of organizational work.

OUTLET FOR TALENT

The Monroe Civic Singers formed in June, 1965, to promote Monroe and to provide cultural entertainment for its citizens. Their purpose was to represent Monroe with distinction at various events to be held at the new Civic Center.

Equally important was the goal of the organization to provide an outlet for area talent. It hoped to attract talented singers who would find pleasure in singing with an organized group under professional direction.

Director Cooke has a background in music education and his wife, Fran, is an accomplished pianist. The Cookes and the singers perform without pay.

Cooke directed a traveling choral group during his military career and has experience in teaching music.

At Cooke's suggestion, the Public Relations Committee of the Monroe Chamber of Commerce helped to activate the organization and originally sponsored the Monroe Civic Singers through a financial grant. The chamber helped with incidental needs such as the original sheet music.

Two weeks after their organizational meeting the group performed at an appreciation dinner for Morgan - Lindsey at the Paragon Club. Their initial public concert was held on Oct. 4, 1965, at Neville Auditorium under the sponsorship of the Sertoma Club.

In the following year 21 performances were given, including performances at the Chamber of Commerce banquet, the annual meeting of the Junior Charity League, a meeting of the Optimist Club and the gathering of the Monroe-Shreveport Catholic Womens' League.

A Christmas program, an Easter show and a Spring Concert over a local television station. An operetta by the group has been scheduled via television for the fall.

The president of the Monroe Civic Singers is Tom Brakefield and the vice president is Mrs. Ann Eubanks. Joan Lay is secretary and Walter Mangum is treasurer.

The singers, Cooke says, constantly search for ways to expand their scope, to become versatile. "We are not striving to be either a long-hair or a short-hair type," the director emphasizes. "We wish only to sing the songs America loves."

The group hopes to be full-strength by 1967 when the Civic Center opens. They realize, Cooke says, that they have to grow step - by - step, and they are looking forward to each step — each new opportunity to perform for local civic groups until they are full-grown and fully capable of representing Monroe at the opening of its new Civic Center.

THE GOAL of the Monroe Civic Singers, under the direction of Dennis Cooke, is to represent Monroe with 75 vocalists who will be able to travel throughout North Louisiana as goodwill ambassadors for the city. Sharing Cooke's hopes for the group is his wife, Fran, the group's accompanist.

Showdown On Powell Foreseen

WASHINGTON (AP) — An attempt by House leaders to bring the free-wheeling Harlem congressman, Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y., into line is headed for a showdown on the House floor Wednesday.

The issue is being forced by a Republican, Rep. William H. Ayres, R-Ohio, who plans to ask the House to reject a resolution that would undercut Powell's authority as chairman of the Education and Labor Committee.

Ayres is the senior Republican on the commtitee and he says the resolution aims "a dangerous, unnecessary blow at the whole committee structure." Many other members see it as a slap at Powell by Speaker John W. McCormack, D-Mass.

Ayres gave his views in a letter sent to each member of the House urging defeat of the resolution, which he called "unprecedented and ill-advised," and likely to set "a pernicious precedent."

The resolution was approved Thursday in a surprise action by the House Rules Committee. It would give McCormack authority to recognize any Democrat on Powell's committee to call up a $1.75-billion antipoverty bill. McCormack promptly scheduled action on it for next Wednesday.

Normally, committee chairmen retain sole right to call up legislation from their committees unless the committee members themselves, by majority vote, designate someone else.

This is the point stressed by Ayres in his letter.

What gives the situation the air of a challenge to Powell is that he has told McCormack he will be unable to be present in the House Wednesday. The many-faceted Powell, who is also a Baptist minister, said he wants to attend a meeting of his church board in New York.

McCormack has given no explanation of his action, other than to express a desire to see an important administration bill moved forward with dispatch.

Sources close to Powell, however, see the speaker as retaliating to a setback he suffered earlier in the session in a collision with Powell. McCormack wanted to call up a construction picketing bill approved by Powell's committee and twice scheduled it, only to have Powell refuse to go along.

Such disputes between the powers of the House are not unusual, but they are generally settled in quite, backroom discussions. Ayres now has served notice he will move one out into the open air of the House chamber.

Klan Probe Will Shift To New Area

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Congressional investigation of the Ku Klux Klan shifts this week to drafting a bill to outlaw the white supremacist organization.

The House Committee on Un-American Activities starts public hearings Wednesday on legislation aimed at punishing and curbing what its chairman calls "the reprehensible, terroristic activities" of Klan-type groups.

Leadoff witness is scheduled to be Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach. Others will include Chairman Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., of the House Judiciary Committee and a representative of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

The hearings are expected to last only three days, with committee approval of a bill already introduced by Chairman Edwin E. Willis, D-La., coming soon afterwards.

One committee source said Saturday that he thought the measure could reach the House floor sometime in August. Overwhelming passage is regarded as likely.

Senate action is something else. Investigation of the KKK has been strictly a House affair. In addition, a heavy workload may not give the Senate time for extended consideration of the Klan issue.

The House committee's familiarity with the Klan stems from a year-long probe conducted from March 1965, until March 1966. Public hearings began last fall. Many Klansmen appeared but most all of them took refuge in the 5th Amendment against self-incrimination. As a result, seven leaders of the United Klans of America, the nation's largest Klan group, were cited for contempt of Congress. The first, Imperial Wizard Robert Shelton, will go on trial here in September.

Fight Erupts At Graduation

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) —Jeering Africans protesting the segregation policies of Premier Ian Smith's regime clashed with white students and police Saturday and turned graduation ceremonies at the University College of Rhodesia into a shambles.

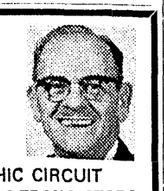

Fist fights erupted and special police reinforcements were ordered in to clear the way through human chains blocking entrance to the outdoor arena of government and university officials.

The demonstrators sang "God Bless Africa," a nationalist hymn, and carried banners saying "rule of law is no more in Rhodesia" and "we never trust rebels except dead ones."

The "rebel" reference was to the Smith government which unilaterally declared its independence from Britain last year.

"THE RUBY," a contemporary opera by Norman Dello Joio, will be presented along with the Paul Hindemith opera "There and Back" at Howard Auditorium on the Louisiana Tech campus Thursday and Friday. David Casteel of Arcadia, left, and Nan McClintock of Baton Rouge have leding roles in the Della Joio Opera. Curtain time each night will be 8 p.m.

Tech To Present Two Short Operas

RUSTON (Special) — Two short operas will be presented Thursday and Friday at Howard Auditorium on the Louisiana Tech campus. "There and Back" and "The Ruby" will begin each night at 8 p.m.

Cooperating in the productions will be the Tech Department of Music and the institute's Musical Theater Association. Dr. Marshall E. Bretz heads the music department and James A. Taylor is president of the theater association.

"There and Back" is a one-act opera by the late German composer Paul Hindemith. The opera by the former Yale University professor is a humorous work which achieves its effect by moving to a melodramatic climax then reversing the action sequence.

"The Ruby" by Norman Dello Joio, a contemporary American composer, is concerned with the theft of a ruby forming the eye of a sacred Oriental idol.

Nancy Walker of Minden has the lead role in "There and Back." She has appeared in seven productions at Tech, including "The Marriage of Figaro," "La Boheme" and "The King and I." Others in the cast include Wayne Miller of Denham Springs, Larry Frazier of Alexandria, James C. Young of Ruston, and Ronald Vernon of Tioga.

Leading roles in "The Ruby" will be taken by Nan McClintock of Baton Rouge and David Casteel of Arcadia. The supporting cast will be Terry Lindeman of Bossier City, Wayne Millet of Denham Springs, James Taylor of Homer, George O'Melia of Minden, John Fowler and Walter Farmer of Ruston, and Larry Dopson of West Monroe.

James G. Smith will direct "There and Back" and "The Ruby." George Sand Lawn of West Monroe will be in charge of music for "The Ruby." Staff members include Terry Smith, Nan McClintock, John Brownlee and George O'Melia.

Tickets are available by mail or may be purchased at the door.

McCarthy Aide Dead At 72

NEW YORK (UPI) —J. B. Matthews, whose charges of communism in the U.S. Protestant church caused a national furor that forced his resignation as an aide to the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, died early Saturday of Parkinson's disease.

Matthews, 72, a theologian and linquist who also worked closely with the Dies committee in the U.S. House of Representatives, had been ill for some time. He entered Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center July 6 and died there at 1:30 a.m. EDT.

For more than two decades, Matthews served as an expert on Communist infiltration of American institutions and organizations for congressional and state legislative bodies. In recent years he had engaged in private writing and research.

Complaints Noted

KANPUR, India (AP) — First complaints over a truck drivers' strike here came from hotels and restaurants reporting shortages of liquor and beer stocks.

Man Sought In Deaths Is 'Loner'

MONMOUTH, Ill. (UPI) — The brother of accused mass slayer Richard Speck described him Saturday as "'a loner."

William Speck, a 35-year-old carpenter, could say only "Oh, boy," when United Press International told him his brother had been charged with the slaughter of eight student nurses in Chicago Thursday.

Then, as he tried to comprehend the news, he said "I don't think it sounds right."

Speck said his brother was "'a loner" who drifted from town to town and didn't bother to tell people where he had been or where he was going.

Only a month and a half ago, he was in Monmouth, his birthplace, doing odd jobs and hanging around the home where his older brother lives with his wife and two sons.

Asked whether Speck got along well with the little boys, Speck said, "You betcha."

While he was in Monmouth, Speck went out with a few of the local girls. He liked them and they liked him, the brother said.

William Speck said his brother left Monmouth as a little boy and grew up in Dallas, Tex. His father had died and his mother had married a man named Lindberg—a name often used by Richard Speck.

William Speck was 16 at the time and stayed in Monmouth. They also had five sisters scattered about the country. His mother lives in Dallas.

William Speck knew of his brother's criminal record.

Richard Speck showed up in Monmouth without warning this spring and left in about the same fashion.

"I don't know where he went when he left here," the brother said.

Explosions Possible On Planet Mars

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A scientist says astronomers may actually have seen explosions on Mars caused by asteroids crashing into its surface.

This possibility was suggested in last week's issue of the technical weekly, Science, by Dr. Ernst J. Opik, professor of astrophysics at the University of Maryland.

On Jan. 16, 1950, T. Saheki in Japan observed an "explosion" over the Martian landscape feature known as Mare Chronium. It produced a gigantic gray cloud more than 900 miles long.

On Aug. 30, 1956, Opik and others observed a yellow cloud over Mare Sirenum which spread in the next eight days until it covered an almost hemispheric region 1,800 miles across.

Asteroids are comparatively tiny planets which revolve around the Sun, many of them in orbits near that of Mars. In the approximately 4.5 billion years since it was formed, Mars has been hit by many asteroids and still bears the scars.

'Kitten' Arrives

PAPEETE, Tahiti (UPI) — French sex kitten Brigitte Bardot and her husband of three days, German playboy Gunther Sachs, arrived here Saturday for a honeymoon cruise through the South Sea islands.

They said on arrival by air from Los Angeles they planned to hire a sailing boat and cruise the tropical waters for about two weeks.

Backing On Suit Issue Is Noted

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Assistant Atty. Gen. Donald F. Turner's decision to drop an antitrust suit against the Anheuser-Busch brewery was backed by all but one of the key government lawyers working on the case, a Justice Department spokesman said Saturday.

The one holdout, he told UPI, was the trial lawyer. But his recommendation to proceed against the St. Louis firm was opposed by three other higher level antitrust officials, plus Turner, head of the antitrust division, and Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach. All of them thought the government had a weak case.

The dismissal led to Republican charges in the House of Representatives that the Democrats were open to criticism because the suit was dropped on June 17. This was less than a month after top executives of Anheuser-Busch and their wives contributed $10,000 to the President's Club, a Democratic party fund-raising organization for contributors of $1,000 or more.

Rep. H. R. Gross, R-Iowa, arch foe of government corruption, issued a statement hitting at the case, and said: "This Busch (sic) league affair is another example of the decline in moral leadership by the party in power." He cited the Senate's Robert G. (Bobby) Baker conflict of interest scandal and FBI bugging of a hotel room in an income tax case involving Fred Black, a Baker associate.

The Justice Department, the White House and the Democratic National Committee denied the contributions had anything to do with dismissal of the suit. It was dropped, they said, strictly on the merits of the case.

According to the Justice Department spokesman, the trial lawyer, on May 9, made his recommendation that the suit be tried. He based his decision on the ground that Anheuser-Busch's attempt to acquire the Rahr Malting Co. was part of a trend by major breweries to buy up malting supplies and could lead to a price-fixing monopoly.

But Turner and three other aides all agreed there was no longer a discernible trend, even though there had been such indications earlier. They also said that if small, independent breweries ever faced the threat of a monopoly, they could end it by simply joining together to set up their own malting plans, the spokesman said.

Turner got his first recommendation that the case be dropped on May 20. Four days later August Busch Jr., his son, August Busch III, and their wives joined the President's Club.

Busch is president of Anheuser-Busch Inc. His son is vice president. They and their wives contributed $8,000 to the party's war chest and another Busch employe contributed $2,000 more.

This fact, plus the government's final decision to dismiss the suit, led to the GOP charges. Added to this was Turner's admission that he flew to the All-Star baseball game in St. Louis in an Anheuser-Busch company airplane along with Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey and Clifton Carter, an executive of the Democratic National Committee.

THE ISSUE!

Should We Have Standardized Fines?

Monroe is trying to grow into the cultural and industrial center of this area and is even now in the process of erecting a 5.5 million dollar civic center for this purpose, yet many organizations of this state and area are refusing Monroe as a convention site, many of our large corporations will not permit their representatives to spend the night here, and many people from surrounding areas trade elsewhere because of our reputation for being unreasonable about drinking and driving. While this reputation is no doubt exaggerated, the present fine of $425.00 being assessed to all persons, rich or poor, under all circumstances no matter how, when, or where the act was committed and no matter how insignificant or severe the exposure of public safety, is generally considered to be unreasonable, unjust, and not in the public interest.

In announcing my candidacy for this office on June 1st, I made the following statement: "There seems to be only one 'issue' in the campaign for election to this office, other than the personalities of the candidates, and this is the treatment of the offense of driving while under the influence of alcohol. While I do not pretend to have a 'cure' for this serious social problem, I do believe that all circumstances should be considered in each case and the offender penalized accordingly. In no case, however, in the absence of aggravated circumstances, should the first offender be fined more than $300.00. This is the 'usual' penalty for this offense in all other courts of this immediate area. I will seriously consider any other reasonable suggestion for effective control of this problem.

While I cannot condone this serious offense, I consider it more an act of indiscretion than a deliberate effort to breach the peace or to cause injury to another. I could not, with good conscience, consider such offender in the same light as one who deliberately commits an unlawful act such as theft or other intentional act of violence."

Tattoo Symbolizes Attitude Of Suspect

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A 25-year-old troublemaker, who advertised himself as "born to raise h—," became the object of a nationwide manhunt Saturday night as the accused slayer of eight Chicago nurses.

The man known by many names was charged in Chicago as Richard B. Speck. His list of felonies and misdemeanors filled pages of Dallas crime records.

The tall, acne-scarred Speck, had a tattoo, "born to raise h—," emblazoned on one arm.

He favors tattoos, hard booze, fighting, forgery, and burglary.

A judge sent Speck to the penitentiary once, and the police grabbed him a week after his parole for attempted attack and robbery of a Dallas woman with a knife. They sent him back to prison.

He had been out of the penitentiary only a year when the nurses were slain.

Police said 32 of Speck's fingerprints were found in the nurses' quarters.

Shortly before dusk, the hunt centered on a line from Amarillo, where a man fitting the description was seen, to his former haunts in Dallas.

Speck first went to the penitentiary on charges of possession of a forged instrument, burglary and passing a forged instrument — three concurrent sentences. His final prison release was June 2, 1965.

A woman who answered the door at a Dallas house where a Richard Speck and Buddy Wilson once lived said she was Buddy Wilson's wife. She said she would not talk to anyone. She slammed the door in a reporter's face.

She appeared upset. The woman was young, an attractive brunette and dressed in shorts and a blouse.

Jack Heard, director of the Huntsville Prison, said. "His record was good with us. His adjustments here and his record here were clear. There was no problem with him while he was in prison here and no disciplinary action was taken."

At the prison, Speck listed his nearest relatives as Shirley Annette Speck, his wife, of Dallas and his mother, Mary Margaret Speck, who lived at the same address.

Lynda Bird Back From Vacation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surrounded by Secret Service men, Lynda Bird Johnson flew home from a European vacation Saturday to be welcomed at Dulles Airport with a hug from her mother, the First Lady.

Her sister Luci, 19, and one of the bridesmaids for Luci's Aug. 6 wedding, came out, too, but got separated briefly in the airport, delaying departure for members of the first family.

Lynda, 22, and her school chum traveling companion, Susan Schein of New York City, got top flight treatment and were led through the customs room with the diplomatic courtesy of no baggage check.

Mrs. Johnson, who drove the 25 miles or so from the White House to the suburban Virginia airport, timed her arrival as her daughter was midway through the huge customs room. Lynda was ahead of the 131 passengers and nine crew members of the Pan American jet plane that brought her home from Frankfurt by way of London after a 26-day holiday in Spain and West Germany.

Little Girl Falls Into Copper Mine

CALUMET, Mich. (UPI) —A little girl berry picking with her brother fell into a half-mile-deep abandoned copper mine on the remote Keweenaw Peninsula Saturday.

A massive rescue operation was launched but her father said he had given up hope for the life of his daughter, Ruth Ann Miller, 7.

The Houghton County Sheriff's Office said it did not know whether the girl was ailve.

Rescue workers blasted a concrete cap covering the long-abandoned mine shaft and lowered two men in a bucket suspended from a crane. The father, Eugene Taylor, and unemployed electrician, said the men saw no trace of the girl and had to come up when their bucket was blocked by a crisscross of old timbers.

The mine is located about one-third mile from the Taylor home outside Calumet at the northern tip of Michigan's sparsely populated Upper Peninsula. The area, in Houghton County's legendary "copper country," is scarred with abandoned copper mines, some several miles deep.

In the late 19th century the county produced more copper than any other place in the world and its copper mogals gave it the claim of having more millionaires than New York City.

Taylor, his voice breaking with grief, told United Press International the accident occurred while Ruth Ann and her brother, Gary, 10 were gaily berry picking in the countryside.

"The children had gone picking some berries," he said. "They went into this old mine location. There's an old mine shaft there that was at one time barricaded with a barbed wire fence but there was an opening in the fence.

Miss Talton will work with the regional office of Head Start throughout the state assisting in establishing child development centers on the local level, consulting with directors, teachers, other staff members and volunteers in offering training resources and making evaluations through multi-community meetings, Dr. Davis said.

New Killing Link Seen By Police

MONMOUTH, Ill. (AP) — Chief of Police Harold Tinder of Monmouth said Saturday that Richard B. Speck, 25, charged with murdering eight student nurses in Chicago, is wanted for questioning about a slaying in Monmouth.

"He was a prime interest in connection with the killing of Mary Pierce, a barmaid who disappeared April 9," Tinder told a reporter. "Her body was found five days later in a disused hog house near the tavern where she had worked."

Tinder said that Speck was well known in Monmouth, especially to the police who had questioned him in connection with several housebreakings and burglaries.

One case in March, Tinder said, involved the attempted rape of a 65-year-old woman who returned home as the intruder was looting her home. "She was threatened with a knife," Tinder said.

"He was a very disarming man to talk to," Tinder recalled. "He seemed sociable. He'd counter your questions with other questions, but not offensively. He was a real professional, and after you'd talked to him you had the impression he wouldn't hurt a fly."

"We learned later," Tinder said, "through his record files from the FBI and Dallas that he was bad enough."

Tinder said that he mailed copies of Speck's photograph and his record sheets to the Chicago police "as soon as I saw that sketch in the papers." The Monmouth chief said, however, that he had received no acknowledgement.

Speck appeared in Monmouth in March of this year to visit his brother, Howard W. Speck, a carpenter, and to seek a job.

The series of burglaries began shortly afterward, the chief said. Richard had begun work as an apprentice carpenter, a job Howard obtained for him.

He said that Speck also had a sister, Mrs. Eugene Thornton of Chicago.

It is indeed a colorful newspaper in every sense of the word.

Typed — more or less — with red lettering on two small sheets of yellow paper, a recent edition, of Harrison's paper chronicled the events of note around 203 Caroline Ave., his home. It also mentioned a problem the News has.

"I wish I had a printing press," he wrote, "so that I could scoop more news."

Some samples:

"Jackie McBroom is the proud owner of a new black and white dog named 'Peanut.' Jackie is having a time trying to keep 'Peanut' out of the street."

"Mr. and Mrs. Glen Gore and young son, Glen Paul will soon be moving to their new home on Grayling Lane. Mr. Gore is one of Monroe's finest architects and their home is one of his designs. We are happy for them but come next September when they move, we'll be sorry to see them go."

"Several people who aren't in our neighborhood deserve mentioning. In fact, your Editor had a brand new cousin, Thomas Edward Rhymes, who was born real early Monday morning. He is the youngest son of Dr. and Mrs. Ray Rhymes Jr."

Harrison has a weekly feature: "Who is your hero for the week?"

'I think it is Buddy Corrent who found their cat Bunny, who was killed by a car. He carried him home and gave it a nice burial. Buddy is real good to people and animals alike. I'm proud he is my friend."

Harrison issued a call to "get out and scoop the neighborhood for interesting items for our paper."

Tattoo Symbolizes Attitude Of Suspect

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A 25-year-old troublemaker, who advertised himself as "born to raise h—," became the object of a nationwide manhunt Saturday night as the accused slayer of eight Chicago nurses.

The man known by many names was charged in Chicago as Richard B. Speck. His list of felonies and misdemeanors filled pages of Dallas crime records.

The tall, acne-scarred Speck, had a tattoo, "born to raise h—," emblazoned on one arm.

He favors tattoos, hard booze, fighting, forgery, and burglary.

A judge sent Speck to the penitentiary once, and the police grabbed him a week after his parole for attempted attack and robbery of a Dallas woman with a knife. They sent him back to prison.

He had been out of the penitentiary only a year when the nurses were slain.

Police said 32 of Speck's fingerprints were found in the nurses' quarters.

Shortly before dusk, the hunt centered on a line from Amarillo, where a man fitting the description was seen, to his former haunts in Dallas.

Speck first went to the penitentiary on charges of possession of a forged instrument, burglary and passing a forged instrument — three concurrent sentences. His final prison release was June 2, 1965.

A woman who answered the door at a Dallas house where a Richard Speck and Buddy Wilson once lived said she was Buddy Wilson's wife. She said she would not talk to anyone. She slammed the door in a reporter's face.

She appeared upset. The woman was young, an attractive brunette and dressed in shorts and a blouse.

Jack Heard, director of the Huntsville Prison, said. "His record was good with us. His adjustments here and his record here were clear. There was no problem with him while he was in prison here and no disciplinary action was taken."

At the prison, Speck listed his nearest relatives as Shirley Annette Speck, his wife, of Dallas and his mother, Mary Margaret Speck, who lived at the same address.

Lynda Bird Back From Vacation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surrounded by Secret Service men, Lynda Bird Johnson flew home from a European vacation Saturday to be welcomed at Dulles Airport with a hug from her mother, the First Lady.

Her sister Luci, 19, and one of the bridesmaids for Luci's Aug. 6 wedding, came out, too, but got separated briefly in the airport, delaying departure for members of the first family.

Lynda, 22, and her school chum traveling companion, Susan Schein of New York City, got top flight treatment and were led through the customs room with the diplomatic courtesy of no baggage check.

Mrs. Johnson, who drove the 25 miles or so from the White House to the suburban Virginia airport, timed her arrival as her daughter was midway through the huge customs room. Lynda was ahead of the 131 passengers and nine crew members of the Pan American jet plane that brought her home from Frankfurt by way of London after a 26-day holiday in Spain and West Germany.

Asked by reporters how she had enjoyed her trip, Lynda flashed a brief smile and said only "fine," as she and her mother, arm in arm, walked rapidly away. When a television reporter asked if they would pause for an interview,, Mrs. Johnson said, "She's (referring to Lynda) got to talk to me first."

Safe Mooring Of Schooner Is Reported

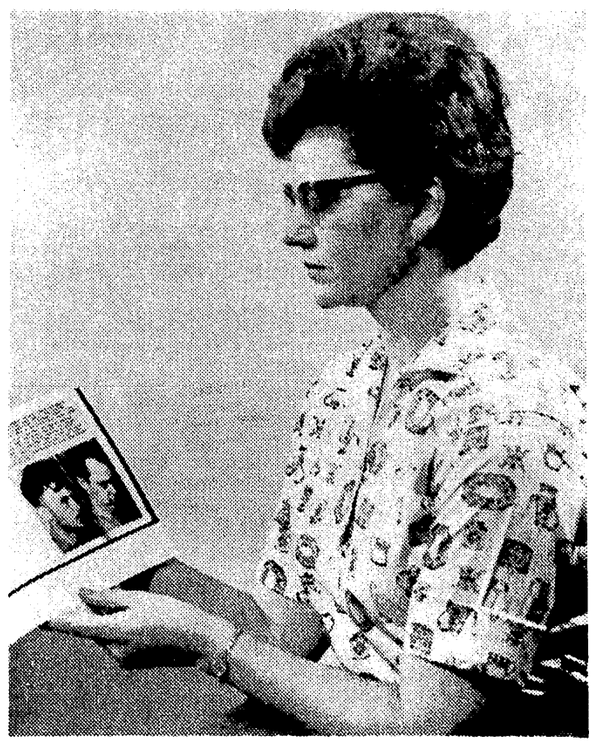

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP)—The 45-foot, two - masted schooner Longosta, subject of a search by the Coast Guard since Thursday, was reported in safe mooring Saturday in the Panama Canal Zone.

Lt. Cmdr. D. B. Charter Jr., commanding officer of group headquarters, Mobile, Ala. said the schooner reportedly left Gulfport June 22 on a trip to Montego Bay, Jamaica.

The search began when the vessel, with four persons on Board including a two-year-old child, was reported overdue at its destination. Its trip from Gulfport to Jamaica and eventually Santa Cruz, Calif., was to have taken the schooner through the Panama Canal.

On board the ship, Commander Charter said, were Charles and Rene Stuart of Modesto, Calif., two - year - old Marcus Stuart and David Smith.

The commander said his headquarters received word of the Longosta's safe arrival at Panama through the district eight headquarters in New Orleans.

MRS. MARY Robinson of suburban Affton, Mo., just outside St. Louis, looks at an Associated Press Wirephoto of her brother, Maj. Bruce G. Seeber, 33, and another captured American pilot. Police Check Car; Driver

CLEVELAND (UPI) —Police checking a car for mechanical faults Saturday found more wrong with the driver.

The car didn't have a parking brake or an adequate muffler, but the driver had two names—both with police records.

Police said the man gave his name as Caputo, but his driver's license spelled it Computo.

When Caputo-Computo attempted to hide a piece of paper, the police grabbed it and found a union dues booklet with the name Longmier.

Caputo - Computo - Longmier, who hadn't said much until then, shut up completely, police said, so they took him to jail.

At the station house, police found that Caputo-Computo had a police record dating to 1944 and as Longmier had a record of 26 traffic violations since 1956.

It added up to Longmier, as they finally decided the prisoner was named, being held in jail for four traffic violations and a contempt of court citation, police said.

18 Nauseated By Gas Leak

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Eighteen persons said they were nauseated here Saturday after leakage of a chlorine gas cylinder at a chemical works.

R. E. Spicer, manager of the Uptown Chemical Co., told police a leak was discovered in a cylinder in a rear yard of the plant.

Spicer said employes tried to neutralize the leakage by placing the cylinder into a solution of water and caustic soda.

Education Center Officials Are Named

Organizational work on the South Central Region Educational Laboratory that will serve the north Louisiana area has taken another step forward with the naming of officials of the lay advisory committee.

The research center, tentatively located at Little Rock, Ark., is being established under Title IV of Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1964, and will coordinate educational projects for its territory. This center will be one of about 20 such institutions in the nation, and will serve north Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas, southwest Missouri, southeast Kansas and eastern Oklahoma.

Louisiana is entitled to five representatives on the 40-member advisory committee composed of lay people not in the field of education.

Named to the committee at a recent meeting were District Judge Mack E. Barham of Bastrop; Hale Shadow, Ruston; Mrs. Helen Kennedy, Grambing; Henry G. Talliferro, Jonesville; and Mrs. H. A. Cory, Shreveport.

The entire committee then held a meeting and elected officers, naming Shadow as vice president. R. D. Morrow of Jackson, Miss., was chosen as chairman. Barham and Talliferro were named to the board of directors from Louisiana.

The board of directors that will govern the full project was also organized, and Barham was selected vice chairman. Col. Marty Haggerstrand of Tahlequah, Okla., is chairman, and B. Finley Vinson of Little Rock is secretary - treasurer.

Eventually, officials said, the research center will probably handle all funds and grants for educational purposes in the six-state area, which will amount to several million dollars per year.

Dr. W. L. Bergeron of Louisiana Tech is presently serving as acting executive director of the project. Officials expect the center to be totally operational by November, when a permanent director and staff will be named.

Monroe Police Foil Attempt By Juvenile

Monroe police said Saturday the arrest of a juvenile escapee from Louisiana Training Institute came when a night watchman caught him breaking into Howard Griffin's. Earlier Saturday, Kokino's Ice Cream at 806 S. Grand St. was burglarized.

Officers said the boy was turned over to LTI authorities.

A box of ice cream was taken from Kokino's. Nothing was taken from Howard Griffin's, police said.

Police said the night watchman for the establishment heard glass break, entered the building and saw the boy entering through another door which had been broken.

In other activity Saturday, driving while intoxicated charges made the bulk of law enforcement work.

Charged by Monroe police for driving while intoxicated were Thomas L. Wiseman, 39, Bastrop; Julius Darrington, 34, 2928 Louberta; George G. Solida, 27, El Dorado, Ark.; and Kenneth Don Ford, 31, of 33-A Louis Lock Homes.

Ford was also booked for negligent driving, simple escape, resisting arrest, and public drunkeness, police said.

West Monroe police charged Sherman D. Motlock, 53, San Angelo, Tex., and Calvin Arrant, 46, of 406 Flamingo St., with driving while intoxicated.

Police said the man gave his name as Caputo, but his driver's license spelled it Computo.

When Caputo-Computo attempted to hide a piece of paper, the police grabbed it and found a union dues booklet with the name Longmier.

Caputo - Computo - Longmier, who hadn't said much until then, shut up completely, police said, so they took him to jail.

At the station house, police found that Caputo-Computo had a police record dating to 1944 and as Longmier had a record of 26 traffic violations since 1956.

It added up to Longmier, as they finally decided the prisoner was named, being held in jail for four traffic violations and a contempt of court citation, police said.

18 Nauseated By Gas Leak

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Eighteen persons said they were nauseated here Saturday after leakage of a chlorine gas cylinder at a chemical works.

R. E. Spicer, manager of the Uptown Chemical Co., told police a leak was discovered in a cylinder in a rear yard of the plant.

Spicer said employes tried to neutralize the leakage by placing the cylinder into a solution of water and caustic soda.

Education Center Officials Are Named

Organizational work on the South Central Region Educational Laboratory that will serve the north Louisiana area has taken another step forward with the naming of officials of the lay advisory committee.

The research center, tentatively located at Little Rock, Ark., is being established under Title IV of Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1964, and will coordinate educational projects for its territory. This center will be one of about 20 such institutions in the nation, and will serve north Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas, southwest Missouri, southeast Kansas and eastern Oklahoma.

Louisiana is entitled to five representatives on the 40-member advisory committee composed of lay people not in the field of education.

Named to the committee at a recent meeting were District Judge Mack E. Barham of Bastrop; Hale Shadow, Ruston; Mrs. Helen Kennedy, Grambling; Henry G. Talliferro, Jonesville; and Mrs. H. A. Cory, Shreveport.

The entire committee then held a meeting and elected officers, naming Shadow as vice president. R. D. Morrow of Jackson, Miss., was chosen as chairman. Barham and Talliferro were named to the board of directors from Louisiana.

The board of directors that will govern the full project was also organized, and Barham was selected vice chairman. Col. Marty Haggerstrand of Tahlequah, Okla., is chairman, and B. Finley Vinson of Little Rock is secretary - treasurer.

Eventually, officials said, the research center will probably handle all funds and grants for educational purposes in the six-state area, which will amount to several million dollars per year.

Dr. W. L. Bergeron of Louisiana Tech is presently serving as acting executive director of the center to be totally operational by November, when a permanent director and staff will be named.

Monroe Police Foil Attempt By Juvenile

Monroe police said Saturday the arrest of a juvenile escapee from Louisiana Training Institute came when a night watchman caught him breaking into Howard Griffin's. Earlier Saturday, Kokino's Ice Cream at 806 S. Grand St. was burglarized.

Officers said the boy was turned over to LTI authorities.

A box of ice cream was taken from Kokino's. Nothing was taken from Howard Griffin's, police said.

Police said the night watchman for the establishment heard glass break, entered the building and saw the boy entering through another door which had been broken.

In other activity Saturday, driving while intoxicated charges made the bulk of law enforcement work.

Charged by Monroe police for driving while intoxicated were Thomas L. Wiseman, 39, Bastrop; Julius Darrington, 34, 2928 Louberta; George G. Solida, 27, El Dorado, Ark.; and Kenneth Don Ford, 31, of 33-A Louis Lock Homes.

Ford was also booked for negligent driving, simple escape, resisting arrest, and public drunkeness, police said.

West Monroe police charged Sherman D. Motlock, 53, San Angelo, Tex., and Calvin Arrant, 46, of 406 Flamingo St., with driving while intoxicated.

Dramatize Demands

RAYMONDVILLE, Texas (UPI)—About 20 farm workers, who are trying to dramatize their demands for a $1.25 an hour minimum wage by a 380-mile march to the state capitol, left Raymondville today on a 25-mile trek to Linn, Tex.

Much To Question In Our Literature

By TRAVIS MAYO
World Staff Writer

Any person who attempts to pass moral judgment upon a class of people on the basis of available examples of their literature must consider a wide margin of error. The danger of misinterpretation exists whether it is a distant culture being judged or a distant college of our own day.

An example of such misinterpretation appeared in a literary sketch of a decade ago describing the impressions of an archaeologist of 15 centuries from now who unearths evidence of our present civilization.

His only artifact is a copper penny, seared by intense heat which he gathers has reduced everything else to ashes. From evidence contained on this one-cent piece, he reconstructs our civilization.

"In God We Trust" he reads and concludes that we worshipped a supreme being. "Here," he explains, pointing to the bust of Abraham Lincoln, "is an image of their God."

The story illustrates two basic points: That posterity will judge us by what we leave behind, and that it will in some cases judge inaccurately.

We hope, of course, that posterity will judge us by our great literary classics, our noble thoughts, our aspirations and ideals, for we desire to be represented by our very best efforts. Yet even if they unearth our classics, future archaeologists may still judge inaccurately.

We do not have to project 15 centuries into the future to see erroneous judgments made on the basis of a nation's literary heritage.

The late Henry Louis Mencken, a leading authority on the language of his country, often pointed out in his typical newspaperman's fashion that British critics of the 18th century jumped to wrong conclusions about Uncle Sam's people.

Natives of Great Britain, Mencken said, interpreted our use of "Americanism" not only as a sign of our debasement of the mother-tongue but just as surely a sign of our moral deterioration.

Even today, Europeans misjudge us by what they read in our dime-store novels or see in our movies.

It is another matter, however, when a nation says "Here is our best literature. It has met our highest standards. By it we hope to be represented." That nation will have to accept any valid judgments drawn from a reading of its representative literature.

The same can be said of a college. The annual college literary magazine is supposedly an example of the best the college has to offer.

Yet if the 1966 undergraduate literary magazine of Long Island University's Brooklyn Center is that by which the university hopes to be represented, the university can expect mixed emotions concerning both its literary and moral standards.

The Helicon is the official undergraduate literary publication of Richard L. Connolly College of Long Island University and is published annually at Brooklyn Center, Brooklyn, N. Y. The editor - in - chief is Morris Emory Eaves.

Eaves is from West Monroe and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Eaves, 107 Browning Street, West Monroe. He is a would-be author, a Merit Scholarship finalist and he graduated this year from Brooklyn Center with the bachelor of arts degree in English, summa cum laude. In September he will start working on his masters and Ph.D. degrees in English at Tulane University, New Orleans, where he has received a National Defense Fellowship.

No person reading the 14 selections in The Helicon, Vol. 5, No. 1, will come away with a strong opinion one way or the other, nor will any reader dispute the professional writing talent as found in the poems, short stories or the portion of Eaves' novel.

Much opinion pro and con, however, will be and has been expressed concerning the prevalent subject matter. Some very considerable summa cum laude talent has been expended on writing style, conciseness, vividness of expression, character development and overall creativity. Some readers have felt these talents are but pearls cast away upon swine. Others have expressed the opinion that here at last is an open, frank, constructive discussion of realistic problems of our day.

From the following brief example, a potential reader of The Helicon may see how a reader's opinion would be a divided one.

"And Binding With Briars" by Lee Amato tells how Sister Isabella corrects her student Michael Sheehan when the first stirrings of his manhood cause him to make a scene in the classroom. "Any act of that sort that does not produce children is sinful," she scolds. Sister Isabella is flushed with the success o fher communication, not realizing that her statement, somewhat misinterpreted, has led the boy to erroneous conclusions.

The boy spends the afternoon in a vacant lot, thinking about sin and whether he has the right to remain alive. He is uplifted by his new resolve. He returns home and criminally assaults his sister.

The teacher's scolding remark meant one thing to an adult but quite another thing to a child.

In a sense, Amato's story is a modern, psychological tragedy with a very realistic and perhaps essential moral. Is it? Or is it an example of potential talent gone to seed?

An evaluation of this nature is becoming more and more important, for collegiate literature is becoming more and more controversial, and by our literature will our generation be judged. How will we fare when the story "And Binding with Briars" becomes to posterity what Beowulf, the greatest single work of Old English literature, is to us now?

We can gather from this earliest extant poem in a modern European language that Beowulf possessed kindness, nobility and a fine sense of duty and honor. How will posterity evaluate us when they read The Helicon?

Theater District

On the West Side, between Broadway and Eight Avenue, is New York's theater district. No signs mark the boundaries, but marquees are ablaze with light, and lines form outside box office windows. On the streets, taxis swerve to the curbs and unload fashionably dressed passengers while the inevitable "scalpers" offer tickets at prices slightly higher than retail! Any theater farther west than Eighth Avenue, farther north than Sixtieth Street, or farther south than Forty-second is considered "off Broadway," and fails to command the attention of "spectacular run" shows. In the middle of it all are the "posh" restaurants — Toots Shor's, 21, and others of the "theater group" which cater to the "after show" people. Mama Leone's has the best lasagne this side of Naples for those who are really hungry.

On Fifty-second, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues is another box office. Inside, the show is continuous, and it's likely one of the best and least known in New York. Back in the old days, it might have been called a "dime-a-dance," but whatever its name, Roseland was and still is the capital of dancing. Oddly enough, it is a sort of last bastion of the ballroom style now that the Debutante Ball has a new British beat, and Lester Lanin has jazzed up society.

Inside is a sumptuousness unlike anything west of the Plaza. The great gleaming dance floor is filled with couples. Dark drapes form a backdrop as the orchestra smoothly plays "Deep Purple", and you can almost see Ray Eberle as he sang in the old times. The lounge does a thriving beverage business, and the atmosphere is not unlike the Starlight Roof but on a bigger scale. A number of Gotham's "name" nightclubs suffer in comparison. The music continues, and it's the famed Roseland dance music which has always made the difference.

On a recent summer night, the theaters had closed, and refugees from Rock and Roll had crossed the time barrier onto the floor at Roseland. Across the years, it seemed, came the strains of "After All." Remember how late at night you could listen to the radio network dance shows and hear Harry James's "Chiribiribin" from Frank Daly's Meadowbrook? Remember the dance years when a whole generation learned to live and love to the leaders — Bunny Berigan, who got started with "I Can't Get Started," Charlie Barnet's "Skyliner," and the wondrous Claude Thornhill's "Snowfall"? Duke Ellington treated a war-weary people to a ride on his "A-Train" and the Dorseys had nearly as many followers as President Roosevelt. From out on the West Coast, at Glen Island, came the magic music of the never replaced Glenn Miller and "Moonlight Serenade."

Those were the years of the smooth music, the theme music, and you knew what it meant to dance together, and during the war, to be close together.

It all came back on a summer night, listening to the music of an orchestra on Fifty-second stret, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues as the couples danced at Roseland!

Beans Regain Sharp Losses In Busy Mart

CHICAGO (AP) — The grain futures market experienced active periods of buying and moderate selling generally last week and finished with good to brain gains for all commodities.

Price changes in soybeans ran the limit of 10 cents for a single day or nearly so frequently and quickly recovered the sharp losses of the previous week that ranged to more than 20 cents a bushel on the old crop months.

Although last week's advances amounted to 18 cents at best, most of them were for the new crop months. Old crop contracts moved up only 4 cents at best.

Corn continued to be the most actively traded commodity on the exchange and again hit a succession of 118-year highs for total open interest and again set a record of 97.2 million bushels for a single day's volume. At the close of the market on Thursday, the open interest had climbed to 298.5 million bushels. Until recently, the record had been 262.8 million in April 1962.

Although weather was the major influence in the market throughout the week, a government announced on Thursday that it had suspended sales of surplus corn for domestic use gave that grain an additional mildly bullish influence on Friday.

Nearly every contract on the exchange hit season highs one or more times during the week.

At the end of the week, wheat was 4 to 5¾ cents a bushel higher than a week ago, July $1.88⅛-¼; corn 3⅞-5⅛ higher, July $1.38½; soybeans 3¼ to 18 cents higher, July $3.50 - 50¼; Oats ¼ lower to 1⅛ higher, July 73⅝-½ cents; rye 4¼-5½ higher, July $1.32⅝.

Mobilization In Viet Nam Is Expected

BERLIN (AP) — North Viet Nam will announce a partial mobilization today, the East German news agency ADN reported Saturday.

The news agency said the announcement will follow a radio proclamation by President Ho Chi Minh on the occasion of the 12th anniversary of the Geneva Indochina agreement.

"Afterward a communique of the National Defense Council and also an order of the Defense Ministry of North Viet Nam for partial mobilization will be made public," it added. "This document has been unanimously passed by the National Assembly."

Church Meeting Features Praise For Reds

GENEVA (AP) — Lavish praise of atheist, Communist China and open support for Christian violence, to achieve social change, were just two of the shock features in this first week of the controversial World Conference on Church and Society.

For the first time at a major Christian conference lawymen clearly outnumber tchologians among the 400 delegates from 80 nations. Some of them represent extreme views in the fields of politics, economics and science.

For instance:

Nigerian barrister 'Bola Ige told the conference Communist China is the new savior of the poor nations.

"As long as the United States and Russia arrogate to themselves the monopoly of directing the future of the world and of other nations, there can be no peace," he said.

A West Berlin theologian, Prof. Helmut Gollwitzer, called on the West German government to recognize its present eastern boundaries—the Oder-Neisse line—and to give up the idea of German reunification in the form of annexing Communist East Germany. Moscow could hardly have put it better.

A young American theologian created a stir by advocating violence for revolutionary groups such as the American civil rights movement.

Richard Shaull, professor of ecumenics at Princeton Theological Seminary, said this was sometimes the only way of achieving social change in the face of the self-satisfied, indifferent power structure of a contented society.

A Japanese theologian, Yoshiaki Iisaka, professor of political science at Gakushuin University, Tokyo, called U.S. bombing of Viet Nam "inhuman."

Gollwitzer tried, but failed, to get the conference to make an official protest to the U.S. government on his allegations that America was bombing dams in North Viet Nam and thereby drowning civilians.

The organizer of the conference is the World Council of Churches, which comprises more than 200 Protestant, Anglican, Orthodox and Old Catholic churches in some 80 countries. Thus far it has taken the extremism with aplomb. Some officials, as a matter of fact, are pleased with the revolutionary remarks made during the conference:

"It shows the Christian church today is a liberal minded, go-ahead body", said one. "I know some views expressed here are extreme and certainly not acceptable to the conference as a whole. But that's all part of the great new freedom of expression sweeping through the churches now."

The second week of the conference is unlikely to be any less lively, with political revolutionaries from the developing nations and another batch of Western liberals slated to appear on the rostrum.

4 Persons Meet Death On Streets

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—"I've never seen anything like it," said a police officer after three teen-agers and a middle-aged man were killed on the streets of New Orleans and Jefferson Parish Friday night and early Saturday.

The dead were:

Donald Taylor, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Taylor, of suburban Marrero.

Suzanne Schumann, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Schumann, of Metonbo.

Jeremiah Carroll, 46, of Chalmette.

The Schumann girl, a passenger on a motorcycle, was killed when the vehicle, driven by Naumann Scott, 21, of Alexandria, collided with a car on River Road early Saturday. The motorist ran from the scene. Poice said the car was stolen. Scott was seriously injured.

In another motorcycle - car crash, Friday night, the cycle ridden by Taylor was struck from the rear and carried 700 feet down Barataria Boulevard.

"The motorcycle looked like it was welded to the front of the car," an officer said.

The Lewis boy, riding a bicycle, was killed when he collided with a car at a street intersection. His body was thrown 93 feet. The motorist, James E. McCullan, 21, was booked with negligent homicide and reckless driving.

Carroll was fatally injured early Saturday as he walked across a street in Algiers. Police booked Louis Paul Anderson, 52, with hit-and-run driving, reckless driving and negligent homicide. Ptn. Elmer Poche and William Boyer said witnesses reported the car was going about 80 miles an hour. Carroll's left leg was severed and hurled more than 200 feet. His torso bounced into a parked car 25 feet from where the car hit him.

Manpower Training Expansion Reported

By JIM TALBERT
World Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Manpower development training, a program that has sent 3,262 unemployed or disadvantaged Louisianans into new jobs since 1962, is moving into a more difficult area of operation emphasis will shift from job - orientation to a more personal contact program aimed at digging into pockets of "hard core" unemployed and those in the over-45 age bracket, who are more difficult to train for new jobs.

Officials in both federal and Louisiana employment services will seek out those who are "severely disadvantaged," lacking education or having large families, in an attempt to get them into productive jobs and off the state and federal welfare rolls.

Although Louisiana was the last state to enter the four-year - old program, Labor Department power specialist Joseph R. Julianelle said that "Louisiana has one of the better programs in the country. It didn't come into the program until the second year, but has caught up well." The Labor Department estimated that during the past fiscal year, Louisiana received slightly over $6 million in manpower development projects that serviced over 5,000 trainees.

State and federal service officials said that during the same period, 90 per cent of the trainees who completed courses were employed in related jobs within 30 days of course completion, against a national average of 70 per cent.

Julianelle said that the aim, briefly, of the program was to aid the habitually unemployed to find work and get off the welfare rolls. The Labor Department estimted that each dollar spent on MDTA training will result in $4 general purchasing power in the economy. Dr. John Chisolm, professor of economics at Louisiana State University and chairman of the 15-member State Manpower Advisory Committee, puts the figure higher for Louisiana. He said that an $8 purchasing power for the local area would result from each dollar spent on MDTA trainees. An example is that of a 20-year old Bogalusa man who was chronically unemployed and had to help support his mother and four brothers and sisters on a $35 per week part-time job.

After MDTA training as a welder he has held a $4 per hour job in Bogalusa, and he and his family have disappeared from welfare rolls.

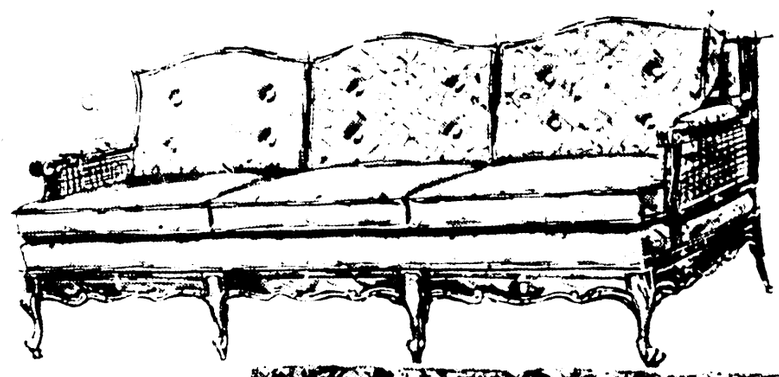

An esitmated total of $200 million in welfare reached Louisiana last year, part of which manpower administration officials say can be erased by continuing MDTA job training. Training ranges from stenographer, draftsman, clerk, and bookkeeper to more rural needs of meat cutter, tractor mechanic and operator, and farm equipment mechanic.

One of the plans for Louisiana's future MDTA programs includes training for older people, while another will set up a center for rehabilitation of prison parolees. Many of the hard core unemployed will need elementary literacy training before they can begin actual job training.

WORDS FOR FUN

What's a nine - letter word for fun and games? That's a crossword, a puzzler for 30 million Americans. Since the first one in 1913, crossword puzzles have developed a huge, loyal, and noisy following.

Monroe Morning World

Sunday Features

Editorials — Spotlight — Sports

Monroe, La., July 17, 1966 1-B

By SID MOODY

NEW YORK (AP) — There are gnus in the zoo — and emus, too.

But they are more likely found roaming through what may be America's favorite and frustrating pastime, the crossword puzzle.

They are but two of the printable but perplexing four letter words that regularly pester the more than 30 million Americans who play at crosswords.

The crossword has become a timeless time killer. It has been used in advertising campaigns and for marriage proposals. It sells newspapers, books and magazines by the millions.

It is the great leveler of our time. The office boy and the boss, the commuter and the housewife, the jeune fille — young girl, French, and the old termagant — shrew, all stand equal before the challenge of Daedalus's maze — labyrinth, of the English language.

WORLD OF WORDS

Crossword cultists live in a world of two letter words such as oe — a whirlwind of the Faroe Islands, and longer ones McGuffey never put in his readers such as schwa — the upside down "e" in pronunciation symbols, and aposiopesis — not finishing a sentence or thought. Across or down, puzzlists live for today's "ancient people of Gaul" and tomorrow's answer — remi.

The crossword has raised controversy: the New York Times, in a puzzle featuring examples of figures of speech, once chose as a definition for "anticlimax" the phrase "For God, country and Yale" and heard a lot more than Boola Boola from some old Elis.

And it has raised moral crises: Margaret Farrar, the Times' crossword editor, once received a call from a girl asking for a few hints on next Sunday's puzzle so she could impress her boy friend who was a whiz at words. Mrs. Farrar was stricken by demur — uncertainty, n., but finally acceded — agreed, to divulge several words.

HOPE FOR BEST

"I just hope," she said the other day, "I haven't saddled some bright boy with a dumb girl for life."

Mrs Farrar, one of the genro — elder statesmen, Japan, of the crossword since she took them up in 1920 after graduation from Smith College — "I can see my obit now: 'Queen of the crosswords passed out today' — is permissive about giving clues to stumped Sunday puzzlers.

"No use their getting ulcers waiting for the answers next week."

Purists, on the other hand, do puzzles in pen, start at the upper left hand corner and work numerically across and consider dictionary users pariahs — outcasts.

Mrs. Farrar feels dictionaries are mete — allowable. "Puzzles should be fun, not work. Besides the solvers may learn something."

An editor at Dell Publishing Co. agreed dictionaries are a matter of one's own conscience. And a matter of over 300,000 copies of its crossword dictionary Dell sells yearly.

Dell also puts out three puzzle magazines — there are over 40 others — the last nine issues of which sold 550,000 copies. Simon & Schuster has printed over 100 crossword books since it put out the first in the Dec. 21, 1913 issue. The first word down was a synonym for "to govern? —u—" and fans have been moving over and down ever since.

When Richard Simon and Max Schuster began their publishing house. Simon's aunt asked if they wouldn't put out a crossword book because a sick friend of hers liked to do them. S&S took the gamble but printed the book under the name of Plaza Publishing Co. to avoid possible damage to their reputation. They needn't have feared.

The book took off like a simoom — violent desert wind, and the crossword became a fad, nationwide and worldwide. Almost every American paper now has one. During World War II when newsprint shortages cut British papers down to four pages, editors tried to drop the puzzles. Readers waged a minor battle of Britain. The puzzles stayed.

PUZZLE MAKERS

Besides the 30 million solvers the Gallup Poll has estimated are in the United States there are an uncounted number of constructors, or puzzle makers. They include a lifer at the Ohio State Penitentiary who sold 250 last year. There are so many the price for a daily puzzle in the Times, for instance, is only $10 and $25 and up on Sunday.

"Puzzles are like poetry, low paying," says Mrs. Farrar.

But at least one man makes his living constructing puzzles. He is Jack Luzzato, who wanted to be a cartoonist until he sold a puzzle to the World 40 years ago and thought, "Gee, there may be money in this."

Luzzato, who lives in the Bronx, takes three to five hours to make a 21x21 square puzzle. First he lays out the black squares in a symmetrical pattern. Then he fills in the longer words and finally the shorter ones. Finally he picks out definitions for the completed words.

"When you're constructing, for every word you use you should have 1,000 words you could have used. You need instant and total recall of words."

Luzzato is always on the lookout for new words from the space age or television or politics, such as A OK, gobbledegook, orbit or adman. History also turns up new words or definitions for old ones. "About all we had for essene, a very handy word for constructors, was 'Hebrew ascetic' until they discovered the Dead Sea scrolls," said Mrs. Farrar. "It opened up a whole new field."

Luzzato does crosswords for books — his sell up to 300,000 each — for house organs, for promotional campaigns, and even did one for the welding industry. "I didn't know anything about welding, but they sent me a glossary."

Luzzato knows so many words if he sees a new one "it startles me." When Esquire magazine had Mrs. Farrar construct what it called "the world's hardest crossword" recently — it just about was — it allowed readers eight months to finish. Luzzato took three hours.

PUZZLE LEVEL

He aims his puzzles at high school graduates who like to read. "If they are non-readers, what you think are everyday words are completely lost on them."

British puzzles, on the other hand, are so arduous people sometimes feel they have reached their day's apogee — high point — if they fill in one word.

Psychologists, constructors and solvers seem generally agreed people do puzzles to pass time, to learn words, because of the challenge and because "a completed puzzle represents order in a chaotic world."

Whatever the reason, puzzlists seem to have a common bond. One wrote out a proposal on a crossword to his puzzle loving girl. Another husband inserted an affectionate ad to his wife on their anniversary right next to the puzzle where he was sure she would see it.

LOYAL GROUP

The puzzlists are loyal. A woman in California keeps reordering Luzzato's books even though she has done them all just because she likes them. A Buffalo, N. Y. man pays 50 cents for an out-of-town paper just because he likes the puzzle.

The puzzle populace is wordy, all the time writing and phoning. A student begged Mrs. Farrar to keep the daily puzzle off the center columns so he wouldn't have to fold the paper. His professor could hear the pages rustle in the back of the classroom.

She once heard from an indignant woman who said the four-space word for "letters" simply must end in an 's' even though it didn't fit.

"Did you open your mail today?" Mrs. Farrar hinted. The caller sputtered in embarrassment. "It's things like that that make my day," said Mrs. Farrar.

EMBARRASSMENT

Luzzato once suffered the extreme embarrassment of the constructor, a typographical error. He was choosing definitions and misread his handwriting. The correct word was "dope" but he mistook the "d" for a "p" and the definition he made up was "Catholic chief."

"The bombs really fell on that one," he said.

While crossword has become an institution, it is not unmindful of change. Solvers in the '20's were up to their elbows in gnus and emus, rocs and theas. Today puzzles are more topical. Eugene Maleska, a constructor, poet and New York school administrator, has been credited with the step quote puzzle, in which a long quotation wanders down and across and down and across the squares.

What keeps Mrs. Farrar up nights, she says, is thinking up new definitions for old crossword standbys such as aria — solo, and erne — sea eagle, and snee — knife.

But one cliche has gotten too much for her: anoa — Celebes ox. "I've decided to put him out to pasture. For good."

So, in the world of the crossword at least, the anoa is as dead as the dodo — extinct bird of Australia.

WHEREVER HE IS, the crossword puzzle fan keeps busy puzzling away. He works with or without dictionary, depending on whether he (or she) is or is not a purist. His puzzle may be in a newspaper, a book or a magazine. More than 30,000,000 Americans spend their pastime finding synonyms for every sort of word. And the fad, which started in 1913 and got its big spurt after 1924, now is worldwide. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Officers On Duty 80 Feet Underground Are 'Command Away From Nuclear War'

Carmine Parrella, Jr. works 80 feet underground in the Montana mountains, behind an eight - ton door. He and Alan Lutsky are typical of Air Force officers guarding the nation's Minuteman missiles, ready on instant notice to unlock that red box that means World War III.

By DOUG HUIGEN

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) — The front line of what could be an ultimate war is just outside Belt, a sleepy community almost hidden in a valley.

Capt. Carmine D. Parrella Jr. passes Belt on his 30-mile drive to work from Malmstrom Air Force Base at Great Falls.

As an Air Force navigator he could be directing B52s carrying conventional bombs to targets in Viet Nam. Instead, he drives a station wagon to a job where he sits a command away from nuclear war.

The United States' key strategic weapon aimed at deterring World War III is the Minuteman missile system. This nuclear punch has lain dormant for the 3½ years of its existence, but could be triggered within a minute over the Arctic Circle to pre-selected targets that even now might be changing.

Parrella and his deputy commander, Lt. Alan L. Lutsky, have duty for 24 jam-packed hours every fourth day in a Minuteman launch control center 80 feet underground. At their fingertips is the combination of switches needed to hurl 10 or more megatons of nuclear destruction at an enemy.

WATCH PANELS

They watch panels of lights indicating the readiness of the 10 Minutemen in their Alpha Flight. They wait for a coded radio message that could mean either a practice alert or, as Parrella said, "We go to war."

Just inside the door of their command post is a bright red steel box — double locked. It's located about where one might attach a pencil sharpener and, in this electronics filled compartment, it looks about as commonplace.

But Parrella and Lutsky never have opened it during an alert because so far the alerts have ended with the words, "This is a test, this is a test."

To reach Alpha Flight headquarters, you descend a concrete well by elevator. At the bottom of this vertical echo chamber a huge bank vault door confronts you. But all the knobs and levers to open it are on the inside. You are told it might take a skilled demolition team six hours to crack it.

Eventually this 8-ton, 5-foot thick door slowly moves and Lutsky shouts, "Stand clear of the blast door."

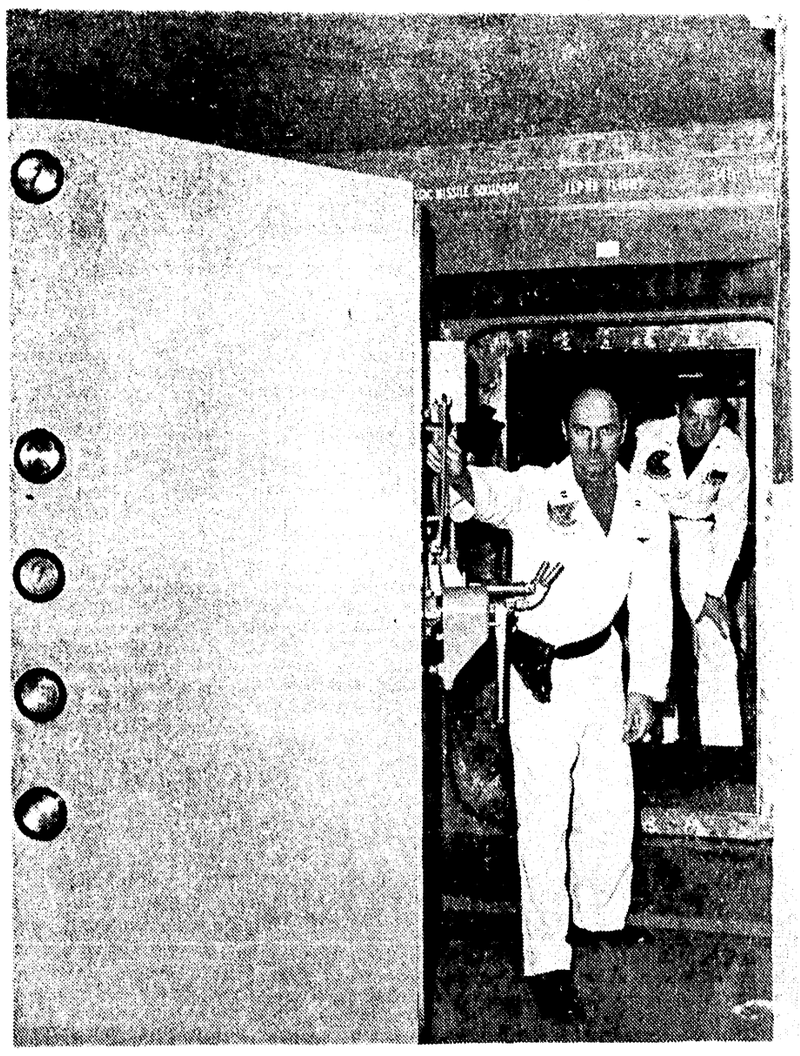

The visitor must stoop low for a tunnel that passes through the steel and concrete outer capsule which protects this nerve center from all outside influences, except possibly a direct enemy hit.

The first thing any visitor to the capsule is told seems fairly obvious: "Don't touch any buttons."

TOUR GUIDES

Parrella and Lutsky are the tour guides. They are on duty alone, save for an occasional maintenance crew.

Removable floor panels, suspended on cushions of air, reveal survival gear and spare equipment. The room has its own water and sewer system and a massive air conditioner to cool men and equipment. Two tape recorders with 24 hour reels record every radio message entering the outpost.

THE DOOR OF the Minuteman missile control room 80 feet underground outside Belt, Mont. opens only from the inside. It is five feet thick and weighs eight tons. A low tunnel leads to the room. Just inside is a double-locked red steel box. It would be opened only if a coded message brought word that the 10 missiles always at the ready were to be sent on their way — in a real war. Opening the door here is Capt. Carmine D. Parrella Jr., the commander. Behind him is his deputy, Lieut. Alan L. Lutsky. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Parella gets to the heart of the equipment and shows a dial switch that can be set for A or B, indicating whether the missiles will be launched in salvo or intermittently according to the war plan for the day.

Attention focuses on the commander's console. Each missile is represented by a row of lights. One light indicates the "bird" is ready to go, another to show it is going.

LIGHTS INDICATE

Other lights indicate problems in the missile or its guidance system, or that security has been violated at the unmanned but fenced launch site.

In the case of malfunction, Parrella and Lutsky may punch a button and "ask" the missile what's wrong. The missile picks out one of the recorded descriptions of what may be wrong and "tells" the launch officers. It's a crisp staccato voice, much like that of a sports announcer.

The Minuteman can remedy minor problems. For serious malfunctions a maintenance crew is dispatched.

Suddenly the "outer security" light for missile Alpha 6 goes on. Parrella and Lutsky know of no planned maintenance checks. In the early days, before the detection system was toned down, this might have been snow, or a wind blown weed against the launch site fence. Whatever it is, Parrella must send a security team.

S. Sgt. Jesus Montanez and two other guards radioed back they had an intruder "spread eagled on the ground." After a few more minutes they recovered "a simulated bomb."

GENTLE TREATMENT

"We're fairly gentle with them," Montanez explained later. The intruder isn't always an Air Force mock strike force from the base. He might be a blundering but innocent civilian, or a saboteur.

The first few hours of the officer's duty fly past. Each message is logged. Looking up from his log sheet, Lutsky asks, "That goes under 'Other' doesn't it?" and Parrella advises, "I have so much stuff under 'Other' I don't know where to put it all."

Supper of fried chicken is brought down the elevator and through the 8-ton door. But the cook forgot bread and Parrella doesn't like to eat without it. Five minutes later, with another opening of the vault door, bread is on the table.

Parrella says that, on occasion, he has known the targets programmed into his minutemen. But he usually doesn't bother to find out.

Lutsky says the exact target is one thing he doesn't want to know. "The less I know the better. What difference does it make? I don't need to know to perform my mission."

Lutsky is 26, single and a native of Brooklyn. Of his three years in the Air Force, half the time has been in missile work. Parrella is 34, married and the father of three children. One of the children locked himself in the the bathroom while dad was on duty this tour and had to be rescued by firemen breaking through the door. Parrella is from Watertown, Mass., and a fan of the Boston Celtics.

CONTINUOUS DUTY

The pace does not always slow down at night. It is night above, but one continuous duty down below. But this night stretched and Lutsky tossed and turned in the curtained bunk. He said it was the heat, and turned down the thermostat.

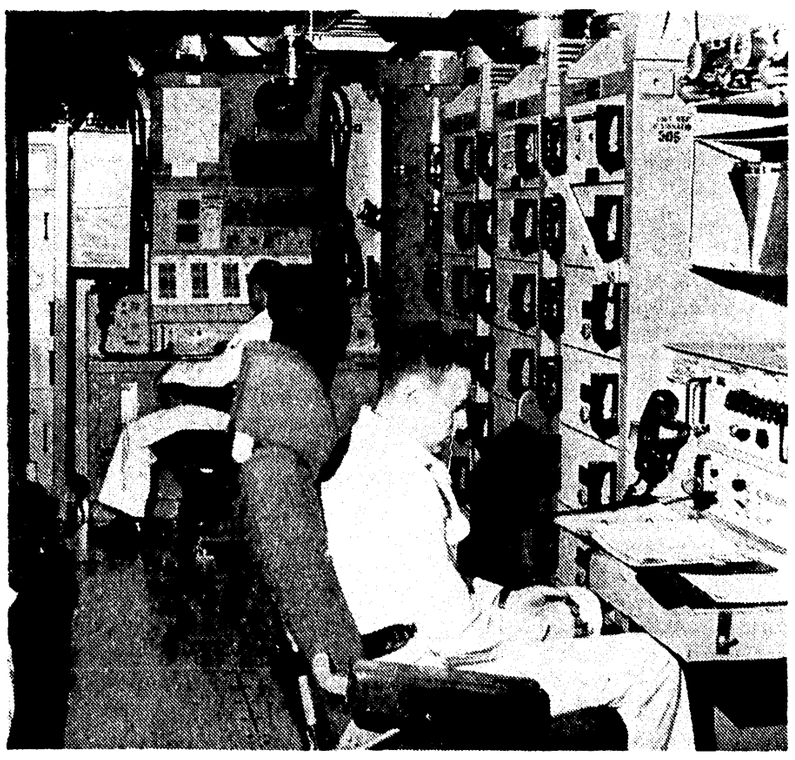

Parrella hitched his gun belt and said he sometimes finds duty boring. He misses flying.

Parrella remembers, as a Strategic Air Command navigator, the old simulated bomb runs. The flight was an active outlet.

Relative physical inactivity of the launch control center is combatted by the unpredictability of test alerts. Occasionally a missile is pulled from its silo and launch crews travel with it to Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., for an actual firing — without the nuclear warhead.

By 1970 the Minuteman system will include 1,000 missiles poised in groups spread from Missouri to the northern Rockies.

This vast system of deterrence is a strange kind of war, a war in which the first shot has yet to be fired.

THE SPECTER OF nuclear war fills this room 80 feet underground outside Belt, Mont. WORDS FOR FUN

What's a nine - letter word for fun and games? That's a crossword, a puzzler for 30 million Americans. Since the first one in 1913, crossword puzzles have developed a huge, loyal, and noisy following.

NEW YORK (AP) — There are gnus in the zoo — and emus, too.

But they are more likely found roaming through what may be America's favorite and frustrating pastime, the crossword puzzle.

They are but two of the printable but perplexing four letter words that regularly pester the more than 30 million Americans who play at crosswords.

The crossword has become a timeless time killer. It has been used in advertising campaigns and for marriage proposals. It sells newspapers, books and magazines by the millions.

It is the great leveler of our time. The office boy and the boss, the commuter and the housewife, the jeune fille — young girl, French, and the old termagant — shrew, all stand equal before the challenge of Daedalus's maze — labyrinth, of the English language.

WORLD OF WORDS

Crossword cultists live in a world of two letter words such as oe — a whirlwind of the Faroe Islands, and longer ones McGuffey never put in his readers such as schwa — the upside down "e" in pronunciation symbols, and aposiopesis — not finishing a sentence or thought. Across or down, puzzlists live for today's "ancient people of Gaul" and tomorrow's answer — remi.

The crossword has raised controversy: the New York Times, in a puzzle featuring examples of figures of speech, once chose as a definition for "anticlimax" the phrase "For God, country and Yale" and heard a lot more than Boola Boola from some old Elis.

And it has raised moral crises: Margaret Farrar, the Times' crossword editor, once received a call from a girl asking for a few hints on next Sunday's puzzle so she could impress her boy friend who was a whiz at words. Mrs. Farrar was stricken by demur — uncertainty, n., but finally acceded — agreed, to divulge several words.

HOPE FOR BEST

"I just hope," she said the other day, "I haven't saddled some bright boy with a dumb girl for life."

Mrs. Farrar, one of the genro — elder statesmen, Japan, of the crossword since she took them up in 1920 after graduation from Smith College — "I can see my obit now: 'Queen of the crosswords passed out today' — is permissive about giving clues to stumped Sunday puzzlers.

"No use their getting ulcers waiting for the answers next week."

Purists, on the other hand, do puzzles in pen, start at the upper left hand corner and work numerically across and consider dictionary users pariahs — outcasts.

Mrs. Farrar feels dictionaries are mete — allowable. "Puzzles should be fun, not work. Besides the solvers may learn something."

An editor at Dell Publishing Co. agreed dictionaries are a matter of one's own conscience. And a matter of over 300,000 copies of its crossword dictionary Dell sells yearly.

Dell also puts out three puzzle magazines — there are over 40 others — the last nine issues of which sold 550,000 copies. Simon & Schuster has printed over 100 crossword books since it put out the first in the Dec. 21, 1913 issue. The first word down was a synonym for "to govern? —u—" and fans have been moving over and down ever since.

When Richard Simon and Max Schuster began their publishing house. Simon's aunt asked if they wouldn't put out a crossword book because a sick friend of hers liked to do them. S&S took the gamble but printed the book under the name of Plaza Publishing Co. to avoid possible damage to their reputation. They needn't have feared.

The book took off like a simoom — violent desert wind, and the crossword became a fad, nationwide and worldwide. Almost every American paper now has one. During World War II when newsprint shortages cut British papers down to four pages, editors tried to drop the puzzles. Readers waged a minor battle of Britain. The puzzles stayed.

PUZZLE MAKERS

Besides the 30 million solvers the Gallup Poll has estimated are in the United States there are an uncounted number of constructors, or puzzle makers. They include a lifer at the Ohio State Penitentiary who sold 250 last year. There are so many the price for a daily puzzle in the Times, for instance, is only $10 and $25 and up on Sunday.

"Puzzles are like poetry, low paying," says Mrs. Farrar.

But at least one man makes his living constructing puzzles. He is Jack Luzzato, who wanted to be a cartoonist until he sold a puzzle to the World 40 years ago and thought, "Gee, there may be money in this."

Luzzato, who lives in the Bronx, takes three to five hours to make a 21x21 square puzzle. First he lays out the black squares in a symmetrical pattern. Then he fills in the longer words and finally the shorter ones. Finally he picks out definitions for the completed words.

"When you're constructing, for every word you use you should have 1,000 words you could have used. You need instant and total recall of words."

Luzzato is always on the lookout for new words from the space age or television or politics, such as A OK, gobbledegook, orbit or adman. History also turns up new words or definitions for old ones. "About all we had for essene, a very handy word for constructors, was 'Hebrew ascetic' until they discovered the Dead Sea scrolls," said Mrs. Farrar. "It opened up a whole new field."

Luzzato does crosswords for books — his sell up to 300,000 each — for house organs, for promotional campaigns, and even did one for the welding industry. "I didn't know anything about welding, but they sent me a glossary."

Luzzato knows so many words if he sees a new one "it startles me." When Esquire magazine had Mrs. Farrar construct what it called "the world's hardest crossword" recently — it just about was — it allowed readers eight months to finish. Luzzato took three hours.

PUZZLE LEVEL

He aims his puzzles at high school graduates who like to read. "If they are non-readers, what you think are everyday words are completely lost on them."

British puzzles, on the other hand, are so arduous people sometimes feel they have reached their day's apogee — high point — if they fill in one word.

Psychologists, constructors and solvers seem generally agreed people do puzzles to pass time, to learn words, because of the challenge and because "a completed puzzle represents order in a chaotic world."

Whatever the reason, puzzlists seem to have a common bond. One wrote out a proposal on a crossword to his puzzle loving girl. Another husband inserted an affectionate ad to his wife on their anniversary right next to the puzzle where he was sure she would see it.

LOYAL GROUP

The puzzlists are loyal. A woman in California keeps reordering Luzzato's books even though she has done them all just because she likes them. A Buffalo, N. Y. man pays 50 cents for an out-of-town paper just because he likes the puzzle.

The puzzle populace is wordy, all the time writing and phoning. A student begged Mrs. Farrar to keep the daily puzzle off the center columns so he wouldn't have to fold the paper. His professor could hear the pages rustle in the back of the classroom.

She once heard from an indignant woman who said the four-space word for "letters" simply must end in an 's' even though it didn't fit.

"Did you open your mail today?" Mrs. Farrar hinted. The caller sputtered in embarrassment. "It's things like that that make my day," said Mrs. Farrar.

EMBARRASSMENT

Luzzato once suffered the extreme embarrassment of the constructor, a typographical error. He was choosing definitions and misread his handwriting. The correct word was "dope" but he mistook the "d" for a "p" and the definition he made up was "Catholic chief."

"The bombs really fell on that one," he said.

While crossword has become an institution, it is not unmindful of change. Solvers in the '20's were up to their elbows in gnus and emus, rocs and theas. Today puzzles are more topical. Eugene Maleska, a constructor, poet and New York school administrator, has been credited with the step quote puzzle, in which a long quotation wanders down and across and down and across the squares.

What keeps Mrs. Farrar up nights, she says, is thinking up new definitions for old crossword standbys such as aria — solo, and erne — sea eagle, and snee — knife.

But one cliche has gotten too much for her: anoa — Celebes ox. "I've decided to put him out to pasture. For good."

So, in the world of the crossword at least, the anoa is as dead as the dodo — extinct bird of Australia.

WHEREVER HE IS, the crossword puzzle fan keeps busy puzzling away. He works with or without dictionary, depending on whether he (or she) is or is not a purist. His puzzle may be in a newspaper, a book or a magazine. More than 30,000,000 Americans spend their pastime finding synonyms for every sort of word. And the fad, which started in 1913 and got its big spurt after 1924, now is worldwide. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Officers On Duty 80 Feet Underground Are 'Command Away From Nuclear War'

Carmine Parrella, Jr. works 80 feet underground in the Montana mountains, behind an eight - ton door. He and Alan Lutsky are typical of Air Force officers guarding the nation's Minuteman missiles, ready on instant notice to unlock that red box that means World War III.

By DOUG HUIGEN

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) — The front line of what could be an ultimate war is just outside Belt, a sleepy community almost hidden in a valley.

Capt. Carmine D. Parrella Jr. passes Belt on his 30-mile drive to work from Malmstrom Air Force Base at Great Falls.

As an Air Force navigator he could be directing B52s carrying conventional bombs to targets in Viet Nam. Instead, he drives a station wagon to a job where he sits a command away from nuclear war.

The United States' key strategic weapon aimed at deterring World War III is the Minuteman missile system. This nuclear punch has lain dormant for the 3½ years of its existence, but could be triggered within a minute over the Arctic Circle to pre-selected targets that even now might be changing.

Parrella and his deputy commander, Lt. Alan L. Lutsky, have duty for 24 jam-packed hours every fourth day in a Minuteman launch control center 80 feet underground. At their fingertips is the combination of switches needed to hurl 10 or more megatons of nuclear destruction at an enemy.

WATCH PANELS

They watch panels of lights indicating the readiness of the 10 Minutemen in their Alpha Flight. They wait for a coded radio message that could mean either a practice alert or, as Parrella said, "We go to war."

Just inside the door of their command post is a bright red steel box — double locked. It's located about where one might attach a pencil sharpener and, in this electronics filled compartment, it looks about as commonplace.

But Parrella and Lutsky never have opened it during an alert because so far the alerts have ended with the words, "This is a test, this is a test."

To reach Alpha Flight headquarters, you descend a concrete well by elevator. At the bottom of this vertical echo chamber a huge bank vault door confronts you. But all the knobs and levers to open it are on the inside. You are told it might take a skilled demolition team six hours to crack it.

Eventually this 8-ton, 5-foot thick door slowly moves and Lutsky shouts, "Stand clear of the blast door."

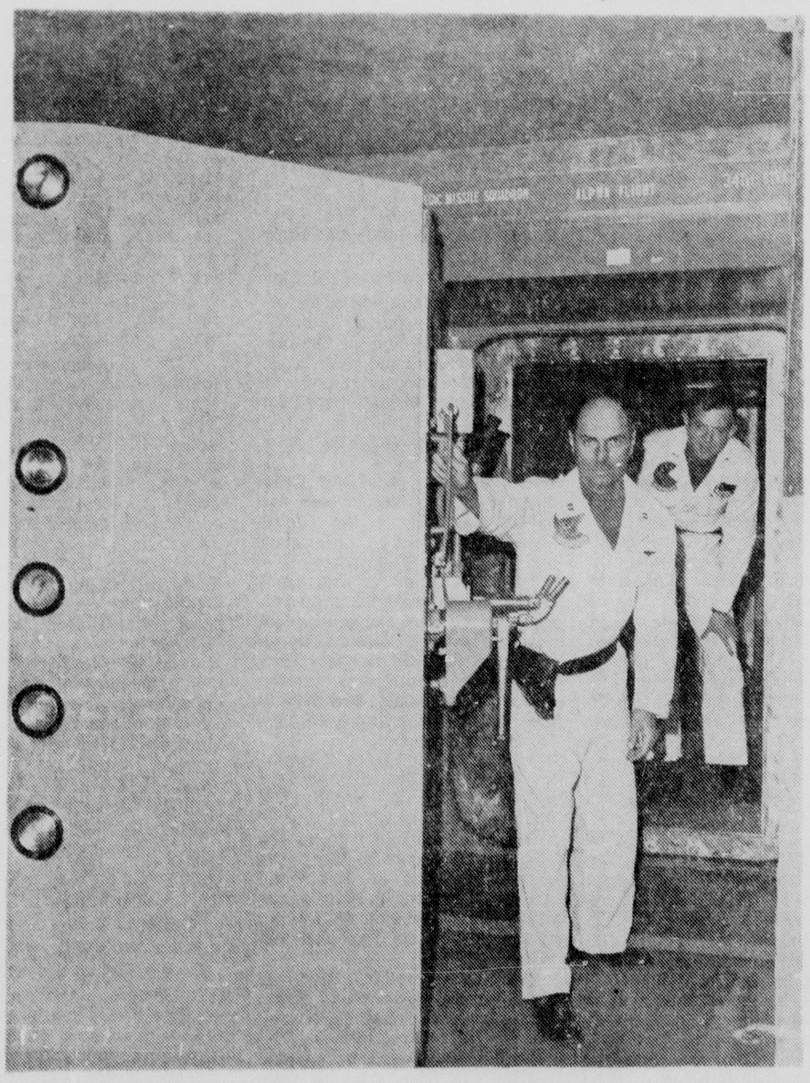

The visitor must stoop low for a tunnel that passes through the steel and concrete outer capsule which protects this nerve center from all outside influences, except possibly a direct enemy hit.

The first thing any visitor to the capsule is told seems fairly obvious: "Don't touch any buttons."

TOUR GUIDES

Parrella and Lutsky are the tour guides. They are on duty alone, save for an occasional maintenance crew.

Removable floor panels, suspended on cushions of air, reveal survival gear and spare equipment. The room has its own water and sewer system and a massive air conditioner to cool men and equipment. Two tape recorders with 24 hour reels record every radio message entering the outpost.

THE DOOR OF the Minuteman missile control room 80 feet underground outside Belt, Mont. opens only from the inside. It is five feet thick and weighs eight tons. A low tunnel leads to the room. Just inside is a double-locked red steel box. It would be opened only if a coded message brought word that the 10 missiles always at the ready were to be sent on their way — in a real war. Opening the door here is Capt. Carmine D. Parrella Jr., the commander. Behind him is his deputy, Lieut. Alan L. Lutsky. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Parella gets to the heart of the equipment and shows a dial switch that can be set for A or B, indicating whether the missiles will be launched in salvo or intermittently according to the war plan for the day.

Attention focuses on the commander's console. Each missile is represented by a row of lights. One light indicates the "bird" is ready to go, another to show it is going.

Other lights indicate problems in the missile or its guidance system, or that security has been violated at the unmanned but fenced launch site.

In the case of malfunction, Parrella and Lutsky may punch a button and "ask" the missile what's wrong. The missile picks out one of the recorded descriptions of what may be wrong and "tells" the launch officers. It's a crisp staccato voice, much like that of a sports announcer.

Living Dangerously

People who live dangerously are likely to reach sudden and calamitous ends. We hope this does not apply to the couple whose plight we mention below and we also hope it doesn't apply to many millions of the rest of us who "live too close to the edge" financially.

During World War II, when things seemed to be going well for Adolf Hitler's Germany and Benito Mussolini's Italy, three men whose names had rung throughout the world chose to live dangerously. They were Hitler, Mussolini and one of Mussolini's sons.

Hitler was too busy screaming and urging his countrymen and allies to further onslaughts to get much fun out of that kind of life but both of the Mussolinis expressed their pleasure in it. Benito came up with the declaration that everyone ought to live dangerously and after that his son rejoiced in living dangerously as he mowed down helpless peasants with machine gun fire from an airplane.

As history tells us, all of these men experienced the fact that "he that liveth by the sword shall die by the sword." Trapped in a cellar as a rat might be trapped in a hole, Hitler reportedly ended his own life and, also reportedly, his mistress chose to go along with him in a similar action. Mussolini and his mistress were riddled with bullets from the guns of a firing squad. Mussolini's son's plane was shot down and he reportedly died in flames.

Somewhat less spectacular than these events are the plights of millions of people in the United States who live "dangerously" on the edge of economic disaster. And these are not the people who have been placed in the "poverty" class and have achieved a sort of "security" through government doles. They are people who are making salaries that once would have been considered huge but which have shrunk so badly under government - inspired inflation that the "good-salaried" people can hardly see a livelihood as far ahead as one week or two weeks at the outside.

As a boy reared on a farm, this writer used to try to figure out how long his family and he could live if cut off from contact with other people and from all outside sources of food. This may have been a strange line of thought for a boy but a good many fathers have had disturbing thoughts of that kind. Anyhow, the boy thought that, with the vegetables and other foods that could be raised and with the cows and other animals that could be eaten, his family could live a year or two strictly on its own. How many families could do that now?

National Observer tells of the plight of one particular family.

"With six kids and a wife and with exactly $218.35 cents in the bank, you might say we're living dangerously," said Jerry F., and you would be absolutely right. If some big emergency should come up, I'd really have only one thing to fall back on — my credit. We pay our bills and that ought to mean something if things ever got tough.

"Naturally, if I had a choice, I'd rather have cash to fall back on. But we can't seem to get away from living from payday to payday with nothing left over. I can remember a time when, if you'd told me I'd be making more than $8,000 a year and complaining it wasn't enough, I'd have said you were crazy. But, of course, that was when money was worth more."

"And before you had six kids," his wife, Edith, interposed, "and before you had an expensive wife."

Her husband winked at her and said: "She'd like to be an expensive wife but after she gets done wasting my money on hamburger meat and milk and shoes and luxuries like that, she doesn't have anything left to be expensive with.

Jerry, who has a white-collar job in a Milwaukee plant, is rather typical of that middle-class group, which now lives more dangerously than either those with big incomes or those with little or none.

When the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, during the early years of his presidency, ordered huge acreages of cotton and other crops plowed under and ordered the slaughtering of many thousands of cattle and hogs, so that prices would go higher and the depression would end, he started a system of inflation that robbed the United States of most of its world trade and that put a gigantic squeeze on "middle-class" people, formerly the class most admired in this country.

Now, these middle - class people have to put up most of the money for those who can't or won't work -- and it is a job that is almost too big for them. They are bent far over from this burden of "living dangerously."

Behind Closed Doors

We've long felt that there is need for legislation governing treatment of animals used in medical research. We are not against reasonable use of animals for that purpose. But there have been altogether too many cases, in recent years, where animals have been callously abused or neglected before, during and after the experimentation.

Public outcry has now brought some Congressional action. Already passed by both House and Senate is the Poage Bill (HR 13881) to eliminate pet theft and cruel treatment of animals by persons who collect them for sale to laboratories. The bill must now be considered by a joint committee because of revisions made to it in the Senate, ostensibly to extend coverage of its humane treatment provisions into research laboratories also.

Ironically, approval of the bill in its Senate-revised form, instead of protecting animals in the laboratories, could open the way for even worse abuses than those which prompted the bill in the first place. The Senate - passed version contains this built-in "escape clause" which makes its humane provisions literally unenforceable: "Sec. 17. (a) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as authorizing the Secretary (of Agriculture) to promulgate rules, regulations, or orders for the handling, care, treatment, or inspection of animals during actual research or experimentation by a research facility as determined by such research facility."

We expect most researchers don't mistreat animals. But the fact that the National Society for Medical Research has always opposed legislation on animal usage — yet heartily endorses Senate - revised HR 13881 with its "escape clause" — indicates to us that some things are being done in the name of research which someone doesn't want the public to know about. And since we taxpayers foot the bill, to the tune of more than $1 billion to date, for much of this kind of research (through government grants), we have another interest in addition to our concern that the animals involved should be humanely treated.

We think the original HR 13881 covers well the matter of pet theft and handling of animals by dealers. The laboratory coverage added by the Senate is woefully inadequate and should be stricken out by the joint committee. Then there should be separate legislation to keep within reasonable bounds what goes on behind those laboratory doors. In case you feel the same way, and want to make your feelings known where it counts, the key legislators on that joint committee are Senator Warren Magnuson and Congressman W. R. Poage.

Taxation On Trucks

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

Last week I noticed a cartoon on the Editorial Page of your paper showing a car jammed in between two trucks on the highway with a caption suggesting that on holidays trucks be barred from the road. If it becomes necessary to take some equipment off the highways why not consider the non-essential rather than the trucks that are bringing us food to eat, equipment to build highways, homes, lakes, etc. as well as other items we need daily. Also, since each truck pays more than 40 times as much to build and maintain the roads as each car does, it seems the cartoon was a bit out of order. Further, for those who might not know, you cannot put a truck on the road with any type of oversize load at night, on Sunday, on any holiday or any day when we have inclement weather. This situation has existed for 30 years even though the trucks are paying the bill.

The only dangerous part of publishing such a cartoon is that some legislator might see it, and not knowing any better, might think it is a good idea. The next thing you know it will be law and we will all have to live by it.

If you need any figures on what cars pay and what trucks pay, I will be glad to furnish them. Roughly, I pay about $135.00 per year on a car and about $4600.00 per year on each truck. The truck figure does not include a state permit on each oversize load that costs from $1.00 to $250.00 each.

If you should run low on cartoons to put on the Editorial Page try getting one of a man doing a day's work of any kind. I know that it would frighten quite a few people but once they get used to it they would find out that work is good for ulcers, for fighting poverty, restoring human dignity and a lot of hidden benefits.

On Captive Nations

Abbeville, La.

To the Editor:

While the attention of the whole world is concentrated on the war for freedom in Viet [illegible] to be competely forgotten that slavery exists in [illegible] other parts of the globe.

In 1959 the Congress of the United States passed a unanimous resolution to proclaim the third week of July -- Captive Nations Week, and express the hope that someday those nations enslaved by the Communists [illegible] free and independent.

A similar resolution was adopted by the Louisiana State Senate in 1962.

In commemoration of the Captive Nations Week which we observe this year during July 10-16, I, a native son of the enslaved Ukraine, and now proud American, ask you kindly to find the space in your paper for my thoughts:

1). The war in Viet Nam [illegible] can be ended with one stroke of the pen of our Commander - in - Chief is only one of the chapters in the Global struggle between Communism and American Democracy.

2). The Citizens of this great country cannot serve more effectively to the cause of freedom in the world, than to expose and condemn the existing slavery in the countries dominated by the Communists, and give to these enslaved nations all possible moral support.

3). The United States of America cannot survive and live free by continuing the practice of double standards of morality in international affairs: from one side, give support to the cause of independence of Asian and African nations, and from the other side refuse the same rights to the East European nations.

(4) The issue of free elections should not be limited to South Viet Nam alone, and the Parallels, such as the 17th in Viet Nam, or the 38th in Korea should not be the boundaries of freedom.

The United States of America should request free elections, supervised by the U.N. in all enslaved nations.

Then there is no doubt that freedom will ring, for freedom on the Globe is indivisible.

'Disobedience' Drive Is Employing Youths

DR. MARTIN Luther King may be preaching the doctrine of non-violence for his coming "civil rights" disobedience campaign in the big cities, but he and his aides appear to be organizing for violence.

Federal authorities keeping a close watch on his Southern Christian Leadership Conference report that lieutenants of King are contacting Chicago street gangs and bringing them into his civil rights movement to fight "the power structure."

King, whose organization is studying the Buddhist use of street gangs in Saigon demonstrations, has put the Reverend A. R. Sampson in charge of enlisting gang leaders in SCLC's new militant youth movement.

According to an investigative report being circulated inside the Justice Department, King plans to organize the teenage gangs into protest and marching groups in all major U. S. cities if his Chicago experiment is a success.

The report reveals that King personally has attended several meetings with gang leaders, including one early in June at a downtown Chicago motel, where 50 groups held their "first annual gangs convention."

Attending this gathering were the "Blackstone Rangers," "The Disciples," "Del Vikings," "Peacemakers" and "Vice Lords." They are estimated to have a combined membership of more than 1,000.

A government informant who sat in on one meeting said that King and his aides harangued the gang leaders about the "unjust society" and urged them to join their civil rights group fight against its evils — "slums, poverty and police brutality."

THE PROMISED LAND — In the sing-song rhythm that has become his trademark, Dr. King chanted, "If we are to deal with our problems, we have to get power. And power in Chicago, as in other large cities, is being so well organized that we can get the most powerful political organization in the country to say 'yes' when it wants to say 'no.'"

Sampson was more specific in his appeal to the gang leaders. He promised to establish a Committee on Police Service (COPS), consisting of "local gangs" to pressure the present city and state government to make changes and meet their demands.

Other SCLC speakers, according to the government report, told the gang members: "The real foes are Mayor Daley, policemen, slumlords, bankers, businessmen and school administrators."

Government informants reporting on other SCLC gang organization activities warned, "The gang members are being incited to violence instead of being taught nonviolence." They stressed that the gang leaders "have little or no understanding of civil rights" but do know how to use force.

King's new strategy of involving street gangs in his mounting civil rights activities is being watched by federal authorities because of his announced plans to resort to widespread civil disobedience.

They are concerned that if King uses these gangs to disrupt the flow of the city's transportation system, as he has indicated, he could trigger a Watts-like eruption in the nation's second largest city.

GOING INTERNATIONAL — There also are signs that Dr. King contemplates using his new militant youth drive to help "internationalize" the turbulent civil rights movement.

Preparations already are underway to use these "street gangs" in a potentially stormy move against South Africa, whose apartheid policy has been under violent attack by the civil rights group in this country.

The gangs are to be used in giant demonstrations in New York and other U. S. cities after the World Court, at The Hague, rules on South Africa's old League of Nations mandate over Southwest Africa.

The international tribunal, which will hand down its decision next week, is expected to rule against South Africa. Dr. King's plan calls for civil rights groups to organize demonstrations this fall and winter demanding that the U. S. support "full economic sanctions against the South African government in accordance with the recommendations of the UN Special Committee on Apartheid."

The King demonstrators will also call on the United Nations to use force, if necessary, to induce South Africa to give up its rule over Southwest Africa and change its own racial policies.

Dr. King also is discussing with other civil rights leaders the need for demonstrations in Washington later this year to force early ratification by the Senate of the International Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Racial Discrimination.

This 25 - article convention adopted last December by the United Nations General Assembly, will be signed for the U.S. by Ambassador Arthur Goldberg at a special ceremony to be organized in New York later this month.

U. S. adherence to the treaty will not become effective until it has been ratified by a two-thirds Senate vote. The UN convention rules that "all human beings are equal before the law and are entitled to equal protection of the law against any discrimination and against any incitement to discrimination."

MORE CIVIL RIGHTS — Floyd B. McKissick, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, is saying that his upcoming visit to Cambodia has the backing of Dr. Martin Luther King. Both King and McKissick are against the Viet Nam war and have been invited by the Cambodian government to make an on-the-spot investigation of U. Political Revolution Strikes In Virginia

TWO STURDY OLD oaks fell from the Virginia sky on Tuesday, in a cliff-hanging Democratic primary that spoke dramatically of a changing Virginia in a changing land.

Until quite recently, the politics of Virginia had been solidly cast in the inscrutable mold of the one-party South. Gentlemen aspired to high office, won high office (or got appointed to it), and then held on for life. Now and then, they might encounter a brisk skirmish at the polls; ordinarily, they ran for reelection unopposed. In the past 96 years, Virginia's two Senate seats have been held by only 14 men. Harry Byrd, Sr., served for 32 years prior to his resignation last November; Carter Glass served for 26, Claude Swanson for 23. Longevity has always been the custom here.

A. Willis Robertson came to the Senate by this pleasant path. He served ably in the House for seven terms, knocking over occasional opponents by two-to-one. In 1946, a few months after Glass's death, a Virginia State Democratic Convention was summoned to nominate a successor. In the genteel fashion of such things, for Virginians are nothing if not genteel, the word was brought to Congressman Howard Worth Smith, who also aspired to the Senate seat, that the job was to go to Robertson instead. Judge Smith, finding himself out-maneuvered, moved to make it unanimous. Robertson walked over to the Senate, and the Judge remained a fixture in the House.

IN THE 20 YEARS since that State convention, neither of the old warhorses had been put to a serious workout on the track. They had gone their conservative ways, Robertson as chairman of Senate Banking, Smith as chairman of House Rules. When they came to Tuesday's primary, Robertson was 79; the judge was 83. It seemed unthinkable that either could be in trouble at the polls.

But they were. Robertson lost to a young Portsmouth lawyer William B. Spong, by 760 votes in 432,000 cast. The judge was toppled by another young buck, George C. Rawlings, Jr., by 364 votes in 53,000 cast. Meanwhile, young Harry Byrd, Jr., running for his father's unexpired term, barely won his nomination by one per cent of the vote. It was political revolution in a State where revolutions, or even raised voices, are regarded as downright uncouth; but it was perhaps not so great a revolution as the first stunned announcements made out.

Spong, now a highly regarded member of the State Senate, is by no means a knee-jerk liberal. He benefitted from labor support, but he opposes the repeal of 14(b). He had solid Negro support, but he never has qualified as a Kennedy civil-righter. He accepts the realities of a big Federal government, but during his campaign he opposed the building of two Federal dams in Virginia. Spong may be a liberal in the Virginia view; in any other view, he stands modestly to the left of McKinley.

THE REAL SHOCKER was Rawlings' victory over Smith. He won it in an abusive, relentless campaign, in which he vilified his older opponent as an enemy of the Negro, an enemy of the people, and finally as a crook who used his office for personal gain. Friends of Judge Smith will not forget the scurrility; they may well support, en masse, the Republican nominee who will be running against Rawlings in November. The last word has yet to be heard from the Eighth District.

Tuesday's earthquake in Virginia is part of a fault-line that runs down the east coast to Florida, and over to Louisiana and Arkansas. North Carolina recently experienced tremors, when a liberal with the good Southern name of Galifianakis swamped an heir to the Reynolds tobacco fortune. South Carolina is undergoing a metamorphosis that sees donkeys turn into elephants. In Georgia, Congressman "Bo" Callaway, a Republican, confidently expects to win the governorship. Florida is shaking with gubernatorial spasms. In Alabama, John Sparkman is in trouble with Republican opposition. Mississippi has gone wet and seceded from the Democratic union. What has become of stability in the South?

IT IS GONE with the wind, to borrow a famous line — the winds of urbanization, Negro voting, reapportionment. But these winds are affected by other forces, blowing counter-clockwise: Lurleen Wallace in Alabama, the Conservative Party in Virginia. Old-line Southerners, wedded to the sound doctrine, do not know whether to hang on to the house of their Democratic fathers, with all its strange new boarders, or to seek new lodgings with the resurgent Republicans. And the Republicans, for their part, do not know whether to run after the colored vote or to run away from it.

Nothing is sacred in Dixie any more. The success of Spong and Rawlings in Virginia, piled on top of other alarums and excursions, is bound to stimulate young woodsmen to sharpen their axes elsewhere. If Willis Robertson and Howard Smith could be felled, why not Russell, Ellender, Hill, Eastland, McClellan, Stennis, and Long of Louisiana? And in the House, why not tackle Colmer, Gathings, McMillan, Mills, Hebert, and Rivers? These are the dangerous and unsettling ideas let loose in a hurricane season.

Republican UN Plea Seen As Ridiculous

THE GOP'S Republican Coordinating Committee deplores, of all things, the neglect of the United Nations under the Johnson Administration. Even at the UN, it is said, laughter rocked the halls. No one can be more inured to demagogy than the UN. That the GOP's statement should actually provoke mirth suggests its very special silliness.

It isn't that UN members are suddenly taking themselves less seriously — that is not likely to happen in that sanctuary of self-importance. It is that the specific recommendations of the Republican Coordinating Committee were either ridiculously idealistic, or dismayingly tautologous. It was as if the GOP had issued a pronouncement recommending an amalgamation in the Near East, the new state of Israbia; or as if it had called, with much drum-rolling, for the peaceful solution of world problems.

"The Republicans' call for an effort to settle financing problems," reported the New York Times, "moved to laughter the delegates who were asked about it. At the moment, a committee of experts from 14 nations seems hopelessly deadlocked in its efforts merely to agree on recommendations to the General Assembly, much less solve the financial problems . . . Republican Party proposals for overhauling the United Nations were viewed by most sources here today as simple partisan politics . . . The most general response here was that the Republican statement showed a lack of understanding of the current situation."

YOU CAN SAY that again.

The current situation, of course, is divided in two parts. In the East there is Viet Nam. In the West there is De Gaulle.

The reason why Lyndon Johnson has not dealt with Viet Nam via the United Nations is that Viet Nam is too important a matter to consign to a) the babbling ministates of the UN to deal with, and b) the major presences in the UN are already committed: the Soviet Union is against us; England is, more or less neutrally, for us; France is, more or less neutrally, against us. So what is left for the UN to contribute? The views on the subject of Alex Quaison-Sackey?

By the same token, the reason why the UN is not being consulted about the great changes going on in Europe is that Charles de Gaulle has always had a crowning contempt for "les soi-disant Nations Unies," and it would no more occur to De Gaulle to consult U Thant about his mission to Moscow, or for that matter for Moscow to consult U Thant about De Gaulle's mission to Moscow, than it would occur to either one of them to consult Walt Disney.

APART FROM the inherent powerlessness of the UN, which issues from a mechanical dilemma (the UN is less powerful than its constituent members) and a spiritual dilemma (the UN seeks to serve goals some of its constituent members do not seek to serve), the UN becomes every day more ridiculous. Last year the Maldive Islands made it all the way to membership status with a population of 97,000, which is larger than Stamford, Connecticut, but considerably smaller than Peoria, Illinois, and in a year or two will come the seven politically troublesome tinies carved out of old British shiekdoms along the Persian Gulf (combined pop. 86,000). And then after than, who knows? Every atoll with a post office will demand its vote (exactly equal, by the way, to that of France, Britain, the U. S., the USSR). Some are muttering that the UN will lose its political effectiveness. Others are muttering that at least the UN has a problem its own size.

Living Dangerously

People who live dangerously are likely to reach sudden and calamitous ends. We hope this does not apply to the couple whose plight we mention below and we also hope it doesn't apply to many millions of the rest of us who "live too close to the edge" financially.

During World War II, when things seemed to be going well for Adolf Hitler's Germany and Benito Mussolini's Italy, three men whose names had rung throughout the world chose to live dangerously. They were Hitler, Mussolini and one of Mussolini's sons.

Hitler was too busy screaming and urging his countrymen and allies to further onslaughts to get much fun out of that kind of life but both of the Mussolinis expressed their pleasure in it. Benito came up with the declaration that everyone ought to live dangerously and after that his son rejoiced in living dangerously as he mowed down helpless peasants with machine gun fire from an airplane.

As history tells us, all of these men experienced the fact that "he that liveth by the sword shall die by the sword." Trapped in a cellar as a rat might be trapped in a hole, Hitler reportedly ended his own life and, also reportedly, his mistress chose to go along with him in a similar action. Mussolini and his mistress were riddled with bullets from the guns of a firing squad. Mussolini's son's plane was shot down and he reportedly died in flames.

Somewhat less spectacular than these events are the plights of millions of people in the United States who live "dangerously" on the edge of economic disaster. And these are not the people who have been placed in the "poverty" class and have achieved a sort of "security" through government doles. They are people who are making salaries that once would have been considered huge but which have shrunk so badly under government - inspired inflation that the "good-salaried" people can hardly see a livelihood as far ahead as one week or two weeks at the outside.

As a boy reared on a farm, this writer used to try to figure out how long his family and he could live if cut off from contact with other people and from all outside sources of food. This may have been a strange line of thought for a boy but a good many fathers have had disturbing thoughts of that kind. Anyhow, the boy thought that, with the vegetables and other foods that could be raised and with the cows and other animals that could be eaten, his family could live a year or two strictly on its own. How many families could do that now?

National Observer tells of the plight of one particular family.

"With six kids and a wife and with exactly $218.35 cents in the bank, you might say we're living dangerously," said Jerry F., and you would be absolutely right. If some big emergency should come up, I'd really have only one thing to fall back on — my credit. We pay our bills and that ought to mean something if things ever got tough.

"Naturally, if I had a choice, I'd rather have cash to fall back on. But we can't seem to get away from living from payday to payday with nothing left over. I can remember a time when, if you'd told me I'd be making more than $8,000 a year and complaining it wasn't enough, I'd have said you were crazy. But, of course, that was when money was worth more."

"And before you had six kids," his wife, Edith, interposed, "and before you had an expensive wife."

Her husband winked at her and said: "She'd like to be an expensive wife but after she gets done wasting my money on hamburger meat and milk and shoes and luxuries like that, she doesn't have anything left to be expensive with.

Jerry, who has a white-collar job in a Milwaukee plant, is rather typical of that middle-class group, which now lives more dangerously than either those with big incomes or those with little or none.

When the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, during the early years of his presidency, ordered huge acreages of cotton and other crops plowed under and ordered the slaughtering of many thousands of cattle and hogs, so that prices would go higher and the depression would end, he started a system of inflation that robbed the United States of most of its world trade and that put a gigantic squeeze on "middle-class" people, formerly the class most admired in this country.

Now, these middle - class people have to put up most of the money for those who can't or won't work — and it is a job that is almost too big for them. They are bent far over from this burden of "living dangerously."

Behind Closed Doors

We've long felt that there is need for legislation governing treatment of animals used in medical research. We are not against reasonable use of animals for that purpose. But there have been altogether too many cases, in recent years, where animals have been callously abused or neglected before, during and after the experimentation.

Public outcry has now brought some Congressional action. Already passed by both House and Senate is the Poage Bill (HR 13881) to eliminate pet theft and cruel treatment of animals by persons who collect them for sale to laboratories. The bill must now be considered by a joint committee because of revisions made to it in the Senate, ostensibly to extend coverage of its humane treatment provisions into research laboratories also.

Ironically, approval of the bill in its Senate-revised form, instead of protecting animals in the laboratories, could open the way for even worse abuses than those which prompted the bill in the first place. The Senate - passed version contains this built-in "escape clause" which makes its huname provisions literally unenforceable: "Sec. 17. (a) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as authorizing the Secretary (of Agriculture) to promulgate rules, regulations, or orders for the handling, care, treatment, or inspection of animals during actual research or experimentation by a research facility as determined by such research facility."

We expect most researchers don't mistreat animals. But the fact that the National Society for Medical Research has always opposed legislation on animal usage — yet heartily endorses Senate - revised HR 13881 with its "escape clause" — indicates to us that some things are being done in the name of research which someone doesn't want the public to know about. And since we taxpayers foot the bill, to the tune of more than $1 billion to date, for much of this kind of research (through government grants), we have another interest in addition to our concern that the animals involved should be humanely treated.

We think the original HR 13881 covers well the matter of pet theft and handling of animals by dealers. The laboratory coverage added by the Senate is woefully inadequate and should be stricken out by the joint committee. Then there should be separate legislation to keep within reasonable bounds what goes on behind those laboratory doors. In case you feel the same way, and want to make your feelings known where it counts, the key legislators on that joint committee are Senator Warren Magnuson and Congressman W. R. Poage.

Taxation On Trucks

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

Last week I noticed a cartoon on the Editorial Page of your paper showing a car jammed in between two trucks on the highway with a caption suggesting that on holidays trucks be barred from the road. If it becomes necessary to take some equipment off the highways why not consider the non-essential rather than the trucks that are bringing us food to eat, equipment to build highways, homes, lakes, etc. as well as other items we need daily. Also, since each truck pays more than 40 times as much to build and maintain the roads as each car does, it seems the cartoon was a bit out of order. Further, for those who might not know, you cannot put a truck on the road with any type of oversize load at night, on Sunday, on any holiday or any day when we have inclement weather. This situation has existed for 30 years even though the trucks are paying the bill.

The only dangerous part of publishing such a cartoon is that some legislator might see it, and not knowing any better, might think it is a good idea. The next thing you know it will be law and we will all have to live by it.

If you need any figures on what cars pay and what trucks pay, I will be glad to furnish them. Roughly, I pay about $135.00 per year on a car and about $4600.00 per year on each truck. The truck figure does not include a state permit on each oversize load that costs from $1.00 to $250.00 each.

If you should run low on cartoons to put on the Editorial Page try getting one of a man doing a day's work of any kind. I know that it would frighten quite a few people but once they get used to it they would find out that work is good for ulcers, for fighting poverty, restoring human dignity and a lot of hidden benefits.

On Captive Nations

Abbeville, La.

To the Editor:

While the attention of the whole world is concentrated on the war for freedom in Viet Nam, it seems to be competely forgotten that slavery exists in many other parts of the globe.

In 1959 the Congress of the United States passed a unanimous resolution to proclaim the third week of July — Captive Nations Week, and express the hope that someday those nations enslaved by the Communists will live free and independent life.

A similar resolution was adopted by the Louisiana State Senate in 1962.

In commemoration of the Captive Nations Week which we observe this year during July 10-16, I, a native son of the enslaved Ukraine, and now proud American, ask you kindly to find the space in your paper for my thoughts:

1). The war in Viet Nam which can be ended with one stroke of the pen of our Commander - in - Chief is only one of the chapters in the Global struggle between Communism and American Democracy.

2). The Citizens of this great country cannot serve more effectively to the cause of freedom in the world, than to expose and condemn the existing slavery in the countries dominated by the Communists, and give to these enslaved nations all possible moral support.

3). The United States of America cannot survive and live free by continuing the practice of double standards of morality in international affairs: from one side, give support to the cause of independence of Asian and African nations, and from the other side refuse the same rights to the East European nations.

(4) The issue of free elections should not be limited to South Viet Nam alone, and the Parallels, such as the 17th in Viet Nam, or the 38th in Korea should not be the boundaries of freedom.

The United States of America should request free elections, supervised by the U.N. in all enslaved nations.

Then there is no doubt that freedom will ring, for freedom on the Globe is indivisible.

'Disobedience' Drive Is Employing Youths

DR. MARTIN Luther King may be preaching the doctrine of non-violence for his coming "civil rights" disobedience campaign in the big cities, but he and his aides appear to be organizing for violence.

Federal authorities keeping a close watch on his Southern Christian Leadership Conference report that lieutenants of King are contacting Chicago street gangs and bringing them into his civil rights movement to fight "the power structure."

King, whose organization is studying the Buddhist use of street gangs in Saigon demonstrations, has put the Reverend A. R. Sampson in charge of enlisting gang leaders in SCLC's new militant youth movement.

According to an investigative report being circulated inside the Justice Department, King plans to organize the teenage gangs into protest and marching groups in all major U. S. cities if his Chicago experiment is a success.

The report reveals that King personally has attended several meetings with gang leaders, including one early in June at a downtown Chicago hotel, where 50 groups held their "first annual gangs convention."

Attending this gathering were the "Blackstone Rangers," "The Disciples," "Del Vikings," "Peacemakers" and "Vice Lords." They are estimated to have a combined membership of more than 1,000.

A government informant who sat in on one meeting said that King and his aides harangued the gang leaders about the "unjust society" and urged them to join their civil rights group fight against its evils — "slums, poverty and police brutality."

THE PROMISED LAND — In the sing-song rhythm that has become his trademark, Dr. King chanted, "If we are to deal with our problems, we have to get power. And power in Chicago, as in other large cities, is being so well organized that we can get the most powerful political organization in the country to say 'yes' when it wants to say 'no.'"

Sampson was more specific in his appeal to the gang leaders. He promised to establish a Committee on Police Service (COPS), consisting of "local gangs" to pressure the present city and state government to make changes and meet their demands.

Other SCLC speakers, according to the government report, told the gang members, "The real foes are Mayor Daley, policemen, slumlords, bankers, businessmen and school administrators."

Government informants reporting on other SCLC gang organization activities warned, "The gang members are being incited to violence instead of being taught nonviolence." They stressed that the gang leaders "have little or no understanding of civil rights" but do know how to use force.

King's new strategy of involving street gangs in his mounting civil rights activities is being watched by federal authorities because of his announced plans to resort to widespread civil disobedience.

They are concerned that if King uses these gangs to disrupt the flow of the city's transportation system, as he has indicated, he could trigger a Watts-like eruption in the nation's second largest city.

The reason why Lyndon Johnson has not dealt with Viet Nam via the United Nations is that Viet Nam is too important a matter to consign to a) the babbling ministates of the UN to deal with, and b) the major presences in the UN are already committed: the Soviet Union is against us; England is, more or less neutrally, for us; France is, more or less neutrally, against us. So what is left for the UN to contribute? The views on the subject of Alex Quaison-Sackey?

By the same token, the reason why the UN is not being consulted about the great changes going on in Europe is that Charles de Gaulle has always had a crowning contempt for "les soi-disant Nations Unies," and it would no more occur to De Gaulle to consult U Thant about his mission to Moscow, or for that matter for Moscow to consult U Thant about De Gaulle's mission to Moscow, than it would occur to either one of them to consult Walt Disney.

APART FROM the inherent powerlessness of the UN, which issues from a mechanical dilemma (the UN is less powerful than its constituent members) and a spiritual dilemma (the UN seeks to serve goals some of its constituent members do not seek to serve), the UN becomes every day more ridiculous Last year the Maldive Islands made it all the way to membership status with a population of 97,000, which is larger than Stamford, Connecticut, but considerably smaller than Peoria, Illinois, and in a year or two will come the seven politically troublesome tinies carved out of old British shiekdoms along the Persian Gulf (combined pop. 86,000). And then after than, who knows? Every atoll with a post office will demand its vote (exactly equal, by the way, to that of France, Britain, the U. S., the USSR). Some are muttering that the UN will lose its political effectiveness. Others are muttering that at least the UN has a problem its own size.

Sunday Thought

The following poem called "Not Growing Old" and written by John E. Roberts, was sent to us by Dewey Humphries:

They say that I am growing old,
I've heard them tell it times untold,
In language plain and bold—
But I'm not growing old.
This frail old shell in which I dwell
Is growing old, I know full well—
But I am not the shell.
What if my hair is turning gray?
Gray hairs are honorable, they say,
What if my eyesight's growing dim?
I still can see to follow Him
Who sacrificed His life for me
Upon the Cross of Calvary.
What should I care if time's old plow
Has left its burrows on my brow?
Another house not made by hand,
Awaits me in the Glory Land.
What though I falter in my walk?
What tho' my tongue refuse to talk?
I still can tread the Narrow way,
I still can watch and praise and pray.
My hearing may not be so keen
As in the past it may have been,
Still I can hear my Savior say
In whispers soft, "This is the way."
The outward man — do what I can
To lengthen out his life's short span—
Shall perish, and return to dust,
As everything in nature must.
The inward man, the Scriptures say,
Is growing stronger every day,
Then how can I be growing old
When safe within my Savior's fold?
Ere long my soul shall fly away
And leave this tenament of clay,
"This robe of flesh I'll drop and rise
To seize the everlasting prize" —
And Prove that I'm not growing old.

The Middle Class

What ever happened to the great Middle Class of the American Society? Once it was tossed around frequently, but seldom is it used any more.

Critics of society once took great pleasure in attacking the middle class as the repository of Puritan virtues, the fountainhead of anti-intellectualism, and the fortress of parochialism and prejudice.

But not any more. Maybe it's because the middle class affluence is so widespread in this country that the old labels simply become rather meaningless. And we also strongly suspect that the middle class is winning sympathy because it's carrying the brunt of the tax load and all of the ideas and programs hatched in Washington.

We recently read good criteria for determining whether a person falls into the middle class and if you're wondering whether you're in this most American of all classes, here are the guidelines to make your determination:

If taxes — income, property, sales, excise, and hidden varieties — give you constant pain, that's part of the middle class symptoms.

If your son or daughter is not eligible to earn college money in part-time work because your income exceeds the maximums set by the government's youth opportunity program, sorry, sir, you're middle class.

If you don't qualify for rent subsidies, welfare assistance, and free medical care, you must be middle class.

If you have to pay all of your bills you can be pretty sure you're middle class.

If you dabble in stocks but own so few of them that a dip in the market really doesn't shake you, then you're definitely stuck in the middle class.

The middle class person is the forgotten man of the 20th Century, that is, until April 15 every year. For Uncle Sam knows, even if he doesn't admit it, that it is the thousands of dollars from the millions of the middle class, not the millions of dollars from the thousands of the rich, that keep this country operating and paying the tab for the Great Society.

Interesting Facts

Things you might not know:

If you drive after taking six drinks, there's a 1 in 20 chance you'll be involved in an accident. But if you try to drive after 20 drinks, according to the American Insurance Association, it's a 50-50 gamble whether you and the car will get home safely.

Kids today may call their dad anything from "Popsy" to "hey, you." But in early New England, Puritan children addressed their father as "honored sir."

The late William Randolph Hearst was a man who didn't like to be crowded. When he went to the theater alone, he always bought two seats — one for himself, the other for his hat.

Some octopuses are better quick change color artists than chameleons. In the twinkling of an eye they can switch from chocolate brown to milky white or brick red.

College boys now have less and less desire to become tired businessmen. Only 14 per cent of the 1964 graduates from Harvard took business jobs, as compared with nearly 40 per cent of those graduating five years before.

You probably never have seen an oyster eat corn on the cob, and you probably never will, but, it has been found that small amounts of cornstarch in water help growing oysters put on from 30 to 40 per cent more meat.

Prosperity certainly has its headaches. Americans gulped enough aspirin tablets last year to provide two a week for every man, woman and child in the country.

If the United States reaches a peak population of 432 million in the year 2010 — a statistical possibility — half of all Americans will be under 25.

The World's Week In Focus

Chicago Stunned By Revolution, Massacre

By Oland Silk

DESPITE THE INCLUSION of two spy stories and a murder mystery in last week's log of events, they provided little diversion. The stakes were too high because they were for real. Danger to the national security and mass homicide doesn't make for pleasant summer reading. Add to that a slum revolution in Chicago and you have a solemn survey indeed.

EIGHT YOUNG student nurses were slaughtered in their residential dormitory early Thursday morning in southeast Chicago. The killer escaped, but a survivor of the two-hour horror can identify him, if and when, he is caught. She is Corazon Amurao, 23, an exchange student from the Philippines. She escaped by rolling under a bed in the room where she and the other eight girls were bounded and gagged. The killer didn't bother to count his victims. As he took them into other rooms to kill them one by one, he overlooked the Filipina girl cowering under the bed.

Several hours after the massacre, Miss Amurao broke her bonds and staggered to the second story balcony screaming: "ALL DEAD! All except me! I'm the only one alive!"

Police found most of the victims in two rooms, flung across each other in bloody disarray. The investigating coroner said it was the "Crime of the Century," while Police Commander Francis Flanagan said, "We've got a sub-animal here. I've never seen anything more horrible than this."

Seven of the young women were white, one was Negro, and one Filipina. They were training at the South Chicago Community Hospital. They lived in one of three town house dorms the hospital rented for student nurses seven blocks away.

MISS AMURAO was placed under sedation. Police planned further questioning of her Friday, although she had given them a description to go on in their intense search for the maniac-killer. From the girl's fragmentary account, he had short brown hair, probably crew-cut, and was about six feet tall. Several suspects were arrested, but none was held. Forty police were assigned to the case, with more expected as availability made it possible.

FRIDAY'S session with the survivor would fill in many details. Prior to that, police pieced together a tentative chronology:

The young man entered the dorm through a kitchen window of the first floor. Confronted by Miss Amurao and another nurse, the man, holding a gun in one hand and a knife in the other, forced them to a room where he bound and gagged them. As girls returned from dates, he seized and brought them to the same room. He finally had nine young women in the room and then began taking them away one at a time. They were all strangled or stabbed to death.

CLUES: A houseful of fingerprints and a man's sweat soaked sweatshirt.

BIGGEST PUZZLE: How did he conduct the mass slaughter without neighbors hearing a single outcry?

The fingerprints and the eye witness were at week's end, the best things going for Chicago's beleaguered police department.

As for the spy thrillers, they were short takes, two novellas combined in one weekly package.

Security Case

FIRST, FBI agents arrested Lt. Col. William Whalen, charged with conspiring to sell defense secrets to the Russians. Before his 1961 retirement, Whalen, 51, worked in the office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Prior to that he was assistant to the Army's chief of staff for intelligence. Agents picked Whalen up at his Alexandria, Va., home where they found him puttering around in moccasins, sports shirt and work pants.

FOR WHATEVER consolation it might be, the conspiracy charges were just that and nothing more. The accusation didn't say he sold the secrets, merely conspired to do so.

Specifically, Whalen is accused of plotting to sell atomic, missile, and bomber secrets to two form staff members of the Soviet Embassy in Washington between 1959 and 1963.

Included in the secrets was information relating to the retaliation plans of the Strategic Air Command. Conviction on the charges could bring a death sentence.

WHALEN is alleged to have netted $5,500 for his treasonous doings. His Russian contacts, Col. Gergei Edemski and Mikhail A. Shumaev, have since returned to Russia. They would have been diplomatically immune from prosecution had they been caught at the time.

The State Department was silent on just what impact Whalen's alleged conspiracy may have had on national security. Obviously, there's much more to the story. The Russians would not have paid him $5,500 unless some goods were delivered.

WHALEN denied everything. "I don't know what it's all about," he said. "I am almost certain I will be exonerated in time."

Mrs. Whalen, the former Bernadine Belmore of Memphis, told newsmen in near-hysterical tones: "I just can't believe Bill is involved. Bill is not well. He has had four heart attacks in the last six years. I don't know what is to become of us."

WHALEN is free on a $15,000 bond. The Whalens have one child, an 11-year-old daughter, Kathy.

THE SECOND thriller had a happier ending. It involved the attempt by two Czechoslovak diplomats to plant a listening device in the State Department over a five-year period. They failed because the American they trusted worked for the FBI.

The espionage story and how it boomeranged was related by the State Department Wednesday. The timing was suspicious. It came the day after Col. Whalen was arrested, and apparently was designed to take the edge off the Russian coup.

THE DOUBLE - agent hero was John Mrkva, whose friendship the Czech envoys cultivated pursuant to bugging the State Department. Mrkva (pronounced Meerkva) reported their first approach to the FBI — an invitation to an embassy party. He was at that time a messenger for the State Department's passport Division. In all, with FBI approval, he had 48 meetings with the Czechs between 1961 and 1966.

The pay was lousy. He received only $3,344 for pre-approved "secret" data. They finally worked up to the big deal — bugging the office of the director of Eastern European affairs, and later that of Undersecretary of State Ball. A defective device was put in, which the Czechs found most unsatisfactory. After that, they abandoned the scheme.

One of them was ordered out of the country. The other is currently employed by the U. N. and is immune to prosecution or expulsion from the U. S.

FOR HIS work, Mrkva was promoted and nominated for a service award.

In a purely domestic case, the Justice Department admitted bugging the hotel suite of Fred B. Black Jr., who appealed a tax evasion conviction to the Supreme Court. The Court bars evidence gained through wiretapping and other listening devices. Earlier, it had refused to hear Black's case, then reconsidered after a memorandum revealed that the FBI had eavesdropped on Black's Las Vegas hotel room. A Justice spokesman said the bugging was done under a practice initiated prior to 1963, continuing into 1965. President Johnson barred the practice except for national security in June 30 of last year.

Small Civil War

VIOLENCE erupted in Chicago Tuesday night after police turned off a fire hydrant in the Negro neighborhood. It's a common practice, though illegal, for hydrants to be turned on during the summer so children can cool off. Negroes claimed hydrants were allowed in the adjoining Italian-American section, and turned them back on. Off they went again. Angry, black violence then took over.

For three straight nights police battled roving bands of looters throwing rocks, bottles, and homemade bombs. By Friday, it became a small civil war. Police poured into the streets to engage hit-and-run gangs of Negro youths who continued to set fires, loot stores and fight savage gun fights. Snipers fired away from darkened tenement windows. Thousands of others were active in a 9 square mile area. They faced about 500 policemen armed with shotguns and tear gas grenades.

BY NOON, Friday the toll was: two Negroes dead, one a pregnant 14 year old. Seven policemen wounded. Scores were injured. Over 200 arrested.

Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner called out 3,000 National Guardsmen, but they were not slated for duty before Friday night.

LIKE MOST riots, this one was triggered by an incident — the hydrant shutoff. Police claimed the water was needed to keep the pressure up in case of fire. Reason soon dissipated as heat and tempers soared.

MARTIN Luther King Jr. went into the streets one night to quell the outrages, but to no avail. He met earlier with Mayor Richard Daley and made several demands: a civilian review board, a Negro in second command of police department, and efforts to eradicate the slums. Daley told newsmen the city already has extensive anti-slum programs and that he expects to eliminate all slums by 1967.

THE MAYOR refused to blame King for the rioting, but said members of his staff were fomenters of the strife. Daley said they had been in Chicago for a year, giving instructions in guerrilla warfare. Police were considering charging 21 persons with conspiracy to commit treason. The suspects — 18 men and three women — were allegedly members of a Negro extremist group which advocates violence against all whites.

WHAT WITH a mass murderer loose and an ethnic revolution on their hands, Chicago's city fathers and their celebrated police boss, Orlando Wilson, were not likely to soon forget the week of July 15, 1966.

Virginia Primary

VIRGINIA'S Democratic primary was a shocker. Defeated by young challengers were Rep. Howard Smith, 83, conservative titan of the House Rules Committee, and Senator A. Willis Robertson, 79, chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. Smith fell by 364 votes to attorney George Rawlings, a moderate, and Robertson lost to William Spong, a state senator, by 764 votes.

Senator Harry Byrd Jr., beat out strong challenger Armistead Boothe, by

"JUDGE" SMITH

8,000. For the usually streamlined Byrd machine, the primary performance was not exactly sensational.

SMITH will be missed, for his wit and country squire ways, if not for the autocratic use (critics say mis-use) of his powers. The judge more than any other man kept the Great Society from coming years ago. He bottled up social and civil rights legislation by the bucketful. When things got too hot, he "retired" to his Virginia home to rest, or went to see about his barn, said to be the most inflammable anywhere.

Replacing Smith on Rules will be Rep. Colmer of Mississippi. Slotted for Robertson's Banking chairmanship is Sen. John Sparkman of Alabama. Southern seniority is still a factor in the Washington power structure. But for how long?

OTHER political developments:

REPUBLICANS set a fire under the Democrats with veiled charges that the Administration dropped anti-trust suits against companies whose executives contributed to Democratic party. The charges narrowed to one company—Anheiser-Busch of St. Louis, a major brewer.

Attorney General Katzenbach said a suit was dropped against the firm, but that the action was dictated by merit alone.

Later, it was revealed that Vice President Humphrey and a Justice Department anti-trust division official were flown to St. Louis this week by Anheuser-Busch Co. less than a month after the suit was dropped. Humphrey denied knowledge of the suit. He went to St. Louis to attend the All-Star baseball game and a Democratic luncheon.

Disclosure of the trip came one day after it was ascertained that A-B executives had contributed a total of $10,000 to the President's Club, composed of persons who contribute $1,000 to the Democratic party. Dismissal of the suit came within one month after the donations.

Rep. Charles Goodell, R-N. Y., said in a House speech the suit dismissal raised "serious ethical questions." If there was any basis to the charges of political favoritism, the Republicans had themselves a red hot issue. But denials poured in thick and heavy.

A Quick Pot Pourri

ASIDE FROM the beer bust in St. Louis, there was a tragic climb in heat wave deaths. In the city and surrounding area, 124 heat - attributed deaths were recorded from Friday - to - Friday. Most of them were aged people with various ailments.

Viet Nam remained status quo. As a dove of peace, Mrs. Indira Gandhi of India fluttered against a Russian wall of intransigence. They would not assist peace efforts. Red China stuck its tongue out at her, saying it was an American-Soviet-Indian plot.

PEKING pulled the biggest surprise of the week. She virtually told the North Vietnamese they would have to fight the war alone.

Thus far, retaliation for the Hanoi-Haiphong bombings has been confined to threats of war criminal trials for captured pilots and the Soviet and Polish boycotts of track meets in the United States.

The Machinist strike against five major airlines continued in stalemate. Negotiations between the airlines, the AFL-CIO union, and the government have been intense, but futile. The machinists are demanding pensions, hospitalization for dependents, longer vacations, higher overtime rates and an eighth paid holiday.

The Week's Twin Cities-Area News In Review

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

If Monroe becomes a thriving port city — and it will — the entire area will be largely in the debt of one man. He's H. K. Thatcher—HKT, in the lexicon of newspaper headlines—and he's living proof that youth and old age are states of mind, where thinking is concerned.

Over 400 top officials from throughout Louisiana and Arkansas assembled last week at Thatcher's home base in El Dorado, Ark., to recognize part of the debt to the 75-year-old Ouachita River Valley Association executive vice president.

In his job — he's been with the ORVA for 16 years — "Mr. Ouachita" or "Ole Man River," as you please, has been consistently on the firing line for a nine - foot Ouachita channel, a project now moving smartly in its major construction phases.

TYLER

Once, years ago, Thatcher, coming through Monroe aboard a Corps of Engineers inspection craft, voiced special hopes for the Twin City area's future. He obviously meant it.

In the words of Arkansas Sen. John L. McClellan, featured speaker for H. K. Thatcher Day in El Dorado, "Nothing short of an international catastrophe can prevent the Ouachita Navigation Project from going on to completion. We intend to expedite it."

This attitude in Washington, among men not so naturally inclined as McClellan to favor work on the Ouachita River, is perhaps the most singular tribute to "Big Daddy." Arkansas Chamber of Commerce Officer Frank Cantrell summed it nicely when he said, "Everybody knows H. K. Thatcher. He has opened doors and made contacts that we didn't even know about."

McClellan spurned the term "lobbyist" as applied to HKT, preferring "advocator," while Federal District Judge Oren Harris, through a spokesman, praised Thatcher's "advocacy, footwork and consistent nagging."

Twin City and Ouachita Parish delegates were in El Dorado en masse to pay their respects at the gathering, which itself was so much en masse that the crowd and the occasion had to be moved to larger quarters. As for the honoree, the event also represented the celebration of his birthday and 51st wedding anniversary as well.

As the Indians hereabouts might have said in their day — "May his river run forever."

SHORT SUPPLY

Turning from consideration of the "Father of Waters," any review of last week worth its salt would have to linger on a type of water in less than short supply for some little while — rainfall. There was none at all, but residents were beginning to crease and fold in heat that daily seemed to be setting new records.

Friday's heat — 101 degrees — and humidity would have laid a gila monster on its back, and readings throughout the week stayed in the middle to high 90s. Of course, the Twin City's record high, established in 1918, is 109, though people, not yet acquainted with the parlor sport of air-conditioner-hovering, were built for wear in those days. Hot weather today is patently unfair.

Monroyans, switching on the freon in unprecedented numbers, did, however, set two new records in city annals, as they raised and then re-raised the level of the greatest electrical demand ever experienced, ultimately by over 6,000 KW. The city's turbines at one point Tuesday were generating 67,300 KW. Then, Thursday, this figure was surpassed, pushed to 67,600 KW and approximately doubling the voltage required by Basil Rathbone to create the Frankenstein monster.

Officials foresaw the day, by 1968, when demand will catch the generators' present potential of 99,500 KW, although, fortunately, by then the $15.7 million bond issue passed in February will have increased that potential by 66,000 KW. Work has begun on a new substation at Selman Field, due for completion in time to parry zooming requirements in the Selman-Northeast Louisiana State College areas.

ABUNDANCE

If rain was in short supply last week, there was an abundance of official meetings taking place, as will be made abundantly clear.

The abundance of the Ouachita Parish Police Jury was especially marked, since this group bunched both its regular July meetings into the one week, allowing attendance at the New Orleans convention, starting today, of the National Association of County Officials.

But, apart from the convention, it was contention that reared its head at both the Monday and Thursday meetings. In chronological order, the Monday session was dominated by unsuccessful opposition to new management practices on Cheniere Lake, including the lowering of the water level by six feet.

The jury approved the measures, recommended by professional biologists and game management experts, in a firmly divided 12-7 vote that also saw division among the large gallery audience which attended. The water lowering, one of 10 suggestions endorsed, will produce a two-to-three-times increase in fish yield, officials maintain.

When Thursday arrived, after Wednesday, there was no abatement in controversial subjects to discuss, though the jury did succeed, on the third try, in selling its road department headquarters site on the Sterlington Road. Purchaser was Riley Buick at $71,000, a figure which still leaves jurors $49,000 to find to cover fully the cost of relocating the road department.

There's no serious question, however, of the ultimate economy of the move, or that it will result in substantial savings in coming years.

The main question that was posed Thursday was an old one for the jury, dealing with what have come to be known popularly as "private driveways." Setting the spark to the powder this time was a project offered by Lloyd Coon, Ward 6, and narrowly approved in a 10-9 count, though the pot is still boiling for an attempted replay.

What was passed is an approximately one-mile gravel strip of the Ward Road Extension, due to cost some $9,000, including a three-span bridge. Opponents said there are no houses along the proposed route.

The jury Thursday also came under the charge of "unethical" practices, when an unsuccessful bidder on a truck rig bought by the group said the specifications were written around a unit sold by the successful bidder. Another bidder objected to the way specifications are checked, while jurors pointed out their advertisements could legally specify equipment by brand name if they desired it so.

The meetings, as can be seen, were busy ones, and included further an announcement of import relative to the parish-wide progress planning which has caused such a stir in recent months.

Robert Downing, Ward 10, listed his special six-man committee ready to meet again on the subject with Monroe and other officials to consider, for a second time this year, closer governmental cooperation in areas of mutual concern. Tentative date designated was mid-September.

New West Monroe Mayor W. B. "Bert" Hatten and the town's five aldermen happened to be at the same Thursday jury meeting, ostensibly to introduce themselves. West Monroe may be involved in further planning.

MORE MEETINGS

West Monroe leaders were holding meetings of their own last week. Committee assignments were parceled Tuesday as the new administration gathered for the first time regularly.

It also was the occasion of action in making firm appointments in the city clerk and city attorney spots, with Mrs. Floy Kilpatrick, veteran deputy clerk, elevated in the first instance, and barrister Bill Norris named as city attorney.

In other activity, budget hearings were begun during the week with department heads, aimed at adopting a 1966-67 spending schedule on July 26.

Meanwhile, it was another old nemesis — sewage disposal — that promised recurring headaches for the young administration. State Board of Health officials in New Orleans Friday announced a new "harder line" seeking the speedup of sewage elimination from Louisiana streams, and named West Monroe "one of the worst problems."

Hatten, who pledged "preferred attention," of course, faces the same prospect of calling a large bond election to finance disposal that apparently has chilled matters in the past. The city, all the same, already has purchased 155 acres as the site of a proposed oxidation pond.

West Monroe will be asked "in a week or two" by the state to report concrete plans for endings its dumping of sewage into the river.

As meetings went, the Monroe City Council's session Tuesday was mild by comparison. It lasted, in fact, just under eight minutes, the principal action during which was rejection of an $18,529 bid on an underground sprinkler system for the new Government Center.

Plans also were announced, however, for purchase of four new chlorinators to replace three "borrowed" ones being used to control sewage odor. The city has disclaimed responsibility for continued complaints on the southside of unpleasant smells, as well as house stains, such as have been the subject of two inconclusive official inquiries.

Incidentally, on the subject, the police jury tabled the request of its conservation committee that the problem be subjected to a federal study of possible causes.

DEATH STRIKES

Death struck repeatedly last week on the local and area scene, claiming some of its most prominent figures. G. E. "Buddy" Erskine, 65 and sheriff of Caldwell Parish from 1936 to 1964, died after a long illness. Lawrence J. Hulin, also 65, of Shreveport, who formerly managed the Virginia Hotel in Monroe, died the previous Saturday. Dead in West Monroe after suffering an apparent heart attack was J. H. "Jake" Netherland, office supervisor for the Louisiana Power and Light Company, an employee of that firm for 27 years.

Tragedy came in many guises as the week wore on. An East Carroll Parish search for two youths near Fletcher's Landing on the Mississippi River ended with the discovery of their bodies. The pair — James Henry Turner, 16, and Tony Murray, 12, both of the Transylvania community — drowned.

Also drowned in a separate incident was a 56-year-old Delhi man, James Robert Kolb, who fell from his boat into Bayou Macon Baker Cutoff Lake. Three children, with him in the boat, were unable to save the man, but succeeded in swimming to safety themselves.

In still another incident, two children were killed and a third seriously injured when a car struck their motorcycle north of Holly Ridge. The dead were identified as Mike and Susan Clack, 12 and 10, while their brother, Ralph, 8, underwent surgery in Monroe. Parents are Mr. and Mrs. Claydeen Clack, Route 4, Rayville.

Meantime, investigation was continuing as Concordia Parish authorities probed the shooting death of Robert Harper, 51, of Acme. Also shot in the incident near New Era were brothers Homer and Ivy Lipsey, recuperating in Natchez, Miss.

NORTHEAST NEWS

A sizeable portfolio was accumulated last week by followers of news from Northeast Louisiana State College. Their clippings undoubtedly were headed by the selling of $3.7 million in bonds by the State Board of Education for construction of two new dormitories at the school. Low interest figure on the 40-year bonds came to an average of 4.93836 per cent. A total of $4.2 million in bonds was sold for similar work at Louisiana Tech in Ruston.

But back at Northeast, in another action, the low bid of $52,775 was accepted for the lighting of Brown Stadium at its new location on Peyton Drive, across Bayou DeSiard from the main campus.

At the same time, plans were being finalized for summer commencement exercises on August 6, when approximately 180 degrees will be distributed, 67 of them to graduate students. With luck, the temperature no longer will be hitting 100 by then.

And last, though in no sense least, there was shuffling of beauty titles among the college's pretty coeds. Joy Woods, chosen the week before as Miss Louisiana at the Jaycee pageant in Monroe, was compelled by top state status to relinquish her lesser (in geographic scope) crown as Miss Northeast. Thereby donning the Northeast diadem, the college pageant's first runnerup, Kathy Mooney, now reigns.

What though I falter in my walk?
What tho' my tongue refuse to talk?
I still can tread the Narrow way,
I still can watch and praise and pray.
My hearing may not be so keen
As in the past it may have been,
Still I can hear my Savior say
In whispers soft, "This is the way."
The outward man — do what I can
To lengthen out his life's short span—
Shall perish, and return to dust,
As everything in nature must.
The inward man, the Scriptures say,
Is growing stronger every day,
Then how can I be growing old
When safe within my Savior's fold?
Ere long my soul shall fly away
And leave this tenament of clay,
"This robe of flesh I'll drop and rise
To seize the everlasting prize" —
And Prove that I'm not growing old.

The Middle Class

What ever happened to the great Middle Class of the American Society? Once it was tossed around frequently, but seldom is it used any more.

Critics of society once took great pleasure in attacking the middle class as the repository of Puritan virtues, the fountainhead of anti-intellectualism, and the fortress of parochialism and prejudice.

But not any more. Maybe it's because the middle class affluence is so widespread in this country that the old labels simply become rather meaningless. And we also strongly suspect that the middle class is winning sympathy because it's carrying the brunt of the tax load and all of the ideas and programs hatched in Washington.

We recently read good criteria for determining whether a person falls into the middle class and if you're wondering whether you're in this most American of all classes, here are the guidelines to make your determination:

— If taxes — income, property, sales, excise, and hidden varieties — give you constant pain, that's part of the middle class symptoms.

— If your son or daughter is not eligible to earn college money in part-time work because your income exceeds the maximums set by the government's youth opportunity program, sorry, sir, you're middle class.

— If you don't qualify for rent subsidies, welfare assistance, and free medical care, you must be middle class.

— If you have to pay all of your bills you can be pretty sure you're middle class.

— If you dabble in stocks but own so few of them that a dip in the market really doesn't shake you, then you're definitely stuck in the middle class.

The middle class person is the forgotten man of the 20th Century, that is, until April 15 every year. For Uncle Sam knows, even if he doesn't admit it, that it is the thousands of dollars from the millions of the middle class, not the millions of dollars from the thousands of the rich, that keep this country operating and paying the tab for the Great Society.

The World's Week In Focus

Chicago Stunned By Revolution, Massacre

By Oland Silk

DESPITE THE INCLUSION of two spy stories and a murder mystery in last week's log of events, they provided little diversion. The stakes were too high because they were for real. Danger to the national security and mass homicide doesn't make for pleasant summer reading. Add to that a slum revolution in Chicago and you have a solemn survey indeed.

EIGHT YOUNG student nurses were slaughtered in their residential dormitory early Thursday morning in southeast Chicago. The killer escaped, but a survivor of the two-hour horror can identify him, if and when, he is caught. She is Corazon Amurao, 23, an exchange student from the Philippines. She escaped by rolling under a bed in the room where she and the other eight girls were bounded and gagged. The killer didn't bother to count his victims. As he took them into other rooms to kill them one by one, he overlooked the Filipina girl cowering under the bed.

Several hours after the massacre, Miss Amurao broke her bonds and staggered to the second story balcony screaming: "ALL DEAD! All except me! I'm the only one alive!"

Police found most of the victims in two rooms, flung across each other in bloody disarray. The investigating coroner said it was the "Crime of the Century," while Police Commander Francis Flanagan said, "We've got a sub-animal here. I've never seen anything more horrible than this."

Seven of the young women were white, one was Negro, and one Filipina. They were training at the South Chicago Community Hospital. They lived in one of three town house dorms the hospital rented for student nurses seven blocks away.

MISS AMURAO was placed under sedation. Police planned further questioning of her Friday, although she had given them a description to go on in their intense search for the maniac-killer. From the girl's fragmentary account, he had short brown hair, probably crew-cut, and was about six feet tall. Several suspects were arrested, but none was held. Forty police were assigned to the case, with more expected as availability made it possible.

FRIDAY'S session with the survivor would fill in many details. Prior to that, police pieced together a tentative chronology:

The young man entered the dorm through a kitchen window of the first floor. Confronted by Miss Amurao and another nurse, the man, holding a gun in one hand and a knife in the other, forced them to a room where he bound and gagged them.As girls returned from dates, he seized and brought them to the same room. He finally had nine young women in the room and then began taking them away one at a time. They were all strangled or stabbed to death.

CLUES: A houseful of fingerprints and a man's sweat-soaked sweatshirt.

BIGGEST PUZZLE: How did he conduct the mass slaughter without neighbors hearing a single outcry?

The fingerprints and the eye witness were at week's end, the best things going for Chicago's beleaguered police department.

As for the spy thrillers, they were short takes, two novellas combined in one weekly package.

Security Case

FIRST, FBI agents arrested Lt. Col. William Whalen, charged with conspiring to sell defense secrets to the Russians. Before his 1961 retirement, Whalen, 51, worked in the office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Prior to that he was assistant to the Army's chief of staff for intelligence. Agents picked Whalen up at his Alexandria, Va., home where they found him puttering around in moccasins, sports shirt and work pants.

FOR WHATEVER consolation it might be, the conspiracy charges were just that and nothing more. The accusation didn't say he sold the secrets, merely conspired to do so.

Specifically, Whalen is accused of plotting to sell atomic, missile, and bomber secrets to two form staff members of the Soviet Embassy in Washington between 1959 and 1963.

Included in the secrets was information relating to the retaliation plans of the Strategic Air Command. Conviction on the charges could bring a death sentence.

WHALEN is alleged to have netted $5,500 for his treasonous doings. His Russian contacts, Col. Gergei Edemski and Mikhail A. Shumaev, have since returned to Russia. They would have been diplomatically immune from prosecution had they been caught at the time.

The State Department was silent on just what impact Whalen's alleged conspiracy may have had on national security. Obviously, there's much more to the story. The Russians would not have paid him $5,500 unless some goods were delivered.

WHALEN, denied everything. "I don't know what it's all about," he said. "I am almost certain I will be exonerated in time."

Mrs. Whalen, the former Bernadine Belmore of Memphis, told newsmen in near-hysterical tones: "I just can't believe Bill is involved. Bill is not well. He has had four heart attacks in the last six years. I don't know what is to become of us."

WHALEN is free on a $15,000 bond. The Whalens have one child, an 11-year-old daughter, Kathy.

THE SECOND thriller had a happier ending. It involved the attempt by two Czechoslovak diplomats to plant a listening device in the State Department over a five-year period. They failed because the American they trusted worked for the FBI.

The espionage story and how it boomeranged was related by the State Department Wednesday. The timing was suspicious. It came the day after Col. Whalen was arrested, and apparently was designed to take the edge off the Russian coup.

THE DOUBLE - agent hero was John Mrkva, whose friendship the Czech envoys cultivated pursuant to bugging the State Department. Mrkva (pronounced Meerkva) reported their first approach to the FBI — an invitation to an embassy party. He was at that time a messenger for the State Department's passport Division. In all, with FBI approval, he had 48 meetings with the Czechs between 1961 and 1966.

The pay was lousy. He received only $3,344 for pre-approved "secret" data. They finally worked up to the big deal — bugging the office of the director of Eastern European affairs, and later that of Undersecretary of State Ball. A defective device was put in, which the Czechs found most unsatisfactory. After that, they abandoned the scheme.

One of them was ordered out of the country. The other is currently employed by the U. N. and is immune to prosecution or expulsion from the U. S.

FOR HIS work. Mrkva was promoted and nominated for a service award.

In a purely domestic case, the Justice Department admitted bugging the hotel suite of Fred B. Black Jr., who appealed a tax evasion conviction to the Supreme Court. The Court bars evidence gained through wiretapping and other listening devices. Earlier, it had refused to hear Black's case, then reconsidered after a memorandum revealed that the FBI had eavesdropped on Black's Las Vegas hotel room. A Justice spokesman said the bugging was done under a practice initiated prior to 1963, continuing into 1965. President Johnson barred the practice except for national security in June 30 of last year.

Small Civil War

VIOLENCE erupted in Chicago Tuesday night after police turned off a fire hydrant in the Negro neighborhood. It's a common practice, though illegal, for hydrants to be turned on during the summer so children can cool off. Negroes claimed hydrants were allowed in the adjoining Italian-American section, and turned them back on. Off they went again. Angry, black violence then took over.

For three straight nights police battled roving bands of looters throwing rocks, bottles, and homemade bombs. By Friday, it became a small civil war. Police poured into the streets to engage hit-and-run gangs of Negro youths who continued to set fires, loot stores and fight savage gun fights. Snipers fired away from darkened tenement windows. Thousands of others were active in a 9 square mile area. They faced about 500 policemen armed with shotguns and tear gas grenades.

BY NOON, Friday the toll was: two Negroes dead, one a pregnant 14 year old. Seven policemen wounded. Scores were injured. Over 200 arrested.

Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner called out 3,000 National Guardsmen, but they were not slated for duty before Friday night.

LIKE MOST riots, this one was triggered by an incident — the hydrant shutoff. Police claimed the water was needed to keep the pressure up in case of fire. Reason soon dissipated as heat and tempers soared.

MARTIN Luther King Jr. went into the streets one night to quell the outrages, but to no avail. He met earlier with Mayor Richard Daley and made several demands: a civilian review board, a Negro in second command of police department, and efforts to eradicate the slums. Daley told newsmen the city already has extensive anti-slum programs and that he expects to eliminate all slums by 1967.

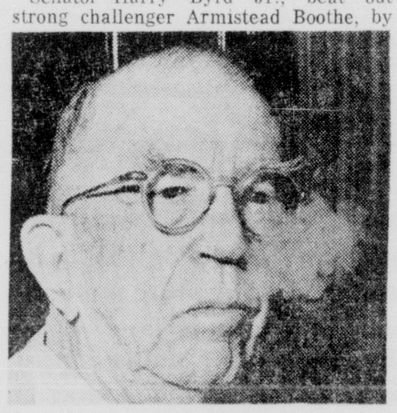

THE MAYOR refused to blame King for the rioting, but said members of his staff were fomenters of the strife. Daley said they had been in Chicago for a year, giving instructions in guerrilla warfare. Police were considering charging 21 persons with conspiracy to commit treason. The suspects — 18 men and three women — were allegedly members of a Negro extremist group which advocates violence against all whites.

WHAT WITH a mass murderer loose and an ethnic revolution on their hands, Chicago's city fathers and their celebrated police boss, Orlando Wilson, were not likely to soon forget the week of July 15, 1966.

Virginia Primary

VIRGINIA'S Democratic primary was a shocker. Defeated by young challengers were Rep. Howard Smith, 83, conservative titan of the House Rules Committee, and Senator A. Willis Robertson, 79, chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. Smith fell by 364 votes to attorney George Rawlings, a moderate, and Robertson lost to William Spong, a state senator, by 764 votes.

Senator Harry Byrd Jr., beat out strong challenger Armistead Boothe, by

"JUDGE" SMITH

8,000. For the usually streamlined Byrd machine, the primary performance was not exactly sensational.

SMITH will be missed, for his wit and country squire ways, if not for the autocratic use (critics say mis-use) of his powers. The judge more than any other man kept the Great Society from coming years ago. He bottled up social and civil rights legislation by the bucketful. When things got too hot, he "retired" to his Virginia home to rest, or went to see about his barn, said to be the most inflammable anywhere.

Replacing Smith on Rules will be Rep. Colmer of Mississippi. Slotted for Robertson's Banking chairmanship is Sen. John Sparkman of Alabama. Southern seniority is still a factor in the Washington power structure. But for how long?

OTHER political developments:

REPUBLICANS set a fire under the Democrats with veiled charges that the Administration dropped anti-trust suits against companies whose executives contributed to Democratic party. The charges narrowed to one company—Anheiser-Busch of St. Louis, a major brewer.

Attorney General Katzenbach said a suit was dropped against the firm, but that the action was dictated by merit alone.

Later, it was revealed that Vice President Humphrey and a Justice Department anti-trust division official were flown to St. Louis this week by Anheuser-Busch Co. less than a month after the suit was dropped. Humphrey denied knowledge of the suit. He went to St. Louis to attend the All-Star baseball game and a Democratic luncheon.

Disclosure of the trip came one day after it was ascertained that A-B executives had contributed a total of $10,000 to the President's Club, composed of persons who contribute $1,000 to the Democratic party. Dismissal of the suit came within one month after the donations.

Rep. Charles Goodell, R-N. Y., said in a House speech the suit dismissal raised "serious ethical questions." If there was any basis to the charges of political favoritism, the Republicans had themselves a red hot issue. But denials poured in thick and heavy.

A Quick Pot Pourri

ASIDE FROM the beer bust in St. Louis, there was a tragic climb in heat wave deaths. In the city and surrounding area, 124 heat - attributed deaths were recorded from Friday - to - Friday. Most of them were aged people with various ailments.

Viet Nam remained status quo. As a dove of peace, Mrs. Indira Gandhi of India fluttered against a Russian wall of intransigence. They would not assist peace efforts. Red China stuck its tongue out at her, saying it was an American-Soviet-Indian plot.

PEKING pulled the biggest surprise of the week. She virtually told the North Vietnamese they would have to fight the war alone.

Thus far, retaliation for the Hanoi-Haiphong bombings has been confined to threats of war criminal trials for captured pilots and the Soviet and Polish boycotts of track meets in the United States.

The Machinist strike against five major airlines continued in stalemate. Negotiations between the airlines, the AFL-CIO union, and the government have been intense, but futile. The machinists are demanding pensions, hospitalization for dependents, longer vacations, higher over time rates and an eighth paid holiday.

The Week's Twin Cities-Area News In Review

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

If Monroe becomes a thriving port city — and it will — the entire area will be largely in the debt of one man. He's H. K. Thatcher—HKT, in the lexicon of newspaper headlines—and he's living proof that youth and old age are states of mind, where thinking is concerned.

Over 400 top officials from throughout Louisiana and Arkansas assembled last week at Thatcher's home base in El Dorado, Ark., to recognize part of the debt to the 75-year-old Ouachita River Valley Association executive vice president.

In his job — he's been with the ORVA for 16 years — "Mr. Ouachita" or "Ole Man River," as you please, has been consistently on the firing line for a nine - foot Ouachita channel, a project now moving smartly in its major construction phases.

TYLER

Once, years ago, Thatcher, coming through Monroe aboard a Corps of Engineers inspection craft, voiced special hopes for the Twin City area's future. He obviously meant it.

In the words of Arkansas Sen. John L. McClellan, featured speaker for H. K. Thatcher Day in El Dorado, "Nothing short of an international catastrophe can prevent the Ouachita Navigation Project from going on to completion. We intend to expedite it."

This attitude in Washington, among men not so naturally inclined as McClellan to favor work on the Ouachita River, is perhaps the most singular tribute to "Big Daddy." Arkansas Chamber of Commerce Officer Frank Cantrell summed it nicely when he said, "Everybody knows H. K. Thatcher. He has opened doors and made contacts that we didn't even know about."

McClellan spurned the term "lobbyist" as applied to HKT, preferring "advocator," while Federal District Judge Oren Harris, through a spokesman, praised Thatcher's "advocacy, footwork and consistent nagging."

Twin City and Ouachita Parish delegates were in El Dorado en masse to pay their respects at the gathering, which itself was so much en masse that the crowd and the occasion had to be moved to larger quarters. As for the honoree, the event also represented the celebration of his birthday and 51st wedding anniversary as well.

As the Indians hereabouts might have said in their day — "May his river run forever."

SHORT SUPPLY

Turning from consideration of the "Father of Waters," any review of last week worth its salt would have to linger on a type of water in less than short supply for some little while — rainfall. There was none at all, but residents were beginning to crease and fold in heat that daily seemed to be setting new records.

Friday's heat — 101 degrees — and humidity would have laid a gila monster on its back, and readings throughout the week stayed in the middle to high 90s. Of course, the Twin City's record high, established in 1918, is 109, though people, not yet acquainted with the parlor sport of air-conditioner-hovering, were built for wear in those days. Hot weather today is patently unfair.

Monroyans, switching on the freon in unprecedented numbers, did, however, set two new records in city annals, as they raised and then re-raised the level of the greatest electrical demand ever experienced, ultimately by over 6,000 KW. The city's turbines at one point Tuesday were generating 67,300 KW. Then, Thursday, this figure was surpassed, pushed to 67,600 KW and approximately doubling the voltage required by Basil Rathbone to create the Frankenstein monster.

Officials foresaw the day, by 1968, when demand will catch the generators' present potential of 99,500 KW, although, fortunately, by then the $15.7 million bond issue passed in February will have increased that potential by 66,000 KW. Work has begun on a new substation at Selman Field, due for completion in time to parry zooming requirements in the Selman-Northeast Louisiana State College areas.

ABUNDANCE

If rain was in short supply last week, there was an abundance of official meetings taking place, as will be made abundantly clear.

The abundance of the Ouachita Parish Police Jury was especially marked, since this group bunched both its regular July meetings into the one week, allowing attendance at the New Orleans convention, starting today, of the National Association of County Officials.

But, apart from the convention, it was contention that reared its head at both the Monday and Thursday meetings. In chronological order, the Monday session was dominated by unsuccessful opposition to new management practices on Cheniere Lake, including the lowering of the water level by six feet.

The jury approved the measures, recommended by professional biologists and game management experts, in a firmly divided 12-7 vote that also saw division among the large gallery audience which attended. The water lowering, one of 10 suggestions endorsed, will produce a two-to-three-times increase in fish yield, officials maintain.

When Thursday arrived, after Wednesday, there was no abatement in controversial subjects to discuss, though the jury did succeed, on the third try, in selling its road department headquarters site on the Sterlington Road. Purchaser was Riley Buick at $71,000, a figure which still leaves jurors $49,000 to find to cover fully the cost of relocating the road department.

There's no serious question, however, of the ultimate economy of the move, or that it will result in substantial savings in coming years.

The main question that was posed Thursday was an old one for the jury, dealing with what have come to be known popularly as "private driveways." Setting the spark to the powder this time was a project offered by Lloyd Coon, Ward 6, and narrowly approved in a 10-9 count, though the pot is still boiling for an attempted replay.

What was passed is an approximately one-mile gravel strip of the Ward Road Extension, due to cost some $9,000, including a three-span bridge. Opponents said there are no houses along the proposed route.

The jury Thursday also came under the charge of "unethical" practices, when an unsuccessful bidder on a truck rig bought by the group said the specifications were written around a unit sold by the successful bidder. Another bidder objected to the way specifications are checked, while jurors pointed out their advertisements could legally specify equipment by brand name if they desired it so.

The meetings, as can be seen, were busy ones, and included further an announcement of import relative to the parish-wide progress planning which has caused such a stir in recent months.

Robert Downing, Ward 10, listed his special six-man committee ready to meet again on the subject with Monroe and other officials to consider, for a second time this year, closer governmental cooperation in areas of mutual concern. Tentative date designated was mid-September.

New West Monroe Mayor W. B. "Bert" Hatten and the town's five aldermen happened to be at the same Thursday jury meeting, ostensibly to introduce themselves. West Monroe may be involved in further planning.

MORE MEETINGS

West Monroe leaders were holding meetings of their own last week. Committee assignments were parceled Tuesday as the new administration gathered for the first time regularly.

It also was the occasion of action in making firm appointments in the city clerk and city attorney spots, with Mrs. Floy Kilpatrick, veteran deputy clerk, elevated in the first instance, and barrister Bill Norris named as city attorney.

In other activity, budget hearings were begun during the week with department heads, aimed at adopting a 1966-67 spending schedule on July 26.

Meanwhile, it was another old nemesis — sewage disposal — that promised recurring headaches for the young administration. State Board of Health officials in New Orleans Friday announced a new "harder line" seeking the speedup of sewage elimination from Louisiana streams, and named West Monroe "one of the worst problems."

Hatten, who pledged "preferred attention," of course, faces the same prospect of calling a large bond election to finance disposal that apparently has chilled matters in the past. The city, all the same, already has purchased 155 acres as the site of a proposed oxidation pond.

West Monroe will be asked "in a week or two" by the state to report concrete plans for endings its dumping of sewage into the river.

As meetings went, the Monroe City Council's session Tuesday was mild by comparison. It lasted, in fact, just under eight minutes, the principal action during which was rejection of an $18,529 bid on an underground sprinkler system for the new Government Center.

Plans also were announced, however, for purchase of four new chlorinators to replace three "borrowed" ones being used to control sewage odor. The city has disclaimed responsibility for continued complaints on the southside of unpleasant smells, as well as house stains, such as have been the subject of two inconclusive official inquiries.

Incidentally, on the subject, the police jury tabled the request of its conservation committee that the problem be subjected to a federal study of possible causes.

DEATH STRIKES

Death struck repeatedly last week on the local and area scene, claiming some of its most prominent figures. G. E. "Buddy" Erskine, 65 and sheriff of Caldwell Parish from 1936 to 1964, died after a long illness. Lawrence J. Hulin, also 65, of Shreveport, who formerly managed the Virginia Hotel in Monroe, died the previous Saturday. Dead in West Monroe after suffering an apparent heart attack was J. H. "Jake" Netherland, office supervisor for the Louisiana Power and Light Company, an employee of that firm for 27 years.

Tragedy came in many guises as the week wore on. An East Carroll Parish search for two youths near Fletcher's Landing on the Mississippi River ended with the discovery of their bodies. The pair — James Henry Turner, 16, and Tony Murray, 12, both of the Transylvania community — drowned.

Also drowned in a separate incident was a 56-year-old Delhi man, James Robert Kolb, who fell from his boat into Bayou Macon Baker Cutoff Lake. Three children, with him in the boat, were unable to save the man, but succeeded in swimming to safety themselves.

In still another incident, two children were killed and a third seriously injured when a car struck their motorcycle north of Holly Ridge. The dead were identified as Mike and Susan Clack, 12 and 10, while their brother, Ralph, 8, underwent surgery in Monroe. Parents are Mr. and Mrs. Claydeen Clack, Route 4, Rayville.

Meantime, investigation was continuing as Concordia Parish authorities probed the shooting death of Robert Harper, 51, of Acme. Also shot in the incident near New Era were brothers Homer and Ivy Lipsey, recuperating in Natchez, Miss.

NORTHEAST NEWS

A sizeable portfolio was accumulated last week by followers of news from Northeast Louisiana State College. Their clippings undoubtedly were headed by the selling of $3.7 million in bonds by the State Board of Education for construction of two new dormitories at the school. Low interest figure on the 40-year bonds came to an average of 4.93836 per cent. A total of $4.2 million in bonds was sold for similar work at Louisiana Tech in Ruston.

But back at Northeast, in another action, the low bid of $52,775 was accepted for the lighting of Brown Stadium as its new location on Peyton Drive, across Bayou DeSiard from the main campus.

At the same time, plans were being finalized for summer commencement exercises on August 6, when approximately 180 degrees will be distributed, 67 of them to graduate students. With luck, the temperature no longer will be hitting 100 by then.

And last, though in no sense least, there was shuffling of beauty titles among the college's pretty coeds. Joy Woods, chosen the week before as Miss Louisiana at the Jaycee pageant in Monroe, was compelled by top state status to relinquish her lesser (in geographic scope) crown as Miss Northeast. Thereby donning the Northeast diadem, the college pageant's first runnerup, Kathy Mooney, now reigns.

Spandau Prison Population Dwindles

Former deputy fuehrer of Nazi Germany, Rudolf Hess, soon may become the only inmate of the prison for war criminals in Berlin. Two other Nazi war criminals are scheduled for release soon.

By OTTO DOELLING

BERLIN (AP) — One of the last vestiges of Big Four cooperation in Germany may soon hang on the heartbeat of Rudolf Hess, once deputy fuehrer of Nazi Germany.

The 71-year-old Hess soon may become the sole inmate behind the red brick walls of Berlin's Spandau Prison. His two fellow inmates — Baldur von Schirach, former Hitler Youth leader, and Albert Speer, the Nazi munitions minister — are to be released at midnight Sept. 30 after serving 20-year-terms meted out by the Allied War Crimes Tribunal at Nuernberg.

LIFE TERM

Hess was sentenced at Nuernberg to life imprisonment for plotting against peace and for planning, inciting and carrying through aggressive war.

There has been no indication that the four allied control powers — the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union — are ready to agree on releasing Hess once the other two are discharged. Such a decision must be unanimous, and the Russians in the past have opposed releasing Hess.

The prison is administered jointly by the four powers, whose troops guard it on alternating months.

Voices have been raised abroad, particularly in England, for Hess' release. The Sunday Express of London said in an editorial:

"In this bright new year let the British government dedicate itself to end the long agony of Rudolf Hess."

But Hess' lawyer, Alfred Seidl of Munich, has reiterated that Hess does not want to be released except if he is legally absolved of the Nuernberg charges.

REQUEST BASIS

Seidl said he intended to ask the four powers to release Hess on legal grounds. The lawyer maintains the conviction was illegal because it was based on statues that did not exist when the war broke out in September, 1939.

A U.S. military spokesman said, "We know of no present plans or discussions under way with regard to the status of prisoner Rudolf Hess after the release of prisoners Speer and Von Schirach next September. Such a matter would, of course, require agreement by the four powers governing the prison."

Of the four Spandan inmates released to date, only one served his full term. That was Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz, last head of the German Reich after Hitler's death. Doenitz drew a 10-year sentence at Nuernberg and was released in 1956.

Former Foreign Minister Konstantin von Neurath, was the first to be released. He got out in 1954 for health reasons after serving eight years of a 15-year sentence. He died in 1956 at the age of 83.

Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, sentenced to life, was released in 1956 because of failing health. He lived four more years and died at the age of 84.

Walter Funk, Nazi economics minister, also had drawn a life term but was released because of his health in 1957. He died in 1960 at the age of 69.

A consideration in Hess' case is the question of his mental health. There has been speculation that he might be transferred to a mental asylum.

The question goes back to Hess' self proclaimed wartime "mission of humanity" to Britain. At that time, the German Foreign Office claimed the deputy feuhrer had become "the victim of hallucinations," one with "the fixed idea that he was a sort of messiah who by a spectacular individual gesture could bring about the termination of hostilities."

The official British version of the "mission" was that Hess had parachuted from a Messerschmitt 110 into Scotland May 10, 1941 to convince Britain it had lost the war and should make peace immediately. Hess was quickly captured and has been in prison ever since.

At the Nuernberg war crimes trial, a prison psychologist told the court:

"There has been no indication that Hess was insane at the time of his activities for which he has been indicted. Hess is not now insane but suffering from hysterical amnesia."

Hess was rumored to have tried to commit suicide in 1955 by swallowing garden insecticide. His wife later denied this, but said her husband had tried twice to kill himself while imprisoned in England. After his confinement in Spandau, Hess refused to see members of his family under prison circumstances, but continued to correspond with his wife, who runs an inn at Hindelang, Bavaria, and their son, Dr. Wolf Hess, an engineer.

Hess' lawyer said that an American psychiatrist had examined his client in 1964 and found him suffering from latent schizophrenia.

On this point, the U.S. military spokesman said: "All of the prisoners are frequently examined by medical doctors from each of the four powers. Hess appears to be in comparatively good physical and mental health."

AILMENTS

Klaus von Schirach, 28, a Munich lawyer, said his 58-year-old father was threatened by blindness following operations on both eyes and also was suffering from thrombosis of the leg.

Asked what his father planned to do after his release, the son replied that he had "no plans at all. He is completely without means. His house was seized after the war.

The elder Von Schirach became Reich youth leader at the age of 25 and Nazi governor of Austria at 33.

CAREER PROSPECTS

At the Nuernberg Trial he told the court: "It was my guilt — that I raised the German youth for a man who committed murders million-fold."

Since his imprisonment, his wife divorced him, and his four children have taken turns visiting him.

Speer has a wife, six children and the prospect of resuming his career as architect. Mrs. Speer lives comfortably in the family estate in Heidelberg, where their son, Albert, is carrying on the family tradition in architecture.

Speer's lawyer, Dr. Hans Flaechsner of West Berlin, said Speer, who is 61, has kept up to date on the latest developments in architecture by reading while in Spandau.

At Nuernberg, Speer denounced Hitler as a "traitor" and claimed that he had planned to kill the fuehrer by feeding poison gas through a vent into Hitler's Berlin bunker, but that the vent unexpectedly was sealed before the plan could be carried out.

After 20 years in Spandau, Speer is "looking to the future, not to the past," Flaechsner said.

Federal Money Figures Heavily In Budgets Of Leading Universities

College teaching is a poor relation; many of the best minds are in the research laboratories, making more money, winning more prestige, and shunning the undergraduates. The federal government, pouring billions of dollars into university research, is being asked: Is this a good thing?

By GEOFFREY GOULD
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the nation's leading universities get more than half of their total budgets from the federal government.

Question: Is this a good thing?

The answer is not simple. The federal contribution to research is now at a $16 billion a year level. Private industry performs most of it, but educational institutions get nearly $2 billion.

No one doubts that this massive infusion of federal money has helped improve U.S. science to the point where it leads the world in many fields.

But has it distorted the shape of higher education? Has it stimulated the sciences at the expense of the humanities? Has it contributed to poorer under-graduate teaching? Has it made the rich institutions richer while the poor ones get poorer?

The answer to all these questions seems to be a qualified yes.

REALIST

Harold Orlans of the Brookings Institution in Washington is an expert on the subject. He is also a realist.

"Everything distorts," he said in an interview. "I don't think a university should be so independent that it is not distorted by outside influences. Distortion is just a nasty word for responding to the needs of society."

Furthermore, Orlans said, the small colleges who don't get the big federal grants want to be distorted.

Contrasted to the universities, the liberal arts colleges "have been hurt. There is no question about that," he said. The government departments which spend heavily for research — defense, the National Institutes of Health, the Atomic Energy Commission, the space agency — "have nothing to offer the liberal arts colleges," he said.

Orlans regards the plight of these colleges as "a serious and urgent problem."

Rep. Henry Reuss, a reflective and scholarly Democrat from Wisconsin, is more concerned with the effect on teaching.

POOR RELATION

"University teaching has become a sort of poor relation to research," Reuss said. "I don't quarrel with the goal of excellence in science, but it is pursued at the expense of another important goal, excellence of university teaching. Teaching suffers and it is going to suffer more."

A House government operations subcommittee headed by Reuss recently made a study of "conflicts between the federal research programs and the nation's goals for higher education." The subcommittee's report said: "Any demand on the economy, public or private, of the size of federal spending for research and development is also a demand for manpower on a large scale."

And the pool from which this manpower is drawn is the one that also supplies university and college teachers.

There are other ramifications. What Dr. Jacques Barzun, provost of Columbia University, has called "the new frenzy for research," has led to a definite shift in status or prestige values in the academic world.

Several studies have shown that those who do the most teaching of undergraduates generally are the low men on the academic totem pole. The high priests of research who spend all their time in the laboratory and don't teach at all are at the top — both in terms of the federal grants they can obtain and in the prestige they win by publishing their findings.

The best graduate students are drawn into research immediately and find it the current ladder to success in their field. Only the less promising graduates students, therefore, take on the chore — as many regard it — of undergraduate teaching.

Dr. Alan M. Thorndike, a senior physicist at Brookhaven National Laboratory, points out "there is no Nobel Prize for teaching."

Dr. Clark Kerr, president of the University of California, has said, "How to escape the cruel paradox that a superior faculty results in an inferior concern for undergraduate teaching is one of our more pressing problems."

FEEDS COMPETITION

The federal money also feeds the intense competition among top universities to attract the best scholars, and, having got them, to keep them.

Kerr said, "One of the quickest ways to lose a faculty member is by refusing to accept the grant he has just negotiated with his counterpart in Washington." He added: "Some universities promise not only a base salary but substantial allowances from federal grants as a recruiting device in a wilder and wilder upward spiral. There have been some scandals. There will be more."

That Cal knows how to compete for talent is proven by its being ranked this year as "the best balanced distinguished university in the country" by the American Council on Education, surpassing Harvard for the first time.

The whole process — the hugeness of the universities, the lack of contact between student and scholar — tends to reinforce the feeling of alienation that has become a real problem for many institutions.

Kerr should know. Students at California's Berkeley campus have been in ferment for two years, complaining and protesting about these very things, among others. The troubles at Berkeley resulted in a searching inquiry by a faculty committee on what to do about it.

Speaking generally, the New York Times commented, "the innocent freshman arriving on campus with the idea that a university is a place to have intimate contact with great and learned minds often discovers that some of the faculty want to have as little as possible to do with the students."

Brookings' Orlans noted in his independent study that a dean at one great university is supposed to have once remarked, "The sight of an undergraduate makes me sick."

But the "grossest imbalance of all," the Orlans study says, is "the heavy concentrate on the sciences and neglect of the humanities."

It is the scientists who get the federal research money, and their value in the academic market place has climbed accordingly. One important way they have zoomed above their colleagues in the humanities is with federal grants that continue through the summer months. Most academic salaries are on a nine-month basis and this added income puts them ahead.

Orlans said, "An institution, like a nation, cannot long endure half slave and half free. The breach between the humanists who teach more hours for less pay and the scientists who teach less hours for more pay has been opened by federal programs — or, to be more accurate, by historical forces which have affected federal programs and the academic market."

The largest federal grants go to the already established top universities, such centers of excellence as the University of California, the University of Chicago, Massachusetts Institute of Technology — about 20 in all.

The theory behind it is that it is in national interest to buy the best research available, and therefore the government goes where the best research is.

In the years since World War II this led to establishment of national laboratories, operated by the institutions, at some of these centers of excellence.

Orlans concluded there was "no reason to challenge the essential soundness of the judgment that placed the great national laboratories at a few institutions now receiving several hundred million dollars a year from the federal government." He said: "There was only one Fermi and one atomic pile, and they were at Chicago; one Lawrence and one Cyclotron, and they were at Berkeley; one Wiener, and he was at MIT. In work of such critical national importance as these men and their colleagues and successors have undertaken, only the best will do, and it would be folly to draw and quarter the Radiation Laboratory, and the Jet Propulsion Laboratory and distribute the segments among other campuses to promote a broader institutional dispersion."

But the situation worries some, including Congressmen from the less favored states. It leads to this kind of thing: In the files of the Reuss subcommittee is a letter from the head of the physics department of a Rocky Mountain state university.

FAILED AGAIN

He wrote: "We failed again this year in our request to the National Science Foundation for a mass spectrometer. We intend to repeat our request. But the successful schools in the last rounds will be even better prepared to justify new awards in the next equipment program."

Then there is a final consideration. With all this federal manna flowing in, what about the danger of federal control of education?

No one seems to worry much about the possibility. Orlans sums it up this way: "The danger of federal control is like the danger of a dragon waking. Many academicians believe it never will wake — it has already slept so long; many, that it is not asleep but awake and quite tame; others that there is no dragon at all, but a dray horse or a milch cow."

THE MARBLES GAMES used to go on all summer around the tiny town of Blue Eye, Mo., part of which is over the Arkansas state line. It was a special kind of game, played with Scottish and English handmade rock and gravel marbles brought into the area by immigrants in the 19th century. Boys were taught the game and kept on playing as men. But now no one plays. The younger men are more interested in cars, and the older ones are busy farming and being tourist guides, or hampered by arthritis. Stone Marbles Are Stilled In Tiny Blue Eye

By JERRY CURRY

BLUE EYE, Mo. (AP) — Affluence came to Blue Eye and the men stopped playing marbles.

"Time was that the games started in May and lasted all summer," said a man who walked into Cue Butler's combined post office general store to buy some bacon.

Marbles was a man's game in this little town south of Springfield, Mo. The state line splits the community, 74 persons in Missouri and 68 in Arkansas.

In the old days, women and children were discouraged from playing the game. But boys were taught at home so they could take their place on the marble court when they became old enough.

HANDMADE MARBLES

Scottish and English immigrants brought handmade rock and gravel marbles to Blue Eye when they settled in the area in the 19th century. The art of making rock marbles has been lost because the original ones haven't worn out yet.

"No one's been playing with these rock marbles over on the baseball field in two years, says Butler. "Most of the players either started working harder on their farms or began guiding tourists on Table Rock Lake."

Bags of marbles are kept by citizens of the area who are waiting to start playing again. One of these is Paul Morris, 43, who farms on the Arkansas side of the line.

"Folks apparently just don't have the time to play any more," Morris said as he rolled some white marbles out of a leather bag. "Old age might have had something to do with it. You get arthritis in your hands and you can't shoot any more."

MARBLE COURTS

"Twenty years ago," he said, "you could walk five miles in any direction from Blue Eye and find at least eight marble courts."

The Blue Eye game is unusual. First, an eight foot square is drawn. Marbles the size of golf balls, called ring men, are placed at each corner of the square. A larger one, a little smaller than a baseball, is placed in the center.

Players using taws, the name men must be knocked out of the square first. Then the players try for the large marble in the center. The first to shoot that one out wins.

"We played only for fun," said Morris. "The closest thing to gambling was for a nickel ice cream cone."

He said the younger Blue Eye residents are more interested in cars and consider the game old fashioned.

"I guess shooting marbles is too much like work," observes Morris.

"Maybe when the men have the time, we'll start again," says the unreconstructed marble shooter as he pops a ring man with a taw just for practice.

Spandau Prison Population Dwindles

Former deputy fuehrer of Nazi Germany, Rudolf Hess, soon may become the only inmate of the prison for war criminals in Berlin. Two other Nazi war criminals are scheduled for release soon.

By OTTO DOELLING

BERLIN (AP) — One of the last vestiges of Big Four cooperation in Germany may soon hang on the heartbeat of Rudolf Hess, once deputy fuehrer of Nazi Germany.

The 71-year-old Hess soon may become the sole inmate behind the red brick walls of Berlin's Spandau Prison. His two fellow inmates — Baldur von Schirach, former Hitler Youth leader, and Albert Speer, the Nazi munitions minister — are to be released at midnight Sept. 30 after serving 20-year-terms meted out by the Allied War Crimes Tribunal at Nuernberg.

LIFE TERM

Hess was sentenced at Nuernberg to life imprisonment for plotting against peace and for planning, inciting and carrying through aggressive war.

There has been no indication that the four allied control powers — the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union — are ready to agree on releasing Hess once the other two are discharged. Such a decision must be unanimous, and the Russians in the past have opposed releasing Hess.

The prison is administered jointly by the four powers, whose troops guard it on alternating months.

Voices have been raised abroad, particularly in England, for Hess' release. The Sunday Express of London said in an editorial:

"In this bright new year let the British government dedicate itself to end the long agony of Rudolf Hess."

But Hess' lawyer, Alfred Seidl of Munich, has reiterated that Hess does not want to be released except if he is legally absolved of the Nuernberg charges.

REQUEST BASIS

Seidl said he intended to ask the four powers to release Hess on legal grounds. The lawyer maintains the conviction was illegal because it was based on statues that did not exist when the war broke out in September, 1939.

A U.S. military spokesman said, "We know of no present plans or discussions under way with regard to the status of prisoner Rudolf Hess after the release of prisoners Speer and Von Schirach next September. Such a matter would, of course, require agreement by the four powers governing the prison."

Of the four Spandan inmates released to date, only one served his full term. That was Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz, last head of the German Reich after Hitler's death. Doenitz drew a 10-year sentence at Nuernberg and was released in 1956.

Former Foreign Minister Konstantin von Neurath, was the first to be released. He got out in 1954 for health reasons after serving eight years of a 15-year sentence. He died in 1956 at the age of 83.

Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, sentenced to life, was released in 1956 because of failing health. He lived four more years and died at the age of 84.

Walter Funk, Nazi economics minister, also had drawn a life term but was released because of his health in 1957. He died in 1960 at the age of 69.

A consideration in Hess' case is the question of his mental health. There has been speculation that he might be transferred to a mental asylum.

The question goes back to Hess' self proclaimed wartime "mission of humanity" to Britain. At that time, the German Foreign Office claimed the deputy feuhrer had become "the victim of hallucinations," one with "the fixed idea that he was a sort of messiah who by a spectacular individual gesture could bring about the termination of hostilities."

The official British version of the "mission" was that Hess had parachuted from a Messerschmitt 110 into Scotland May 10, 1941 to convince Britain it had lost the war and should make peace immediately. Hess was quickly captured and has been in prison ever since.

At the Nuernberg war crimes trial, a prison psychologist told the court:

"There has been no indication that Hess was insane at the time of his activities for which he has been indicted. Hess is not now insane but suffering from hysterical amnesia."

Hess was rumored to have tried to commit suicide in 1955 by swallowing garden insecticide. His wife later denied this, but said her husband had tried twice to kill himself while imprisoned in England. After his confinement in Spandau, Hess refused to see members of his family under prison circumstances, but continued to correspond with his wife, who runs an inn at Hindelang, Bavaria, and their son, Dr. Wolf Hess, an engineer.

Hess' lawyer said that an American psychiatrist had examined his client in 1964 and found him suffering from latent schizophrenia.

On this point, the U.S. military spokesman said: "All of the prisoners are frequently examined by medical doctors from each of the four powers. Hess appears to be in comparatively good physical and mental health."

2 NLSC Men To Attend Conference

Two representatives of Northeast Louisiana State College will attend a conference on the significance of the senior Army Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) program in college July 20-22 at Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

Representing Northeast will be Alva S. Huffman, head of the Department of Health and Physical Education, and Lt. Col. Travis A. French, professor of military science at the College. Colonel French will travel to the conference from Fort Sill, Okla., where Northeast cadets are attending summer camp.

Lt. Gen. Thomas W. Dunn, Fourth U. S. Army commander, will meet with the Northeast faculty members and representatives from other Louisiana colleges and universities at Fort Sam Houston.

Before leaving for Texas, the group will attend a luncheon in New Orleans given by Eberhard P. Deutsch, civilian aide for luncheon to the Secretary of the Army.

At the conclusion of the conference, the educators will fly to Fort Polk for a demonstration of basic, advanced and special Viet Nam training.

Many New Books Being Added To Public Library

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Those of us who were fortunate enough to hear Mr. Harry Mark Petrakis talk at the Book Dinner at the Louisiana Library Association Conference this spring have been eagerly waiting for his book "Pericles on 31st Street". Mr. Petrakis is a delightful speaker and he writes with the same sense of humor. "Pericles on 31st Street" is a delightful book of short stories about Greek Americans in New York. For a most refreshing reading experience, ask for this book. A very humorous new book is "Here Come the Brides" by Geraldine Napier. It is the story of activities in a bridal salon and is a series of misadventures. "Comanch" by Cliff Farrell is another Western story, similar to many others in our collection. For those who enjoy mystery stories there are three new titles this week; "Death and the Sure Physician" by John Wakefield, "The Mood for Murder" by Van Siller and "The Widowmaker" by M. Fagyas.

Two books which will interest those who are concerned about social conditions in the South today are "From Race Riot to Sit-In, 1919 and the 1960's" written by Arthur W. Waskow and "The Negro in the South Since 1865" by Charles E. Wynes. For the kindergarten teacher there is a very fine new book "Pre-School Education Today" by Fred M. Hechinger.

Several new titles were added to the literature section last week. "The Pulitzer Prize Novels" by William Joseph Stuckey is a critical appraisal of books which have been awarded the Pulitzer prize in the fiction category. "The Crickets All Look Alike" by William Davidson is a very funny book of reminiscenses. "The Days of Henry Thoreau" by Walter Roy Harding is an evaluation of the work of Thoreau. "Prometheus" is the title of the life of Balzac translated by Norman Denny from the writing of Andre Maurois.

"The Parnell Tragedy" by Jules Abels gives us a wonderful picture of the political climate of 19th century Ireland. Alfred Rowse is an expert on Elizabethan and Shakesperean England and has given us a number of fine biographies of this period. His latest one is "Shakespeare's Southampton. Patron of Virginia." Those who enjoy reading about this period will welcome the new information which Mr. Rowse has discovered. "A Gift of Joy" is the title of the autobiography of Helen Hayes. It is as charming as the author and is in great demand.

The sinking of the Titanic was one of the great sea tragedies of all time. A book which sheds new light on this event is "The Titanic and the Californian." The Captain of the Californian has been accused of not going to the help of the Titanic. This book helps to clear his name. "Mesoptamia" by Jane Claude Margueron is a very beautiful and scholarly study of this region and it's influence on history. "Viet Nam" by Jean Lacouture gives the history of this troubled country and helps to explain the causes of the present conflict.

Cabell Phillips has written the history of "The Truman Presidency." He presents Mr. Truman in a clear perspective and shows that he will probably go down in history as one of our great Presidents. "Nevada: The Great Rotten Borough" by Gilman M. Ostrander is a sharp criticism of the legalized gambling, which practically supports the state.

An unusual and lovely book is "A History of Valentines" by Ruth Webb Lee. This is a subject on which we previously had little information. "The Collected Poems of Theodore Roethke" is an addition to the literature collection of the library.

New books are added to the collection at the rate of approximately 1,000 per month. If you have not visited one of the libraries recently, you will be surprised at the growth of the book collection.

Fire Strikes House Twice At Jonesboro

JONESBORO (Special) — Lightning reportedly does not strike twice, but apparently fire does. At least it did at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Green, where a fire thought dead again flared to life and finished destroying the brick veneer home in the Terrace Hill subdivision here late Friday night.

The fire first started shortly after Green left for work about 10:30 p.m. His wife and child were awakened by the crackle of flames and the smell of smoke.

The Jonesboro Volunteer Fire Department received the call at 11:37 p.m. Two hours later they thought the fire extinguished. But a second call was received at 4:23 a.m. Saturday, and by the time they reached the house, it was completely gutted by flames.

According to Fire Chief Maurice Newton, reason for the fire, or estimate of losses, were unknown late Saturday night.

Hodge Native Killed In War; Rites Today

HODGE (Special) — Funeral services for Staff Sgt. Charles O. DeJean III, 25, of Jeanerette, will be at 1 p.m. today, at Port Barre Catholic Church, with burial in the church cemetery at Port Barre, under direction of LaFonde Funeral Home of Opelousas.

DeJean was killed Saturday, July 9, in Viet Nam. No details of how he was killed are available. He was a native of Hodge.

Survivors include his father, Charles DeJean Jr. of Port Barre; maternal grandmother, Mrs. Mae Miles of Hodge; and a number of uncles and aunts in the Hodge area.

Computer Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A computerized Congress, with its own "tribunes" in each government agency to check on the executive branch, is envisioned for 1989 in a new book which represents views of 11 political scientists.

Prof. Alfred De Grazia of New York University, coordinator of the volume and author of one of its essays on strengthening the national legislature, is also responsible for the fanciful portrait of Congress in 1989, the 200th anniversary of the first Congress. Called "Congress, the First Branch of Government," the book was published by the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research.

MISSISSIPPI — Mostly cloudy and mild today with widely scattered showers and thundershowers, most numerous south portion. Monday partly cloudy and warmer with chance of afternoon thundershowers. Lows tonight 72 to 78. Highs today 88 to 94.

MIDSOUTH HIGHLIGHTS — Heat of the past week was broken over much of the Mid-South Saturday as a slow-moving cold front pushed through the northern two-thirds of the area. Much needed moisture accompanied the front with western and northern portions receiving the major amount of the showers activity. High temperatures ranged from 85 at Harrison, Ark., to 99 at Greenwood and Tupelo, Miss. Batesville, Ark., was close behind with the high of 98 as clouds in the Arkansas area broke enough during the afternoon to allow for rapid heating from the sun.

Wreck Is Fatal

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Andrew R. Davison, 53, of Shreveport, was killed early Saturday in a two-car head-on collision on La. 1 nine miles north of here.

Milton Augustine, 29, of Shreveport, driver of the other car, was hospitalized with chest and jaw injuries. His condition was listed as serious.

Plant Damaged

BOSSIER CITY, La. (AP) — The Moss-American Inc. crosstie and creosote plant in Bossier City, La., was severely damaged by fire Saturday.

Some 78 firemen fought the blaze of undetermined origin. Damage was estimated at between $75,000 and $100,000.

Three firemen were hospitalized suffering from heat exhaustion and smoke inhalation.

a power-full Louisiana with a power-full future

Over $144,000,000 is being invested in new electric generating, transmission, and distribution facilities this year by Louisiana's Investor-Owned electric companies. Providing Louisiana with greatly increased electric capacity, this will assure ample power reserve to meet the state's rapidly growing requirements.

This investment represents, in itself, a major industrial expansion. It will also make more power available to business and industry for expansion — creating more jobs for the people of Louisiana — bringing comforts and a higher standard of living for everyone.

Let's keep good things going for our state — with abundant lowcost electric service from the INVESTOR-OWNED ELECTRIC LIGHT AND POWER COMPANIES OF LOUISIANA • Louisiana Power & Light Co. • Gulf States Utilities Co. • Southwestern Electric Power Co. • Central Louisiana Electric Co. • New Orleans Public Service Inc.

a power-full Louisiana with a power-full future

Over $144,000,000 is being invested in new electric generating, transmission, and distribution facilities this year by Louisiana's Investor-Owned electric companies. Providing Louisiana with greatly increased electric capacity, this will assure ample power reserve to meet the state's rapidly growing requirements.

This investment represents, in itself, a major industrial expansion. It will also make more power available to business and industry for expansion — creating more jobs for the people of Louisiana — bringing comforts and a higher standard of living for everyone.

Hollywood Has Large Crop Of Youngsters With Talent

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A ministerial student realizes that preaching appeals to the ham in him — and becomes a ballad-and rock singing star.

A New York model dons lipstick in a television commercial. A Hollywood producer sees the commercial and summons her for a screen test. Her third movie stars her with John Wayne and Robert Mitchum.

The singer is John Davidson, 24, a boyish, handsome host-star of NBC-TV's "Summer Music Hall," The ex-$50,000-a-year model is Charlene Holt.

They are among Hollywood's talented young; by no means the entire field, but representative.

Top stars of tomorrow? Some of them could be. None is a novice.

Says Dick Kallman, 26, of Television, "Hank", movies, including one just made with Sandra Dee and George Hamilton, and theater, "How to Succeed," 650 performances; "Half a Sixpence," upcoming:

LONG NIGHT

"I like to say I'm an overnight sensation — but it's been a long night."

Best known of the lot is Barbara Parkins of "Peyton Place," starting her third year on the television series. She has brown eyes, red-brown hair, an ivory complexion and 5-foot-5 figure but won't tell her measurements. "That's silly. Anybody can see I'm well developed."

Born in Vancouver, B.C., she started dancing lessons at 6—"I was happiest when I was dancing"—came to Los Angeles in her mid-teens to demonstrate at a national dancing convention and, with her widowed mother, decided to stay. She studied with a drama group, got small television roles, then the part of sexy Betty Anderson on "Peyton Place."

They were going to write me out after 11 episodes," Barbara recalls. "But then I understand they saw an excitement in the character and decided to continue me."

Told that surveys indicate 30 million people watch the series, Barbara said. "I try not to think about that. If I looked in the camera, I'd probably be panic stricken."

Charlene Holt, 27, is tall — 5 feet 8 — and measures 36-25-36. She has brown eyes, reddish-brown hair. She was born in Abilene, Tex., and started clothes-modeling at a Dallas department store. In New York she attended drama school at night while working days as a top-pay model.

COMMERCIALS

She did television commercials for linoleum, cars, detergents, hair spray, wine, garden tools, cigarettes ("and I don't smoke") and soft drinks ("standing on skis — and I don't ski").

Producer Howard Hawks, discoverer of Carole Lombard, Rita Hayworth, Lauren Bacall and Joan Collins, spotted Charlene demonstrating lipstick on his home screen and cast her as Rock Hudson's fiancee in "Man's Favorite Sport." Since then she has done "Redline 7000" and "El Dorado."

On switching from top model to fledgling actress, Charlene says: "Everything gets boring after a while. I think I can go further here, and there's a lot more satisfaction in doing a movie."

Our next two specimens, Davidson and Kallman, are versatile talents.

After taping his summer shows for NBC, John Davidson makes his movie debut in Walt Disney's "The Happiest Millionaire." He is under contract to ABC-TV and makes recordings for Columbia Records.

Young Davidson, blue-eyed and brown-haired, is a baritone who also plays guitar and banjo. He started with a high school rock band in White Plains, N.Y., where his father, Dr. James A. Davidson, is pastor of the First Baptist church.

At Denison University in Ohio he got a B. A. in theatre arts as training for the ministry. Preaching sermons at Sunday youth services, he says, he realized that "though I felt a sense of dedication, speaking to an audience was what appealed to me. It was the ham in me, I suppose."

In 1963 he went to New York and landed the role of Bert Lahr's son in the Broadway show "Foxy." Next came appearances in a television weekly series, "The Entertainers," and other variety and musical shows.

Found lugging heavy banjo and guitar cases down an NBC corridor, John was told by a press agent he should behave "like a star" and let someone else carry them.

"I'm not a star," said the youth. Then, having a soft drink at an outdoor table, he said he'd like eventually to be "as good in night clubs as Sammy Davis Jr., on Broadway as Robert Preston, as big a recording star as Andy Williams and as good a television host as Danny Kaye."

"WHIRLWIND"

Dick Kallman, 26, is a whirlwind. He is a singer-actor-dancer who admittedly has "high goals and ambition to a fault. I want to play comedy — and be the best in it."

He was born in Dixville Notch, N.H., and started his theater career at 16 in a New York musical version of "Seventeen." A tour in "How to Succeed" that lasted 18 months led to the television "Hank" series and several movies, the latest "This Way Out, Please."

THE VERSATILE talent of John Davidson, 24, shown with his guitar in Hollywood, came out after he realized, while studying for the ministry, that its appeal was largely in the speaking to an audience. ("The ham in me, I suppose.") Son of a Baptist minister, John now is host-star of NBC-TV's "Summer Music Hall." He's under contract to ABC-TV, makes ballad and rock recordings, and will make his movie debut in Walt Disney's "The Happiest Millionaire." (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Hollywood Has Large Crop Of Youngsters With Talent

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A ministerial student realizes that preaching appeals to the ham in him — and becomes a ballad- and rock singing star.

A New York model dons lipstick in a television commercial. A Hollywood producer sees the commercial and summons her for a screen test. Her third movie stars her with John Wayne and Robert Mitchum.

The singer is John Davidson, 24, a boyish, handsome host-star of NBC-TV's "Summer Music Hall," The ex-$50,000-a-year model is Charlene Holt.

They are among Hollywood's talented young; by no means the entire field, but representative.

Top stars of tomorrow? Some of them could be. None is a novice.

Says Dick Kallman, 26, of Television, "Hank", movies, including one just made with Sandra Dee and George Hamilton, and theater, "How to Suceed," 650 performances; "Half a Sixpence," upcoming:

LONG NIGHT

"I like to say I'm an overnight sensation — but it's been a long night."

Best known of the lot is Barbara Parkins of "Peyton Place," starting her third year on the television series. She has brown eyes, red-brown hair, an ivory complexion and 5-foot-5 figure but won't tell her measurements. "That's silly. Anybody can see I'm well developed."

Born in Vancouver, B.C., she started dancing lessons at 6—"I was happiest when I was dancing"—came to Los Angeles in her mid-teens to demonstrate at a national dancing convention and, with her widowed mother, decided to stay. She studied with a drama group, got small television roles, then the part of sexy Betty Anderson on "Peyton Place."

They were going to write me out after 11 episodes," Barbara recalls. "But then I understand they saw an excitement in the character and decided to continue me."

Told that surveys indicate 30 million people watch the series, Barbara said. "I try not to think about that. If I looked in the camera, I'd probably be panic-stricken."

Charlene Holt, 27, is tall — 5 feet 8 — and measures 36-25-36. She has brown eyes, reddish-brown hair. She was born in Abilene, Tex., and started clothes-modeling at a Dallas department store. In New York she attended drama school at night while working days as a top-pay model.

COMMERCIALS

She did television commercials for linoleum, cars, detergents, hair spray, wine, garden tools, cigarettes ("and I don't smoke") and soft drinks ("standing on skis — and I don't ski").

Producer Howard Hawks, discoverer of Carole Lombard, Rita Hayworth, Lauren Bacall and Joan Collins, spotted Charlene demonstrating lipstick on his home screen and cast her as Rock Hudson's fiancee in "Man's Favorite Sport." Since then she has done "Redline 7000" and "El Dorado."

On switching from top model to fledgling actress, Charlene says: "Everything gets boring after a while. I think I can go further here, and there's a lot more satisfaction in doing a movie."

Our next two specimens, Davidson and Kallman, are versatile talents.

After taping his summer shows for NBC, John Davidson makes his movie debut in Walt Disney's "The Happiest Millionaire." He is under contract to ABC-TV and makes recordings for Columbia Records.

Young Davidson, blue-eyed and brown-haired, is a baritone who also plays guitar and banjo. He started with a high school rock band in White Plains, N.Y., where his father, Dr. James A. Davidson, is pastor of the First Baptist church.

At Denison University in Ohio he got a B. A. in theatre arts as training for the ministry. Preaching sermons at Sunday youth services, he says, he realized that "though I felt a sense of dedication, speaking to an audience was what appealed to me. It was the ham in me, I suppose."

In 1963 he went to New York and landed the role of Bert Lahr's son in the Broadway show "Foxy." Next came appearances in a television weekly series, "The Entertainers," and other variety and musical shows.

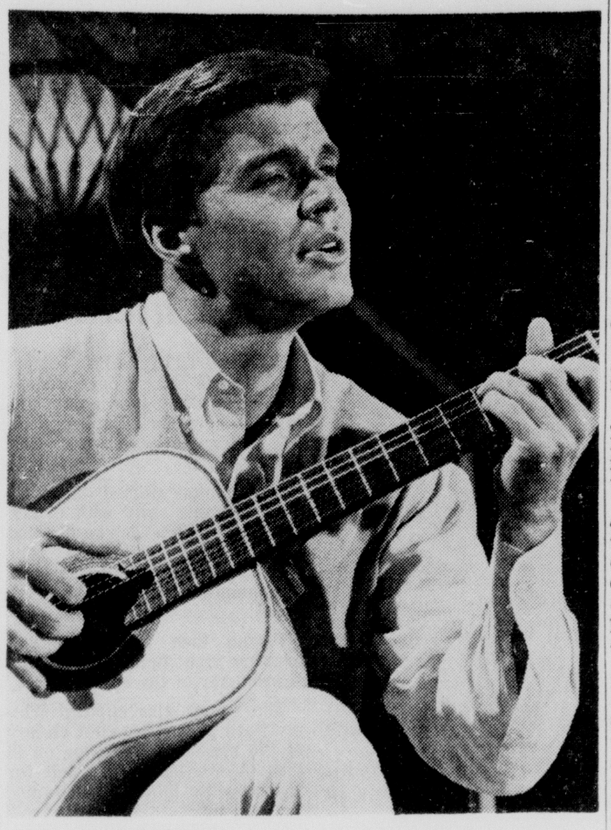

Found lugging heavy banjo and guitar cases down an NBC corridor, John was told by a press agent he should behave "like a star" and let someone else carry them.

"I'm not a star," said the youth. Then, having a soft drink at an outdoor table, he said he'd like eventually to be "as good in night clubs as Sammy Davis Jr., on Broadway as Robert Preston, as big a recording star as Andy Williams and as good a television host as Danny Kaye."

"WHIRLWIND"

Dick Kallman, 26, is a whirlwind. He is a singer-actor-dancer who admittedly has "high goals and ambition to a fault. I want to play comedy — and be the best in it."

He was born in Dixville Notch, N.H., and started his theater career at 16 in a New York musical version of "Seventeen." A tour in "How to Succeed" that lasted 18 months led to the television "Hank" series and several movies, the latest "This Way Out, Please."

THE VERSATILE talent of John Davidson, 24, shown with his guitar in Hollywood, came out after he realized, while studying for the ministry, that its appeal was largely in the speaking to an audience. ("The ham in me, I suppose.") Son of a Baptist minister, John now is host-star of NBC-TV's "Summer Music Hall." He's under contract to ABC-TV, makes ballad and rock recordings, and will make his movie debut in Walt Disney's "The Happiest Millionaire." (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

The Years, They Roll

Five years ago yesterday, on July 16, 1961, I walked into the Morning World office for the first time. The only things I remember from that day are that Bill Hardin talked loud, Richard Tyler had long hair, Paul Martin was friendly and I was scared.

After I met them, all of whom are still employed by this newspaper, I could honestly say I knew a grand total of four people who lived in Louisiana. The fourth, Mr. James "Red" Parrish who was then the News Bureau Director at Northeast but has since departed, was the only one of the four who knew me.

This description of my first days in Monroe is not of a sentimental nature. Rather it is to relate the beginning of an association with you, John Q. Public of north Louisiana, which has grown into a great number of friendships and working acquaintances.

When I came here this was your home, your school, your athletic team. Now they are mine, too.

To say I knew nothing of Monroe athletics, or even Louisiana athletics, would have to rank among the truest truths ever told. To me, a young man coming from the red clay country of East Texas, Louisiana meant nothing more than cajuns and crawfish. And, Monroe meant nothing at all, unless it had Marilyn tacked on the front of it.

Looking back, those first impressions are now pretty hazy. But some of them are still with me, especially the humorous or ironic ones.

I'll never forget the first time I took the results of a tournament over the phone envolving such elementary schools as Swartz, Millsaps, St. Paschal's and Woodlawn. Although I didn't record the caller's name for all eternity, I can still remember his disbelief that I had to ask the spelling of every name. To him, a local resident no doubt closely associated with the schools, it must have sounded like Carter asking how to spell Liver Pills.

Soon those first hot summer days stretched into weeks. And then football season was here.

My first Louisiana football season. And with it came my initial dose of irony in the raw. It became apparent to me quickly that fall that the people I needed to know about most were the ones I knew about the least. These were the people — mostly athletes and coaches — out in the area.

I was writing about Holly Ridge, Oak Grove, Jonesboro, Mangham, Wisner and many more when actually they were nothing but names to me when they should have been individuals with personalities. Perhaps this still would not have seemed so wrong except for one thing: I WAS PREDICTING THE OUTCOME OF THEIR GAMES.

To compare, this was essentially like getting Phyllis Diller's comments on hair spray, Jed Clampitt's on sophistication, or Lyndon Johnson's on poverty. It was simply the wrong person for the task, via lack of experience.

However, here is where the irony really shone through — I predicted their games with greater success that first year than I have at anytime since. The final season percentage read .821, higher than anyone else's in the state.

Don't ask my forecasting method that season. But neither ask to borrow an old, faded coin I'm saving to have bronzed some day.

Events, People And Memories

Memories can stack up on you when in a business like this, a business which deals entirely with people every single day. Most of the people you get along with, but some you don't. Many you respect and strive to help when the occasion arises simply because they are nice, and a few give the impression of being nice only because you may be able to be of service sometime.

I guess with anybody, the bigger things in our lifes are what we remember. And, the bigger things to me have been the events and people of the sports world.

Two trips to the Cotton Bowl rank high in the fun I've had, and, of course, it didn't hurt things for LSU to win on both occasions. Then there have been the GSC trips, following Northeast to Hammond, Lake Charles, Natchitoches on the way to a basketball championship in 1965, watching the always talented Tribe track team perform throughout the state, making trips to Florida and Houston with the Indians baseballers and filling Friday and Saturday nights with football games every fall — throughout the area and state.

One such football trip is easy to remember. But this one wasn't all fun. I flew to Chattanooga, Tenn., with the Northeast football team in 1964 and we lost the game, 9-0. But that was the best part of the night.

Shortly after taking off on our flight back I looked out the window near me and saw a very sickening sight (at least for that situation). It was a propeller that reminded me of the Eiffel Tower, standing their tilted in the wind. Not so much that it was angeled just like the Paris tower, you see, but more because it was still, unmoving, resting, stopped.

In other words, like man it wasn't doing its job. Well, soon the pilot spoke his comforting message to "fasten your safety belts" because we were circling back to the airport. He said we could probably have made it to Monroe without that engine, but there was no use taking a chance. I still include him in my prayers every night.

Also over the past five years there have been interviews to keep things interesting. Some included John David Crow of Txas A&M and pro football fame, Tommy Nobis of Texas, Jerry Stovall and tackle Dave McCormick of LSU along with the Tigers' athletic director Jim Corbett.

And locally, there was always a tremendous story only several blocks from the office. The "story's" name was Bill Ruple. When I arrived he was about to put together back-to-back state football championships at Neville before moving to the background with an AD post.

The list of yarns about Ruple continue to grow, even now, three years after his final triumph. And after seeing his work I'll never doubt a one.

Finally, and most important of all during my stay here, there has been vast improvement in sports overall for our state. Maybe to you it doesn't seem like much, but there is really no comparison now with five years ago.

There has been the birth (spring, 1961) and growth of the state prep basketball tournament, the building of track programs to rival those elsewhere, football and baseball prospects developed that catch the eye of professionals and, generally, an uplifting of presentation in all sports.

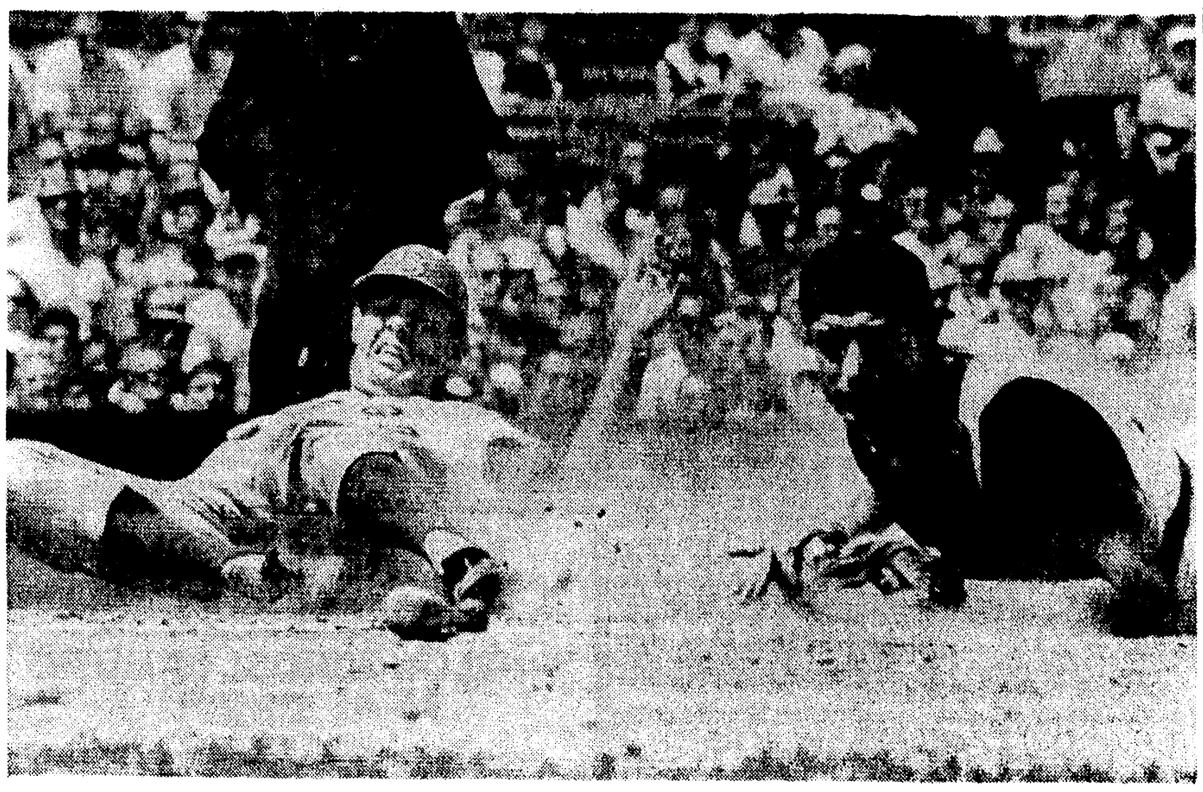

The Gulf States Conference has definitely done its share in improving the image of Louisiana sports as has Grambling, among the most respected small colleges in America.

So there you have it. Five years. A short time if your over 40, a long time if your waiting to come "of voting age."

What was it to me, this first five years in Monroe? Maybe a little of both. I must admit to feeling over 40 physically quite often now and you'll find plenty of coaches who say my predictions sound like something their kid would think up.

I do know one thing — I've enjoyed every minute of it. On second thought, there's no use to start lying now. Let's make that read: I've disliked some of it, enjoyed most of it, found all of it interesting and am looking forward to a repeat course.

Orioles KO McLain, Down Detroit 8-2

DETROIT (AP) — Brooks Robinson's bases-loaded single highlighted a four-run Baltimore first inning and the Orioles routed Denny McLain with two more runs in the second on their way to an 8-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers Saturday.

The first five Orioles to face McLain, making his first start since the All-Star Game, reached base. Singles by Luis Aparicio and Russ Snyder and a walk to Frank Robinson preceded Brooks Robinson's two-run single.

Boog Powell singled, driving in Frank Robinson, and a sacrifice fly by Dave Johnson brought home Brooks.

Norm Cash got one run back for Detroit in the first with a solo homer.

But the Orioles continued their assault in the second. Dave McNally singled, was sacrificed to second and scored on Snyder's double. Frank Robinson greeted reliever Orlando Pena with a single, scoring Snyder.

Pena held the Orioles to two hits in the next three innings, one a run-scoring single by Andy Etchebarren in the fifth following a walk to Curt Blefary and an error by Jake Wood.

Willie Horton accounted for the second Detroit run when he homered with two out in the sixth.

Grand-Slam Lifts Yanks By Athletics

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Horace Clarke hit a grand-slam home run in the 10th inning, lifting the New York Yankees to a 9-5 victory over Kansas City Saturday.

Lou Clinton started the Yankees' winning rally with a one-out single. Clete Boyer doubled him to third, and Jack Aker walked pinch hitter Roger Maris intentionally, loading the bases.

Clarke then drove the ball over the right field fence for his first homer of the season.

The homer also enabled Whitey Ford to post his first victory of the season. Ford came on in the seventh inning and left for Maris in the 10th. Pedro Ramos finished up.

The Athletics tied the game 5-5 in the ninth inning when Bert Campaneris beat out a bunt against Ford, was sacrificed to second and came home as Mike Hershberger singled with two out.

A two-run homer by Joe Pepitone in the third put the Yankees ahead 3-1, but the Athletics tied it on run-scoring singles by Phil Roof and Joe Nossek in the fifth.

The Yankees went ahead again in the sixth as Tom Tresh hit a two-run homer, also off starter Paul Lindblad.

The Athletics scored in the seventh on a single by Hershberger.

Santo Puts Cubs Past Pirates, 4-1

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Ron Santo's fifth-inning home run broke a tie and sparked a three-run outburst which carried the Chicago Cubs to a 4-1 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday.

It was the first time in a month that the Pirates scored less than two runs in a game.

Santo's clout, his second in two days, came after Billy Williams tripled and snapped a 1-1 deadlock. Consecutive singles by Ernie Banks, Randy Hundley and Byrone Browne tallied the other run and chased starter and loser Woody Fryman, 8-4.

Bill Hands and Ferguson Jenkins combined to hold the Pirates to five hits. Hands, now 6-8, yielded four hits and struck out three before he pulled a muscle in his back and left in the seventh inning.

Roberto Clemeste followed Gene Alley's triple with a single to give the Pirates a 1-0 lead in the first inning.

Hundley tripled and scored on Browne's ground out, bringing the Cubs even in the fourth.

Chicago Beats Cleveland, 7-2

CHICAGO (AP) — Successive pinch doubles by Smoky Burgess and Bill Skowron highlighted a five-run rally in the sixth inning Saturday and carried the Chiago White Sox to a 7-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The White Sox, completing a sweep of the three-game series and handing the Indians their 11th defeat in the last 12 games, went into the sixth inning trailing 2-1.

With one out Jerry Adair, Tom McCraw and Ken Berry singled tying the game 2-2. Burgess then lashed a two-run double on reliever Jack Kralick's first pitch and Skowron followed with his double.

Cleveland took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Fred Whitefield's run-scoring single, but the Sox tied it in the second on a sacrifice fly to McCraw. The Indians took its final lead in the third on Leon Wagner's run-scoring single.

Frank Broyles To Speak Here To Northeast State Boosters

FRANK BROYLES . . . To Speak Here

One of the most successful football coaches in America, Frank Broyles of Arkansas, will speak to members of the Northeast State Boosters Club here July 28.

The occasion will be a barbecue kicking off the club's annual membership drive. It will be held at Bancroft's Camp outside West Monroe beginning at 6:30 p.m. Present and prospective members of the Booster Club are invited to attend, says Tony Renfro, club president.

Northeast Coach Dixie White, who ran the Razorback offense under Broyles in 1958-61, will introduce the Arkansas coach. President Renfro will also make a short talk and television sportscaster Harry Arthur will be the master of ceremonies.

Broyles in his nine years at Fayetteville has transformed Arkansas from an occasional power in Southwest Conference football. Under him, Razorbacks clubs have won or shared conference championships five times — 1959, 1960, 1961, 1964 and 1965.

His teams have played in five bowl games and won a total of 69 games while losing only 26 and tying one for a winning percentage of .808.

From late 1963 until this year's Cotton Bowl game in which LSU sprang a 14-7 upset, Arkansas won 22 consecutive games. The unbeaten 1964 Razorback team earned Broyles national "Coach of the Year" honors.

Broyles was a star quarterback at Georgia Tech in his playing days, graduating in at his alma mater before going to Arkansas as head coach.

Philadelphia Edges Giants In 15th, 6-5

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tony Gonzalez, who scored the tying run in the ninth inning, singled across the winning tally in the 15th as Philadelphia edged San Francisco 6-5 Saturday.

Despite the loss, the Giants maintained their one-game National League lead over the Pittsburgh Pirates, who lost to Chicago.

Bill White led off the 15th with a single against Joe Gibbon and was sacrificed to second. Gonzalez then rapped a single to left field, driving in White.

The Phillies tied the game 5-5 in the ninth when Gonzalez led off with a single, was sacrificed to second and scored one out later on a single by Phil Linz off Jim Davenport's glove at third.

The Giants broke a 2-2 tie in the sixth, taking advantage of Philadelphia errors by Cookie Rojas, White and Bob Uecker.

Willie McCovey, who singled in the first run in the inning, scored on Tom Haller's single and was followed across the pate by Jim Hart when Uecker let the throw from the outfield get away from him.

Traweek Races Slated Today

Traweek Raceway will be the scene of one of the most exciting sports events in Monroe today, that is if you like car racing.

Many new drivers are expected and the old experienced ones will be on hand to test skills and driving ability.

The raceway is located 3½ miles off Jonesboro Road past the paper mill in West Monroe.

LA Downs Mets, 7-1 With Sutton

NEW YORK (AP) — Rookie Don Sutton pitched a five-hitter and John Roseboro got his second two-run homer in as many days as the Los Angeles Dodgers whipped the New York Mets 7-1 Saturday.

The loss was the seventh straight for the ninth place Mets.

Sutton, who struck out 11, allowed only two singles over the first seven innings.

The Dodgers hopped on Met starter Dennis Ribant for four runs in the first three innings.

Roseboro hit his sixth homer of the year following Willie Davis' single in the first for a 2-0 lead. In the third, a walk to Gilliam, doubles by Willie Davis and Lou Johnson and a fielder's choice produced two more runs.

Sutton took over from there, retiring 11 straight batters over one stretch. It was the rookie's ninth victory in 16 decisions. The loss evened Ribant's record at 4-4.

The Dodgers got their final runs in the ninth on four walks a wild pitch and Jim Lefebvre's single.

Gun Record Is Set At Pine Hill

Dr. R. W. Dickenhorst powdered 199 out of 200 16 yard trap tagets and then missed the 200th bird at the Pine Hills Gun Club this past Sunday afternoon.

The 199 straight targets represents a new local gun club record. Ross Graves was the previous record holder with 184 straight trap targets. Club President, Jess Cobb was in second position with 125 straight targets and 196 out of a possible 200 in the scheduled program.

Another Club record was set with the perfect trap squad in which Toby Bancroft, Sr., Jess Cobb, Dr. Dickenhorst, Roy Pittard and David Rosedale all smoked 25 straight targets while shooting in the same squad.

The skeet field was dominated by Wood Sers with 50 straight targets and Marvin Williamson with 98 out of 100 targets.

There is no special scheduled program for this afternoon however both the trap and skeet field will be open for practice promptly at 1:30 p.m.

Jess Cobb announced that work was already well underway on the construction of the new trap house and that forms for the concrete work for both the trap and skeet fields would be laid this week. He stated that the new building program was progressing satisfactorily.

Dixie Boys Play Starts Tuesday

The western half of the Fifth District Dixie Boys Tourney will begin Tuesday night at the Southside Dixie League Park located on Parkview Drive behind the Benoit Recreation Center.

The first game of the night will be Northside of Monroe playing West Monroe at 6 followed by the host Southside All-Stars facing the Union Parish All-Stars at 8.

Two games are slated Wednesday night at 6 and 8 with single games to be played on Thursday and Friday at 7:30.

Dixie Seniors Announce Stars

Managers of the Dixie Senior League Teams of Monore have announced the following boys on the All-Star team to represent Monroe: Art LaGrange, Robbie Schott, and Dickie Keith, Clayton Gibson Carpet House; Pete Smith, Tom Brown, Pat Dayton, Ryan Rogers, Lakeshore Lions; Van Pardue, Mike Dispenza, and Harold Moore, Peoples Homestead; Ray Youngblood, Dewayne Simpson, and Charles Floyd, Twin City Glass; Skeeter Lasuzzo, Haddad Athletic Equipment; Billy McCarty, Hill Lumber; and Mike Kilcoyne, Krauss and Cahn. Named as an alternate was Danny Warner from Krauss & Cahn.

The team will be managed by Jackie Neal and the coaches will be Dave McKenzie and J. E. Simpson.

All boys are to report to Legions Stadium Monday at 1:30 and are to bring their birth Certificates.

Monroe's first game will be with Union Parish at Legion Stadium Monday night July 25.

Reds Squeeze By Cardinals On Error, 5-3

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dick Simpson scored the tie-breaking run on an error by pitcher Al Jackson and Pete Rose knocked in another run in the seventh inning, giving Cincinnati a 5-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday.

The victory was the Reds' second in four games since Dave Bristol became interim manager of the club Wednesday.

After Simpson doubled in the seventh and Tommy Harper was walked intentionally, Jackson tried for a double play on Vada Pinson's grounder. But he threw the ball into center field, permitting Simpson to score and Harper to take third. Harper then scored on Rose's single.

The Cardinals had tied it 3-3 in the seventh, scoring on a single by Lou Brock. Cincinnati had gone ahead 3-2 in the sixth on a run-scoring double by Tommy Helms, who returned to the line-up after missing 12 days because of a pulled muscle.

The Years, They Roll

Five years ago yesterday, on July 16, 1961, I walked into the Morning World office for the first time. The only things I remember from that day are that Bill Hardin talked loud, Richard Tyler had long hair, Paul Martin was friendly and I was scared.

After I met them, all of whom are still employed by this newspaper, I could honestly say I knew a grand total of four people who lived in Louisiana. The fourth, Mr. James "Red" Parrish who was then the News Bureau Director at Northeast but has since departed, was the only one of the four who knew me.

This description of my first days in Monroe is not of a sentimental nature. Rather it is to relate the beginning of an association with you, John Q. Public of north Louisiana, which has grown into a great number of friendships and working acquaintances.

When I came here this was your home, your school, your athletic team. Now they are mine, too.

To say I knew nothing of Monroe athletics, or even Louisiana athletics, would have to rank among the truest truths ever told. To me, a young man coming from the red clay country of East Texas, Louisiana meant nothing more than cajuns and crawfish. And, Monroe meant nothing at all, unless it had Marilyn tacked on the front of it.

Looking back, those first impressions are now pretty hazy. But some of them are still with me, especially the humorous or ironic ones.

I'll never forget the first time I took the results of a tournament over the phone envolving such elementary schools as Swartz, Millsaps, St. Paschal's and Woodlawn. Although I didn't record the caller's name for all eternity, I can still remember his disbelief that I had to ask the spelling of every name. To him, a local resident no doubt closely associated with the schools, it must have sounded like Carter asking how to spell Liver Pills.

Soon those first hot summer days stretched into weeks. And then football season was here.

My first Louisiana football season. And with it came my initial dose of irony in the raw. It became apparent to me quickly that fall that the people I needed to know about most were the ones I knew about the least. These were the people — mostly athletes and coaches — out in the area.

I was writing about Holly Ridge, Oak Grove, Jonesboro, Mangham, Wisner and many more when actually they were nothing but names to me when they should have been individuals with personalities. Perhaps this still would not have seemed so wrong except for one thing: I WAS PREDICTING THE OUTCOME OF THEIR GAMES.

To compare, this was essentially like getting Phyllis Diller's comments on hair spray, Jed Clampitt's on sophistication, or Lyndon Johnson's on poverty. It was simply the wrong person for the task, via lack of experience.

However, here is where the irony really shone through — I predicted their games with greater success that first year than I have at anytime since. The final season percentage read .821, higher than anyone else's in the state.

Don't ask my forecasting method that season. But neither ask to borrow an old, faded coin I'm saving to have bronzed some day.

Events, People And Memories

Memories can stack up on you when in a business like this, a business which deals entirely with people every single day. Most of the people you get along with, but some you don't. Many you respect and strive to help when the occasion arises simply because they are nice, and a few give the impression of being nice only because you may be able to be of service sometime.

I guess with anybody, the bigger things in our lifes are what we remember. And, the bigger things to me have been the events and people of the sports world.

Two trips to the Cotton Bowl rank high in the fun I've had, and, of course, it didn't hurt things for LSU to win on both occasions. Then there have been the GSC trips, following Northeast to Hammond, Lake Charles, Natchitoches on the way to a basketball championship in 1965, watching the always talented Tribe track team perform throughout the state, making trips to Florida and Houston with the Indians baseballers and filling Friday and Saturday nights with football games every fall — throughout the area and state.

One such football trip is easy to remember. But this one wasn't all fun. I flew to Chattanooga, Tenn., with the Northeast football team in 1964 and we lost the game, 9-0. But that was the best part of the night.

Shortly after taking off on our flight back I looked out the window near me and saw a very sickening sight (at least for that situation). It was a propeller that reminded me of the Eiffel Tower, standing their tilted in the wind. Not so much that it was angeled just like the Paris tower, you see, but more because it was still, unmoving, resting, stopped.

In other words, like man it wasn't doing its job. Well, soon the pilot spoke his comforting message to "fasten your safety belts" because we were circling back to the airport. He said we could probably have made it to Monroe without that engine, but there was no use taking a chance. I still include him in my prayers every night.

Also over the past five years there have been interviews to keep things interesting. Some included John David Crow of Txas A&M and pro football fame, Tommy Nobis of Texas, Jerry Stovall and tackle Dave McCormick of LSU along with the Tigers' athletic director Jim Corbett.

And locally, there was always a tremendous story only several blocks from the office. The "story's" name was Bill Ruple. When I arrived he was about to put together back-to-back state football championships at Neville before moving to the background with an AD post.

The list of yarns about Ruple continue to grow, even now, three years after his final triumph. And after seeing his work I'll never doubt a one.

Finally, and most important of all during my stay here, there has been vast improvement in sports overall for our state. Maybe to you it doesn't seem like much, but there is really no comparison now with five years ago.

There has been the birth (spring, 1961) and growth of the state prep basketball tournament, the building of track programs to rival those elsewhere, football and baseball prospects developed that catch the eye of professionals and, generally, an uplifting of presentation in all sports.

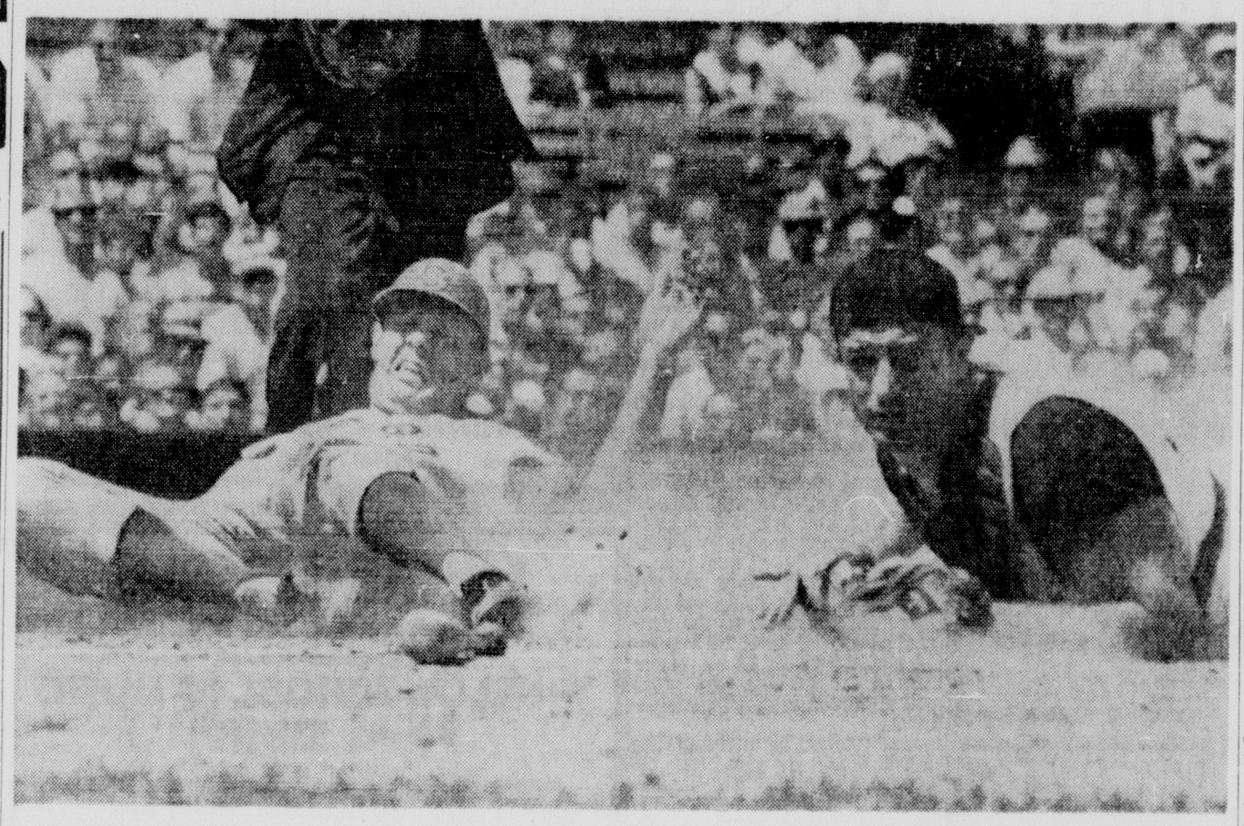

The Gulf States Conference has definitely done its share in improving the image of Louisiana sports as has Grambling, among the most respected small colleges in America.

So there you have it. Five years. A short time if your over 40, a long time if your waiting to come "of voting age."

What was it to me, this first five years in Monroe? Maybe a little of both. I must admit to feeling over 40 physically quite often now and you'll find plenty of coaches who say my predictions sound like something their kid would think up.

I do know one thing — I've enjoyed every minute of it. On second thought, there's no use to start lying now. Let's make that read: I've disliked some of it, enjoyed most of it, found all of it interesting and am looking forward to a repeat course.

Orioles KO McLain, Down Detroit 8-2

DETROIT (AP) — Brooks Robinson's bases-loaded single highlighted a four-run Baltimore first inning and the Orioles routed Denny McLain with two more runs in the second on their way to an 8-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers Saturday.

The first five Orioles to face McLain, making his first start since the All-Star Game, reached base. Singles by Luis Aparicio and Russ Snyder and a walk to Frank Robinson preceded Brooks Robinson's two-run single.

Boog Powell singled, driving in Frank Robinson, and a sacrifice fly by Dave Johnson brought home Brooks.

Norm Cash got one run back for Detroit in the first with a solo homer.

But the Orioles continued their assault in the second. Dave McNally singled, was sacrificed to second and scored on Snyder's double. Frank Robinson greeted reliever Orlando Pena with a single, scoring Snyder.

Pena held the Orioles to two hits in the next three innings, one a run-scoring single by Andy Etchebarren in the fifth following a walk to Curt Blefary and an error by Jake Wood.

Willie Horton accounted for the second Detroit run when he homered with two out in the sixth.

Grand-Slam Lifts Yanks By Athletics

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Horace Clarke hit a grand-slam home run in the 10th inning, lifting the New York Yankees to a 9-5 victory over Kansas City Saturday.

Lou Clinton started the Yankees' winning rally with a one-out single. Clete Boyer doubled him to third, and Jack Aker walked pinch hitter Roger Maris intentionally, loading the bases.

Clarke then drove the ball over the right field fence for his first homer of the season.

The homer also enabled Whitey Ford to post his first victory of the season. Ford came on in the seventh inning and left for Maris in the 10th. Pedro Ramos finished up.

The Athletics tied the game 5-5 in the ninth inning when Bert Campaneris beat out a bunt against Ford, was sacrificed to second and came home as Mike Hershberger singled with two out.

A two-run homer by Joe Pepitone in the third put the Yankees ahead 3-1, but the Athletics tied it on run-scoring singles by Phil Roof and Joe Nossek in the fifth.

The Yankees went ahead again in the sixth as Tom Tresh hit a two-run homer, also off starter Paul Lindblad.

The Athletics scored in the seventh on a single by Hershberger.

Very Pleased

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Lions Coach Harry Gilmer was so pleased with his squad's first full rookie scrimmage Saturday he gave the team today off.

The 26 rookies and 12 veterans formed offensive and defensive units and ran through a National Football League dress rehearsal in which two touchdowns were scored, both on passes.

Rookie Willie Walker of Tennessee State caught both TD tosses, a 35-yard effort from George Izo and a 50-yarder from second-year quarterback Tom Myers.

Santo Puts Cubs Past Pirates, 4-1

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Ron Santo's fifth-inning home run broke a tie and sparked a three-run outburst which carried the Chicago Cubs to a 4-1 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday.

It was the first time in a month that the Pirates scored less than two runs in a game.

Santo's clout, his second in two days, came after Billy Williams tripled and snapped a 1-1 deadlock. Consecutive singles by Ernie Banks, Randy Hundley and Byrone Browne tallied the other run and chased starter and loser Woody Fryman, 8-4.

Bill Hands and Ferguson Jenkins combined to hold the Pirates to five hits. Hands, now 6-8, yielded four hits and struck out three before he pulled a muscle in his back and left in the seventh inning.

Roberto Clemeste followed Gene Alley's triple with a single to give the Pirates a 1-0 lead in the first inning.

Hundley tripled and scored on Browne's ground out, bringing the Cubs even in the fourth.

Chicago Beats Cleveland, 7-2

CHICAGO (AP) — Successive pinch doubles by Smoky Burgess and Bill Skowron highlighted a five-run rally in the sixth inning Saturday and carried the Chiago White Sox to a 7-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The White Sox, completing a sweep of the three-game series and handing the Indians their 11th defeat in the last 12 games, went into the sixth inning trailing 2-1.

With one out Jerry Adair, Tom McCraw and Ken Berry singled tying the game 2-2. Burgess then lashed a two-run double on reliever Jack Kralick's first pitch and Skowron followed with his double.

Cleveland took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Fred Whitefield's run-scoring single, but the Sox tied it in the second on a sacrifice fly to McCraw. The Indians took its final lead in the third on Leon Wagner's run-scoring single.

Frank Broyles To Speak Here To Northeast State Boosters

FRANK BROYLES . . . To Speak Here

One of the most successful football coaches in America, Frank Broyles of Arkansas, will speak to members of the Northeast State Boosters Club here July 28.

The occasion will be a barbecue kicking off the club's annual membership drive. It will be held at Bancroft's Camp outside West Monroe beginning at 6:30 p.m. Present and prospective members of the Booster Club are invited to attend, says Tony Renfro, club president.

Northeast Coach Dixie White, who ran the Razorback offense under Broyles in 1958-61, will introduce the Arkansas coach. President Renfro will also make a short talk and television sportscaster Harry Arthur will be the master of ceremonies.

Broyles in his nine years at Fayetteville has transformed Arkansas from an occasional power in Southwest Conference football. Under him, Razorbacks clubs have won or shared conference championships five times — 1959, 1960, 1961, 1964 and 1965.

His teams have played in five bowl games and won a total of 69 games while losing only 26 and tying one for a winning percentage of .808.

From late 1963 until this year's Cotton Bowl game in which LSU sprang a 14-7 upset, Arkansas won 22 consecutive games. The unbeaten 1964 Razorback team earned Broyles national "Coach of the Year" honors.

Broyles was a star quarterback at Georgia Tech in his playing days, graduating in at his alma mater before going to Arkansas as head coach.

Philadelphia Edges Giants In 15th, 6-5

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tony Gonzalez, who scored the tying run in the ninth inning, singled across the winning tally in the 15th as Philadelphia edged San Francisco 6-5 Saturday.

Despite the loss, the Giants maintained their one-game National League lead over the Pittsburgh Pirates, who lost to Chicago.

Bill White led off the 15th with a single against Joe Gibbon and was sacrificed to second. Gonzalez then rapped a single to left field, driving in White.

The Phillies tied the game 5-5 in the ninth when Gonzalez led off with a single, was sacrificed to second and scored one out later on a single by Phil Linz off Jim Davenport's glove at third.

The Giants broke a 2-2 tie in the sixth, taking advantage of Philadelphia errors by Cookie Rojas, White and Bob Uecker.

Willie McCovey, who singled in the first run in the inning, scored on Tom Haller's single and was followed across the pate by Jim Hart when Uecker let the throw from the outfield get away from him.

Many new drivers are expected and the old experienced ones will be on hand to test skills and driving ability.

The raceway is located 3½ miles off Jonesboro Road past the paper mill in West Monroe.

LA Downs Mets, 7-1 With Sutton

NEW YORK (AP) — Rookie Don Sutton pitched a five-hitter and John Roseboro got his second two-run homer in as many days as the Los Angeles Dodgers whipped the New York Mets 7-1 Saturday.

The loss was the seventh straight for the ninth place Mets.

Sutton, who struck out 11, allowed only two singles over the first seven innings.

The Dodgers hopped on Met starter Dennis Ribant for four runs in the first three innings.

Roseboro hit his sixth homer of the year following Willie Davis' single in the first for a 2-0 lead. In the third, a walk to Gilliam, doubles by Willie Davis and Lou Johnson and a fielder's choice produced two more runs.

Sutton took over from there, retiring 11 straight batters over one stretch. It was the rookie's ninth victory in 16 decisions. The loss evened Ribant's record at 4-4.

The Dodgers got their final runs in the ninth on four walks a wild pitch and Jim Lefebvre's single.

Gun Record Is Set At Pine Hill

Dr. R. W. Dickenhorst powdered 199 out of 200 16 yard trap tagets and then missed the 200th. bird at the Pine Hills Gun Club this past Sunday afternoon.

The 199 straight targets represents a new local gun club record. Ross Graves was the previous record holder with 184 straight trap targets. Club President, Jess Cobb was in second position with 125 straight targets and 196 out of a possible 200 in the scheduled program.

Another Club record was set with the perfect trap squad in which Toby Bancroft, Sr., Jess Cobb, Dr. Dickenhorst, Roy Pittard and David Rosedale all smoked 25 straight targets while shooting in the same squad.

The skeet field was dominated by Wood Sers with 50 straight targets and Marvin Williamson with 98 out of 100 targets.

There is no special scheduled program for this afternoon however both the trap and skeet field will be open for practice promptly at 1:30 p.m.

Jess Cobb announced that work was already well underway on the construction of the new trap house and that forms for the concrete work for both the trap and skeet fields would be laid this week. He stated that the new building program was progressing satisfactorily.

American Swimmers Get Five Victories In Five-Nation Meet

MOSCOW (AP) — United States swimmers won five of the nine events contested Saturday in the controversial Five-Nation meet but the lone world record established was set by a 13-year-old Moscow girl in the 200-meter breaststroke.

Although the meet was to have been a Little Olympics, with the best swimmers from five countries competing, the 40 Russians and the 14 U.S. athletes made up virtually the entire field.

Only Russians and Americans won titles, with Soviet athletes taking the other four Saturday. Eight more events will be contested today. All are being held in the 50-meter open-air pool of Lenin Stadium in the Moscow suburb of Luzhniki.

Don Schollander of Lake Oswego, Ore., who won four gold medals in the 1964 Olympics, opened the meet by taking the 100-meter freestyle in 53.2 seconds, two-tenths of a second faster than at Tokyo.

Other U.S. winners were Charles Hickcox of Bloomington, Ind., in the 100-meter backstroke; Martha Randall of Philadelphia in the 100-meter freestyle; Susan Pitt of New Brunswick, N.J., in the 100-meter butterfly; and Judy Humbarger of Miami, Fla., in the 400-meter freestyle.

Russian men won three events while Irinia Posdynakova was the lone Russian girl winner. She lowered the time for the breaststroke to 2:43 while beating Galina Prozmenshchkova, the 18-year-old winner of the gold medal at Tokyo and the holder of the old record at 2:45.4.

Cynthia Goyette of Detroit, was the first American to finish in this rare, taking fifth place with 2:54.4.

Although Miss Posdnyakova is the youngest member of either team. She is the tallest on the Russian women's squad at 5 feet, 10 inches.

Because of her age, she was not permitted to compete in the Russian scholastic meet a year ago but finished second in the Soviet national meet, which has no age restrictions. There she finished second in the breaststroke to Miss Prozmenshchkova.

She has been given special training since. She learned to swim seven years ago when her father was drowned and her mother took her to a pool to rid the youngster of a fear of the water.

Schollander triumphed despite a bruised left shoulder, which he injured Friday while sitting up is bed and leaning on the arm while talking with a teammate.

Despite the Russians' cancelation for political reasons of the track meet against the U.S. in Los Angeles next weekend and the visit of a U.S. basketball team here, there were no incidents. A huge sign, printed both in Russian and English, said Greetings to Participants.

Miss Randall, holder of the world record at 440-yards, won her event in 1:01.1 and Miss Pitt took the butterfly in 1:05.5. Miss Humbarger triumphed in the medley with 5:24, heading a four-girl U.S. sweep of the race.

Hickcox nipped Viktor Mazanov of Russia by a half second in the 100-meter backstroke with a clocking of 1:01.1.

Records Set

Larrieu, Walker Star In All-American Meet

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Truck driver Ron Larrieu ran the fastest 10,000 meter Race ever on American soil and Art Walker smashed his American triple jump record Saturday in the All-American Track and Field Meet.

This replaced the scheduled United States-Poland dual meet from which the Poles withdrew following the lead of the Russians.

Larrieu, 29 from Santa Monica, Calif., went the gruelling 10,000 meters, equivalent of six miles and 376.1 yards, in 28 minutes, 54.1 seconds. The best previous on an American track was 29:16 by Gerry Lindgren of Spokane, Wash.

The American record of 28:17.6 belongs to Billy Mills who ran in at Augsburg, Germany, last year.

Larrieu was dueled all the way by Van Nelson, a St. Cloud (Minn.) State College sophomore. Nelson went ahead with a mile to go but Larrieu's finishing sprint won out as the youngster finished in 28:55.5, second fastest on an American track.

Larrieu, a 116-pounder who drives a two-ton truck in Los Angeles, was one of the special invitees who joined members of the United States National squad for this meet.

Walker leaped 54-7¾ in the event where Poland's Jozef Schmidt holds the world record at 55-10½ set six years ago. If Poland had not followed the lead of Russia, stating opposition to the U.S. war effort in Viet Nam, Walker and Schmidt would have met in Berkeley.

Walker's long leap and his second best of 54-6½ both bettered his pending American record of 54-4¼.

Sunshine with a fluctuating breeze prevailed for the first afternoon's events of the two-day meet before a crowd of 12,500.

In an afternoon on which American stars planned outstanding performances as a challenge to the iron curtain countries, seven Edwards Stadium records were broken and two equalled

In addition to those of Larrieu and Walker, marks were set by Ed Red of Pasadena, Calif., with a 270-4 javelin throw; Al Oerter, of New York, with 205-6½ in the discus; Paul Wilson of Downey, Calif., and Bob Seagren of Glendale, Calif., each with 16-6 in the pole vault; Pat Traynor, 49er track club of long beach, Calif., 8:47.2 in the 3,000 meter steeplechase, and the U.S. "A" 400 meter relay team, 39.1

The 400-meter foursome of George Anderson, Harold Busby, Tom Jones and Jim Hines was only one-tenth second off the world record.

Pert Charlette Cooke, the 18-year-old speedster from Los Angeles, made a runaway of the women's 400 meter event in 53.8 seconds, just four-tenths off her pending American record.

Charlie Greene of Nebraska won the 100 meter dash in 10.3 with George Anderson of Southern University second in 10.4.

In an upset, 18-year-old Barbara Ferrell of Los Angeles beat world record holder Wyomia Tyus of Tennessee State in 11.6 seconds over 100 meters. Miss Tyus and Edith McGuire finished second and third. They were timed in 11.7 each

Snub Helped Young Lady In Victory

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Petite Barbara Ferrell, who pulled the big surprise of the All-American Track Meet Saturday, said Poland's snub gave her added incentive.

The 18-year-old from Los Angeles beat favored Wyomia Tyus, co-holder of the world record, and Edith McGuire in the 100 meter dash and also outran Miss Tyus in the anchor leg of the 400 meter relay.

Barbara declared she went all out "especially to show them (Poland) we're just as good even if they're not here."

Other track and field girls didn't take the Poles' decision so well. To Willye White, who won the long jump at 20 feet, 4½ inches, it was "just another day, like a practice session."

A 10-year veteran of track and field competition, Miss White, 26, said "The only time I have competition is when I compete with a foreign team."

She said several girls who were expected to win didn't perform too well because they lacked "the butterflies, the little something extra," they would have felt against the Polish team.

Tennessee State College roommates Estelle Baskerville and Eleanor Montgomery, first and second in the high jump, also were disappointed not to have foreign competition.

"I think we could have done a pretty good job," Miss Montgomery said.

"I was let down and just didn't feel like jumping."

Her second place — five feet, six inches — was 2¾ inches below her best mark.

Miss Baskerville, who won with 5-8, nevertheless bettered her personal record by one inch.

Lynn Graham, 18-year-old winner of the shot put at 47 feet, one-half inch, thought she definitely could better her effort if the Poles had appeared.

Second place shot putter Carol Moseke agreed with Miss Graham. Miss Moseke added, "It's a shame political considerations reflect on athletics."

Miss White explained that the girls had more right to be disappointed about the Polish pull-out than the men did.

"We have only three or four meets a year," she said, "and everybody was looking forward to meeting the Poles."

Astros-Braves Are Rained Out

ATLANTA (AP) — Rain washed out the Houston-Atlanta game Saturday after 5½ innings with the score tied 1-1.

The Braves had taken a one-run lead in the fourth inning when Eddie Mathews led off with a solo homer, his seventh of the season.

Houston tied the score in the fifth when John Bateman slapped his 12th home run over the center field fence.

The game, second straight postponed by rain in Atlanta Stadium, was not immediately rescheduled.

It will be replayed from the start but home runs by Mathews and Bateman will count in the records.

Beathard Inks

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Pete Beathard, young quqarterback who played a major role for the Kansas Chiefs in several games last season, signed his 1966 contract Saturday with the American Football League club.

JOE DiMAGGIO, the Yankee Clipper, is still popular with the kids. Here, at a San Francisco baseball clinic, he demonstrates how he held the bat 25 years ago when he hit successfully in 56 consecutive games. His feat established a major league record which still stands. (AP Wirephoto)

DiMaggio's Great Streak Was Stopped 25 Years Ago Today

By JACK STEVENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Smiling, the big fellow signed his autograph for the youngster and said, "Have your Daddy tell you about me; you're too young to know."

Hovering a few feet away, the father answered, "I already have."

For this was Joe DiMaggio, and for him it was one of the frequent but seemingly welcome interruptions during breakfast at the Fisherman's Wharf restaurant which bears the DiMaggio name and is owned by his brothers, Tom and Dom.

Exactly 25 years ago on July 17, 1941, an end came to DiMaggio's consecutive game hitting streak which still stands as the major league baseball record of 56 consecutive games.

Gray but still a trim 195 pounds, Joe doesn't live in the past, yet still considers the streak as the high point in a career with the New York Yankees which brought him Hall of Fame honors.

He vividly recalls the day it ended.

"I hit two balls down the third base line, right on the line. Ken Keltner of Cleveland grabbed both and the momentum carried him outside the foul line for the throws to first.

"Both times the ball and my foot arrived, bang, bang. That's how close they were, but the ball was first . . ."

He remembers the pressures mounting, not so much on the field but off, as he smashed the record set by Willie Keeler with hits in 44 straight games back in 1897.

"People became more and more interested and the well-wishers increased in numbers," he explains. "I have many invitations for breakfast, lunch and dinner. Well-wishers would come to the hotel room early in the morning.

"Lefty Gomez was my roommate and great friend. We would go to a lot of functions and didn't live the life of hermits. But Lefty helped keep order and he kept a lot of people away in a nice way.

"We would go to the ball park early to avoid the extra pressures."

Joe remembers times when his hitting streak was in jeopardy. For instance, one game was called after five innings but he already had his hit. On other occasions, he got the hit in his last time at bat.

In one game, the opposing pitcher threw him nine straight balls before he finally reached up and slammed a drive through the pitcher's legs and into centerfield.

"I had walked twice even though I had the hit sign on counts of three balls and no strikes the first two times," Joe says. "The pitcher didn't have bad control, but there was nothing near the plate. The one I hit was high and away but not as far as the others."

During the record span, DiMaggio collected 91 hits including 16 doubles, four triples and 15 home runs. He doesn't figure the mark will last forever since "records are broken every day."

Today, his hobbies include golf and fishing. He owns his own boat, but brother Tom, the one who went to work instead of going into baseball, acts as the skipper. Dom, who starred with the Red Sox while Joe was with New York, lives in Boston but visits the brothers in San Francisco.

Constantly in demand, Joe attends banquets throughout the nation and also works with youngsters in his home area. He has business interests but the plan of a couple of years ago to establish a Fisherman's Bank has been abandoned.

"Too many problems arose," he explains.

DiMaggio plays golf with Lefty O'Doul, who was his manager with the Pacific Coast League San Francisco Seals before he went up to the majors.

"I get a big kick out of working with kids," Joe says. "You run into a lot of types — some are serious, some characters. They have different personalities and it's fun to see these coming up."

DiMaggio maintains his interest in baseball but sees few games of the San Francisco Giants. An arthritic back condition demands exercise but objects to sitting in the chill breezes which frequent Candlestick Park.

"There's nothing wrong with baseball today," he declares. "People wonder why there aren't more .300 hitters and more 20-game pitchers. I can't put my finger on the answer. Maybe it's because pitchers are taken out of games faster and perhaps hitters are going in so much for the long ball.

"With the emphasis on the long ball, even with two strikes on them, the batters aren't protecting the plate as well as they used to. They still go for the downs."

A tourist identifying himself from Baltimore came up "just to say hello to a man I've admired for a long time" and added, "I think we've got a team that can do it this year."

DiMaggio shook hands and replied, "I think Hank Bauer will bring them in. They seem to have everything."

The visitor then asked if Joe had played with Hank and DiMaggio replied, "We played many years together."

DiMaggio says he has no typical day, but another busy one had begun.

Nichols Shoots 5-Under To Get Lead From Cupit

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Bobby Nichols, using a new putter and a different driver, shot a five-under-par Saturday to barge into the 54-hole lead in the $100,000 Minnesota Golf Classic.

Nichols' three-round total of 200, 13 under par, wrested the lead from Jacky Cupit, who shot a two-over-par 37 on the back nine Saturday and came in at 202.

Nichols, who was behind Cupit by three strokes at the start of the third round, scrambled all over Keller Golf course, but never took a bogey and bagged five birdies for his third-round 33-33—66.

Third was Dan Sikes, who also shot a 66 Saturday for 203.

Tied for fourth at 204 were Gene Littler, Al Besselink and Steve Spray.

Then came Terry Dill, Nohn Schlee, Doug Sanders and Dow Finsterwald at 205. Homero Blancas was alone at 206, just ahead of a pack bunched at 207.

U.S. Open champion Billy Casper ballooned to a two-over 73 and shot up to 207 Saturday.

Nichols missed five greens, including four in a row, and said he wasn't hitting his drives well at all.

Nichols hit 15-fot putts on the first two holes for birdies that got him off to a fast start. He added birds with a five-foot putt on No. 7, a three-footer on No. 12 and a 25-footer on No. 18.

He needed only 11 putts on the back nine and used only 26 putts on the full 18 holes.

"I was chipping real well," said Nichols, former PGA champion who hasn't won a tournament since the Houston Golf Classic last year.

"I'm just thrilled to death with my new putter," he added. "It doesn't have a name, and you can't describe it. I don't know who makes it. It looks like a branding iron.

"I actually putted better Friday, and I drove the ball very poorly today. But I think I manage to play better in the rough anyway."

Nichols birdied the 18th while Cupit was taking a bogey on it. Cupit drove into the right trap on No. 18, then missed the green and two-putted.

Cupit went out in two-under 34, but came in at two-over 37 for an even-par round.

Sikes was buried in a tie for eighth when the day started, but shot a 66 to move into strong contention.

The 36-hole runner-up, Gene Littler, slumped to a 71 like Cupit.

Besselink had a 68 to move up in the field, while Spray also got a 68 to tie for fourth.

The final 18 holes today will decide who claims the $20,000 first money.

Battey, Hall Hit Twins To Win Over Senators

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (AP) — Earl Battey and Jimmie Hall lined two-run singles in the first and second innings as the Minnesota Twins coasted to a 6-2 victory over the Washington Senators Saturday.

Dave Boswell won his seventh against five defeats and gave Minnesota a sweep of the three-game series.

The Twins scored three runs each in the first and second innings. Washington scored one in the fourth on two errors and Dick Nen's single, and added another in the fifth on Willie Kirkland's homer.

Minnesota opened its barrage on singles by Zoilo Versalles and Ted Uhlaender. Versalles scored as Tony Oliva grounded out. Walks to Harmon Killebrew and Don Mincher loaded the bases before Battey's single.

The Twins scored in the second when Versalles singled, Uhlaender doubled and Don Blasingame bobbled the outfield throw. Walks to Oliva and Mincher loaded the bases before Hall delivered.

Jose Santiago 2 Hits Angels As Bosox Win

ANAHEIM (AP) — Jose Santiago held California hitless through 6 1-3 innings and wound up with a two-hitter as Boston whipped the Angels 7-1 Saturday.

Rick Reichardt ended Santiago's hitless string by lining a single to left field with one out in the seventh. Norm Siebern ended the right-hander's shutout bid by hitting a two-out homer in the ninth.

The Red Sox pushed across five unearned runs in the first inning against Dean Chance, 7-11, to help Santiago breeze to his ninth victory against six defeats. The Puerto Rican walked four and struck out 10.

Joe Foy doubled home three first-inning runs and Mike Ryan tripled to drive in the other two as the Red Sox capitalized on two errors by shortstop Jim Fregosi. Foy hit a bases-empty homer off Chance in the third inning, his ninth homer of the year, and George Scott singled home another Boston run in the fifth.

The Angels were unable to advance a runner past first base.

American Swimmers Get Five Victories In Five-Nation Meet

MOSCOW (AP) — United States swimmers won five of the nine events contested Saturday in the controversial Five-Nation meet but the lone world record established was set by a 13-year-old Moscow girl in the 200-meter breaststroke.

Although the meet was to have been a Little Olympics, with the best swimmers from five countries competing, the 40 Russians and the 14 U.S. athletes made up virtually the entire field.

Only Russians and Americans won titles, with Soviet athletes taking the other four Saturday. Eight more events will be contested today. All are being held in the 50-meter open-air pool of Lenin Stadium in the Moscow suburb of Luzhniki.

Don Schollander of Lake Oswego, Ore., who won four gold medals in the 1964 Olympics, opened the meet by taking the 100-meter freestyle in 53.2 seconds, two-tenths of a second faster than at Tokyo.

Other U.S. winners were Charles Hickcox of Bloomington, Ind., in the 100-meter backstroke; Martha Randall of Philadelphia in the 100-meter freestyle; Susan Pitt of New Brunswick, N.J., in the 100-meter butterfly; and Judy Humbarger of Miami, Fla., in the 400-meter freestyle.

Russian men won three events while Irinia Posdynakova was the lone Russian girl winner. She lowered the time for the breaststroke to 2:43 while beating Galina Prozmenshchkova, the 18-year-old winner of the gold medal at Tokyo and the holder of the old record at 2:45.4.

Cynthia Goyette of Detroit, was the first American to finish in this rare, taking fifth place with 2:54.4.

Although Miss Posdnyakova is the youngest member of either team. She is the tallest on the Russian women's squad at 5 feet, 10 inches.

Because of her age, she was not permitted to compete in the Russian scholastic meet a year ago but finished second in the Soviet national meet, which has no age restrictions. There she finished second in the breaststroke to Miss Prozmenshchkova.

She has been given special training since. She learned to swim seven years ago when her father was drowned and her mother took her to a pool to rid the youngster of a fear of the water.

Schollander triumphed despite a bruised left shoulder, which he injured Friday while sitting up is bed and leaning on the arm while talking with a teammate.

Despite the Russians' cancelation for political reasons of the track meet against the U.S. in Los Angeles next weekend and the visit of a U.S. basketball team here, there were no incidents. A huge sign, printed both in Russian and English, said Greetings to Participants.

Miss Randall, holder of the world record at 440-yards, won her event in 1:01.1 and Miss Pitt took the butterfly in 1:05.5. Miss Humbarger triumphed in the medley with 5:24, heading a four-girl U.S. sweep of the race.

Hickcox nipped Viktor Mazanov of Russia by a half second in the 100-meter backstroke with a clocking of 1:01.1.

Records Set

Larrieu, Walker Star In All-American Meet

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Truck driver Ron Larrieu ran the fastest 10,000 meter Race ever on American soil and Art Walker smashed his American triple jump record Saturday in the All-American Track and Field Meet.

This replaced the scheduled United States-Poland dual meet from which the Poles withdrew following the lead of the Russians.

Larrieu, 29 from Santa Monica, Calif., went the gruelling 10,000 meters, equivalent of six miles and 376.1 yards, in 28 minutes, 54.1 seconds. The best previous on an American track was 29:16 by Gerry Lindgren of Spokane, Wash.

The American record of 28:17.6 belongs to Billy Mills who ran in at Augsburg, Germany, last year.

Larrieu was dueled all the way by Van Nelson, a St. Cloud (Minn.) State College sophomore. Nelson went ahead with a mile to go but Larrieu's finishing sprint won out as the youngster finished in 28:55.5, second fastest on an American track.

Larrieu, a 116-pounder who drives a two-ton truck in Los Angeles, was one of the special invitees who joined members of the United States National squad for this meet.

Walker leaped 54-7¾ in the event where Poland's Jozef Schmidt holds the world record at 55-10½ set six years ago. If Poland had not followed the lead of Russia, stating opposition to the U.S. war effort in Viet Nam, Walker and Schmidt would have met in Berkeley.

Walker's long leap and his second best of 54-6¼ both bettered his pending American record of 54-4¼.

Sunshine with a fluctuating breeze prevailed for the first afternoon's events of the two-day meet before a crowd of 12,500.

In an afternoon on which American stars planned outstanding performances as a challenge to the iron curtain countries, seven Edwards Stadium records were broken and two equalled.

In addition to those of Larrieu and Walker, marks were set by Ed Red of Pasadena, Calif., with a 270-4 javelin throw; Al Oerter, of New York, with 205-6½ in the discus; Paul Wilson of Downey, Calif., and Bob Seagren of Glendale, Calif., each with 16-6 in the pole vault; Pat Traynor, 49er track club of long beach, Calif., 8:47.2 in the 3,000 meter steeplechase, and the U.S. "A" 400 meter relay team, 39.1.

The 400-meter foursome of George Anderson, Harold Busby, Tom Jones and Jim Hines was only one-tenth second off the world record.

Pert Charlette Cooke, the 18-year-old speedster from Los Angeles, made a runaway of the women's 400 meter event in 53.8 seconds, just four-tenths off her pending American record.

Charlie Greene of Nebraska won the 100 meter dash in 10.3 with George Anderson of Southern University second in 10.4.

In an upset, 18-year-old Barbara Ferrell of Los Angeles beat world record holder Wyomia Tyus of Tennessee State in 11.6 seconds over 100 meters. Miss Tyus and Edith McGuire finished second and third. They were timed in 11.7 each.

Snub Helped Young Lady In Victory

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Petite Barbara Ferrell, who pulled the big surprise of the All-American Track Meet Saturday, said Poland's snub gave her added incentive.

The 18-year-old from Los Angeles beat favored Wyomia Tyus, co-holder of the world record, and Edith McGuire in the 100 meter dash and also outran Miss Tyus in the anchor leg of the 400 meter relay.

Barbara declared she went all out "especially to show them (Poland) we're just as good even if they're not here."

Other track and field girls didn't take the Poles' decision so well. To Willye White, who won the long jump at 20 feet, 4½ inches, it was "just another day, like a practice session."

A 10-year veteran of track and field competition, Miss White, 26, said "The only time I have competition is when I compete with a foreign team."

She said several girls who were expected to win didn't perform too well because they lacked "the butterflies, the little something extra," they would have felt against the Polish team.

Tennessee State College roommates Estelle Baskerville and Eleanor Montgomery, first and second in the high jump, also were disappointed not to have foreign competition.

"I think we could have done a pretty good job," Miss Montgomery said.

"I was let down and just didn't feel like jumping."

Her second place — five feet, six inches — was 2¾ inches below her best mark.

Miss Baskerville, who won with 5-8, nevertheless bettered her personal record by one inch.

Lynn Graham, 18-year-old winner of the shot put at 47 feet, one-half inch, thought she defenitely could better her effort if the Poles had appeared.

Second place shot putter Carol Moseke agreed with Miss Graham. Miss Moseke added, "It's a shame political considerations reflect on athletics."

Miss White explained that the girls had more right to be disappointed about the Polish pull-out than the men did.

"We have only three or four meets a year," she said, "and everybody was looking forward to meeting the Poles."

Astros-Braves Are Rained Out

ATLANTA (AP) — Rain washed out the Houston-Atlanta game Saturday after 5½ innings with the score tied 1-1.

The Braves had taken a one-run lead in the fourth inning when Eddie Mathews led off with a solo homer, his seventh of the season.

Houston tied the score in the fifth when John Bateman slapped his 12th home run over the center field fence.

The game, second straight postponed by rain in Atlanta Stadium, was not immediately rescheduled.

It will be replayed from the start but home runs by Mathews and Bateman will count in the records.

Beathard Inks

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Pete Beathard, young quqarterback who played a major role for the Kansas Chiefs in several games last season, signed his 1966 contract Saturday with the American Football League club.

JOE DiMAGGIO, the Yankee Clipper, is still popular with the kids. Here, at a San Francisco baseball clinic, he demonstrates how he held the bat 25 years ago when he hit successfully in 56 consecutive games. His feat established a major league record which still stands. (AP Wirephoto)

DiMaggio's Great Streak Was Stopped 25 Years Ago Today

By JACK STEVENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Smiling, the big fellow signed his autograph for the youngster and said, "Have your Daddy tell you about me; you're too young to know."

Hovering a few feet away, the father answered, "I already have."

For this was Joe DiMaggio, and for him it was one of the frequent but seemingly welcome interruptions during breakfast at the Fisherman's Wharf restaurant which bears the DiMaggio name and is owned by his brothers, Tom and Dom.

Exactly 25 years ago on July 17, 1941, an end came to DiMaggio's consecutive game hitting streak which still stands as the major league baseball record of 56 consecutive games.

Gray but still a trim 195 pounds, Joe doesn't live in the past, yet still considers the streak as the high point in a career with the New York Yankees which brought him Hall of Fame honors.

He vividly recalls the day it ended.

"I hit two balls down the third base line, right on the line. Ken Keltner of Cleveland grabbed both and the momentum carried him outside the foul line for the throws to first.

"Both times the ball and my foot arrived, bang, bang. That's how close they were, but the ball was first . . ."

He remembers the pressures mounting, not so much on the field but off, as he smashed the record set by Willie Keeler with hits in 44 straight games back in 1897.

"People became more and more interested and the well-wishers increased in numbers," he explains. "I have many invitations for breakfast, lunch and dinner. Well-wishers would come to the hotel room early in the morning.

"Lefty Gomez was my roommate and great friend. We would go to a lot of functions and didn't live the life of hermits. But Lefty helped keep order and he kept a lot of people away in a nice way.

"We would go to the ball park early to avoid the extra pressures."

Joe remembers times when his hitting streak was in jeopardy. For instance, one game was called after five innings but he already had his hit. On other occasions, he got the hit in his last time at bat.

In one game, the opposing pitcher threw him nine straight balls before he finally reached up and slammed a drive through the pitcher's legs and into centerfield.

"I had walked twice even though I had the hit sign on counts of three balls and no strikes the first two times," Joe says. "The pitcher didn't have bad control, but there was nothing near the plate. The one I hit was high and away but not as far as the others."

During the record span, DiMaggio collected 91 hits including 16 doubles, four triples and 15 home runs. He doesn't figure the mark will last forever since "records are broken every day."

Today, his hobbies include golf and fishing. He owns his own boat, but brother Tom, the one who went to work instead of going into baseball, acts as the skipper. Dom, who starred with the Red Sox while Joe was with New York, lives in Boston but visits the brothers in San Francisco.

Constantly in demand, Joe attends banquets throughout the nation and also works with youngsters in his home area. He has business interests but the plan of a couple of years ago to establish a Fisherman's Bank has been abandoned.

"Too many problems arose," he explains.

DiMaggio plays golf with Lefty O'Doul, who was his manager with the Pacific Coast League San Francisco Seals before he went up to the majors.

"I get a big kick out of working with kids," Joe says. "You run into a lot of types — some are serious, some characters. They have different personalities and it's fun to see these coming up."

DiMaggio maintains his interest in baseball but sees few games of the San Francisco Giants. An arthritic back condition demands exercise but objects to sitting in the chill breezes which frequent Candlestick Park.

"There's nothing wrong with baseball today," he declares. "People wonder why there aren't more .300 hitters and more 20-game pitchers. I can't put my finger on the answer. Maybe it's because pitchers are taken out of games faster and perhaps hitters are going in so much for the long ball.

"With the emphasis on the long ball, even with two strikes on them, the batters aren't protecting the plate as well as they used to. They still go for the downs."

A tourist identifying himself from Baltimore came up "just to say hello to a man I've admired for a long time" and added, "I think we've got a team that can do it this year."

DiMaggio shook hands and replied, "I think Hank Bauer will bring them in. They seem to have everything."

The visitor then asked if Joe had played with Hank and DiMaggio replied, "We played many years together."

DiMaggio says he has no typical day, but another busy one had begun.

Nichols Shoots 5-Under To Get Lead From Cupit

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Bobby Nichols, using a new putter and a different driver, shot a five-under-par Saturday to barge into the 54-hole lead in the $100,000 Minnesota Golf Classic.

Nichols' three-round total of 200, 13 under par, wrested the lead from Jacky Cupit, who shot a two-over-par 37 on the back nine Saturday and came in at 202.

Nichols, who was behind Cupit by three strokes at the start of the third round, scrambled all over Keller Golf course, but never took a bogey and bagged five birdies for his third-round 33-33—66.

Third was Dan Sikes, who also shot a 66 Saturday for 203.

Tied for fourth at 204 were Gene Littler, Al Besselink and Steve Spray.

Then came Terry Dill, Nohn Schlee, Doug Sanders and Dow Finsterwald at 205. Homero Blancas was alone at 206, just ahead of a pack bunched at 207.

U.S. Open champion Billy Casper ballooned to a two-over 73 and shot up to 207 Saturday.

Nichols missed five greens, including four in a row, and said he wasn't hitting his drives well at all.

Nichols hit 15-fot putts on the first two holes for birdies that got him off to a fast start. He added birds with a five-foot putt on No. 7, a three-footer on No. 12 and a 25-footer on No. 18.

He needed only 11 putts on the back nine and used only 26 putts on the full 18 holes.

"I was chipping real well," said Nichols, former PGA champion who hasn't won a tournament since the Houston Golf Classic last year.

"I'm just thrilled to death with my new putter," he added. "It doesn't have a name, and you can't describe it. I don't know who makes it. It looks like a branding iron.

"I actually putted better Friday, and I drove the ball very poorly today. But I think I manage to play better in the rough anyway."

Nichols birdied the 18th while Cupit was taking a bogey on it. Cupit drove into the right trap on No. 18, then missed the green and two-putted.

Cupit went out in two-under 34, but came in at two-over 37 for an even-par round.

Sikes was buried in a tie for eighth when the day started, but shot a 66 to move into strong contention.

The 36-hole runner-up, Gene Littler, slumped to a 71 like Cupit.

Besselink had a 68 to move up in the field, while Spray also got a 68 to tie for fourth.

The final 18 holes today will decide who claims the $20,000 first money.

Battey, Hall Hit Twins To Win Over Senators

MINNEAPOLIS-S T. PAUL (AP) — Earl Battey and Jim mie Hall lined two-run singles in the first and second innings as the Minnesota Twins coasted to a 6-2 victory over the Washington Senators Saturday.

Dave Boswell won his seventh against five defeats and gave Minnesota a sweep of the three-game series.

The Twins scored three runs each in the first and second innings. Washington scored one in the fourth on two errors and Dick Nen's single, and added another in the fifth on Willie Kirkland's homer.

Minnesota opened its barrage on singles by Zoilo Versalles and Ted Uhlaender. Versalles scored as Tony Oliva grounded out. Walks to Harmon Killebrew and Don Mincher loaded the bases before Battey's single.

The Twins scored in the second when Versalles singled, Uhlaender doubled and Don Blasingame bobbled the outfield throw. Walks to Oliva and Mincher loaded the bases before Hall delivered.

Jose Santiago 2 Hits Angels As Bosox Win

ANAHEIM (AP) — Jose Santiago held California hitless through 6 1-3 innings and wound up with a two-hitter as Boston whipped the Angels 7-1 Saturday.

Rick Reichardt ended Santiago's hitless string by lining a single to left field with one out in the seventh. Norm Siebern ended the right-hander's shutout bid by hitting a two-out homer in the ninth.

The Red Sox pushed across five unearned runs in the first inning against Dean Chance, 7-11, to help Santiago breeze to his ninth victory against six defeats. The Puerto Rican walked four and struck out 10.

Joe Foy doubled home three first-inning runs and Mike Ryan tripled to drive in the other two as the Red Sox capitalized on two errors by shortstop Jim Fregosi. Foy hit a bases-empty homer off Chance in the third inning, his ninth homer of the year, and George Scott singled home another Boston run in the fifth.

The Angels were unable to advance a runner past first base.

Monty Kaser, Public Links Golf Champ

MILWAUKEE (AP) — In a match that warmed the hearts of many a duffer, Monty Kaser of Wichita, Kan., defeated Dave Ojala of Two Harbors, Minn., 6 and 5 in a scheduled 36-hole duel and won the National Public Links Golf Championship Saturday.

Kaser, 24, a payroll timekeeper at an aircraft factory, was nine over par for the Brown Deer course before closing out on the 31st hole with a par 4 as Ojala took one of his many bogeys.

Ojala was 17 over for the distance.

Ojala, 21, a pharmacy student at the University of Minnesota, never recovered when Kaser won the second, third and fourth holes in the morning round and took a 4-up lead at the luncheon break. Kaser had a 36-39—75 against par 35-36—71, While Ojala finished with a 39-41—80.

Kaser yielded the 19th and 20th holes with double bogey 6s when his shots wandered into trees. He then won the next four holes in succession with two birdies and two pars to go 6-up.

By the 27th hole he was 5-up after shooting a 38 as Ojala struggled to 40.

Ojala won the 28th with a bogey 5 when Kaser three-putted. Kaser took the 29th with a regulation 3. They halved the 30th with par 4s and Kaser closed out the match on the next hole with a par 4.

Hankinson Stars

MANKATO, Minn. (AP) — Quarterback John Hankinson, who starred at the University of Minnesota, steered his squad to two long touchdown marches Saturday in his first chance to show his stuff as a Minnesota Vikings rookie.

Veteran reserve quarterback Ron VanderKelen directed another touchdown drive. He shot a short pass to Jim Young, who ran nearly 50 yards for the score in the National Football League squad's drill.

The first squad dropout was Chuck Arrobio, formerly of Southern California.

Claridge Sharp

BLACK MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — Quarterback Dennis Claridge tossed an 80-yard touchdown pass and threw another for a 45-yard gain Saturday as the Atlanta Falcons went through an hour-long scrimmage.

Claridge's scoring throw was to end Hugh McInnis, a free agent who last played pro football for St. Louis in 1961. The other long toss was grabbed by end Billy Martin, former Georgia Tech star who played with the Chicago Bears last year.

Most impressive runner during the scrimmage was Tom Wilson, former Los Angeles Rams' halfback.

Offense May Suffer From New Outfield

HOUSTON (AP) — A veteran outfielder believes the Astrodome's new synthetic outfield may make it tougher for a single to score a base runner from second base.

The $180,000 job of replacing the outfield's 90,000 square feet of natural grass with gigantic strips of tough nylon held together by zippers was completed Friday.

The Houston Astros and the Philadelphia Phillies meet Tuesday night in the first major league game to be played on a man-made outfield. The Astrodome's infield was converted to a nylon surface last March.

Gene Mauch, the Philadelphia manager, is among those who have raised doubts about the new artificial grass known as Astroturf, but Jim Busby, Houston's third base coach and a major league outfielder 13 years, disagrees.

Mauch has expressed fear traction will be a big problem and outfielders may have difficulty making quick starts and sudden turns and stops on such footing.

With Manager Grady Hatton hitting fungoes, Busby went through an outfielder's toughest maneuvers and said the new surface is a great improvement.

"On the Astroturf you get a true hop on the ball," Busby said. "You just need to quicken your reactions for fielding quicker balls. I don't know why anyone won't like it."

Busby said third base coaches may have to make adjustments also because the ball will be getting to the outfield quicker.

"This is something still to be proven but it may be tougher to score from second base on a single because the ball will get out there quicker than on grass," he said.

"It might cut down on guys going from first to third. Of course you might have to play the ball a little deeper. All of this has yet to be proved, but it may work out this way."

Jim Wynn, Houston's center fielder, tested the surface Wednesday.

"The footing was fine but I think we'll have to wait until we play on it under true game conditions to know about all the possible bounces that might occur," Wynn said.

Monty Kaser, Public Links Golf Champ

MILWAUKEE (AP) — In a match that warmed the hearts of many a duffer, Monty Kaser of Wichita, Kan., defeated Dave Ojala of Two Harbors, Minn., 6 and 5 in a scheduled 36-hole duel and won the National Public Links Golf Championship Saturday.

Kaser, 24, a payroll timekeeper at an aircraft factory, was nine over par for the Brown Deer course before closing out on the 31st hole with a par 4 as Ojala took one of his many bogeys.

Ojala was 17 over for the distance.

Ojala, 21, a pharmacy student at the University of Minnesota, never recovered when Kaser won the second, third and fourth holes in the morning round and took a 4-up lead at the luncheon break. Kaser had a 36-39—75 against par 35-36—71, While Ojala finished with a 39-41—80.

Kaser yielded the 19th and 20th holes with double bogey 6s when his shots wandered into trees. He then won the next four holes in succession with two birdies and two pars to go 6-up.

By the 27th hole he was 5-up after shooting a 38 as Ojala struggled to 40.

Ojala won the 28th with a bogey 5 when Kaser three-putted. Kaser took the 29th with a regulation 3. They halved the 30th with par 4s and Kaser closed out the match on the next hole with a par 4.

Hankinson Stars

MANKATO, Minn. (AP) — Quarterback John Hankinson, who starred at the University of Minnesota, steered his squad to two long touchdown marches Saturday in his first chance to show his stuff as a Minnesota Vikings rookie.

Veteran reserve quarterback Ron VanderKelen directed another touchdown drive. He shot a short pass to Jim Young, who ran nearly 50 yards for the score in the National Football League squad's drill.

The first squad dropout was Chuck Arrobio, formerly of Southern California.

Claridge Sharp

BLACK MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — Quarterback Dennis Claridge tossed an 80-yard touchdown pass and threw another for a 45-yard gain Saturday as the Atlanta Falcons went through an hour-long scrimmage.

Claridge's scoring throw was to end Hugh McInnis, a free agent who last played pro football for St. Louis in 1961. The other long toss was grabbed by end Billy Martin, former Georgia Tech star who played with the Chicago Bears last year.

Most impressive runner during the scrimmage was Tom Wilson, former Los Angeles Rams' halfback.

Offense May Suffer From New Outfield

HOUSTON (AP) — A veteran outfielder believes the Astrodome's new synthetic outfield may make it tougher for a single to score a base runner from second base.

The $180,000 job of replacing the outfield's 90,000 square feet of natural grass with gigantic strips of tough nylon held together by zippers was completed Friday.

The Houston Astros and the Philadelphia Phillies meet Tuesday night in the first major league game to be played on a man-made outfield. The Astrodome's infield was converted to a nylon surface last March.

Gene Mauch, the Philadelphia manager, is among those who have raised doubts about the new artificial grass known as Astroturf, but Jim Busby, Houston's third base coach and a major league outfielder 13 years, disagrees.

Mauch has expressed fear traction will be a big problem and outfielders may have difficulty making quick starts and sudden turns and stops on such footing.

With Manager Grady Hatton hitting fungoes, Busby went through an outfielder's toughest maneuvers and said the new surface is a great improvement.

"On the Astroturf you get a true hop on the ball," Busby said. "You just need to quicken your reactions for fielding quicker balls. I don't know why anyone won't like it."

Busby said third base coaches may have to make adjustments also because the ball will be getting to the outfield quicker.

"This is something still to be proven but it may be tougher to score from second base on a single because the ball will get out there quicker than on grass," he said.

"It might cut down on guys going from first to third. Of course you might have to play the ball a little deeper. All of this has yet to be proved, but it may work out this way."

Jim Wynn, Houston's center fielder, tested the surface Wednesday.

"The footing was fine but I think we'll have to wait until we play on it under true game conditions to know about all the possible bounces that might occur," Wynn said.

COMIN' UP AFIELD

3-Week Split Dove Season

With Paul Martin

There will be a three-way split of Louisiana's dove hunting season for 1966-67, it was revealed by the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission after a poll of members of the commission. The announcement included seasons, bag limits and shooting hours for rails and gallinules, snipe and woodcock in addition to doves.

The mourning dove, considered by many a top game bird in Louisiana and heavily hunted, will face 70 half days of shooting beginning at noon each day.

The dove season opens in Louisiana at noon Saturday, September 3, and the first session ends at sunset Sunday, September 18 for a toal of 16 half days.

The second session runs October 15 through November 6 for a total of 23 half days.

The third part in from December 16, 1966, through January 5, 1967, for 31 half days.

No morning hunting will be permitted for doves during any of the periods.

The daily limit of doves is generous, an even dozen. The possession limit after the second day is 24 birds.

Commission Director J. D. Hair Jr., who made the announcement of the dove regulations, also listed other seasons already established as:

Rail and gallinule, Nov. 5, 1966, through Jan. 13, daily limit 15, possession limit of 30 singly or in aggregate; woodcock, Dec. 10, 1966, through Jan. 28, 1967, daily limit five, possession ten; Wilson snipe, Nov. 26, 1966, through Jan. 14, 1967, daily limit of eight, possession limit 16 birds.

The special teal season, Sept. 17 through Sept. 25, had earlier been announced for waterfowl hunters who need a specal permit for this "bonus" waterfowl hunt. Deadline for teal permit applications is August 17. Requests for teal permits should be made by individual hunters to "Teal Section, Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission, Room 305, Old Peabody Hall, Capitol Station, Baton Rouge, La., 70804."

The hunting regulations for other resident game — deer, squirrel, rabbit, quail, turkey — will be announced after a commission meeting in New Orleans July 26. Federal waterfowl regulations usually are announced complete in August.

New Era For Cheniere

The Ouachita Parish Police Jury has given the green light to Cheniere Lake improvement plans with the approval of the entire structure of recommendations made by biologists of the LWLFC as a cure for Cheniere's ills.

The jury did not present a solid front on the question, voting 12-7 for the recommendations, and there has been outspoken criticism of the plans, opponents finding it a bitter pill to take. The cure prescribed by the doctor is sometimes bitter, but saving the patient is what counts, not the taste of the remedy.

The word "drain" has been kicked around too much in the arguments for and against. The lake is not going to be drained, but an annual drawdown of water is considered beneficial in all phases of fish and lake management.

The board of directors of the Ouachita Wildlife Unit, in session this week, went on record commending the police jury for officially approving the recommendations and thus giving the Cheniere Lake Commission and fish biologists the signal to start the work.

The lake commission is paying for the work out of its own funds. No request for money was before the jury. E. D. Elmore, lake commission chairman, said a working fund of $17,000 is currently available (it comes from our tax money specially earmarked for Cheniere) and more cash becomes available annually.

The work is not to be completed in a year for certainly all the work can't be done during a single water "draw down." The cleaning of the lake will be done during the low water periods.

Disagreeable as some sportsmen still find plans for Cheniere, we think they will change their ideas in time after the project has had a chance to work. Certainly Cheniere will be able to present a better appearance as a recreation resource.

Recommendations include annual draw down of the water "as soon as possible after July 5" from a 66.5 feet (sea level) to 60.5; cleaning of 100 acres in each of the lake's seven public park areas (no living cypress trees will be removed from any of these areas); creating 50-foot boat lanes connecting the park areas; continuing supervised commercial fishing; continuing the spraying program for aquatic vegetation; deepening shoreline waters two feet at park areas; removing spillway screens; continue fish management studies, and polution control.

Last Month Of Fish Contest

The second phase of the Ouachita Wildlife Unit's summer fish contest is over, but results won't be announced until the unit's July 26 meeting.

Jim Packer, contest chairman, has reported more entries were registered for the second session than the first and another big batch of prizes are waiting for them.

The third and final session of the contest started Friday and will run through August 15.

Fishermen who are not members of the Ouachita Unit still have time to join and become eligible for the grand prizes to be awarded for the best catches over the three-month period. Awards for the third session, plus the grand prizes will be made at the same meeting, August 30.

Sportsmen In Action

Fishing can sometimes become a dangerous game, particularly if you tie into one of those vicious loggerhead snapping turtles of which there's nothing meaner when bothered.

JERRALD KING, Lake Providence, hooked a 96-pound loggerhead on an H and H lure while fishing East Carroll's Concordia Lake. Pulling the turtle up to his boat, the snapper promptly bit a chunk out of the boat. JIMMY DILLARD, fishing nearby and seeing he might be of some assistance, joined the battle and got his paddle snapped in two. With caution and hard work the men finally captured the turtle, weighed it in, and then King gave it to a neighbor.

Fishing the River Chute at Lake Providence, MRS. MORRIS COLEMAN took 24 nice crappie. "POP" WHITNEY, Natchez, needed only an hour, 4 to 5 a.m., to take 12 bass Wednesday at Lake Concordia (Ferriday). MRS. D. L. STEWART, Heflin, and MRS. BRYANT HUTCHINS, Sibley, took crappie limits two straight days at Larto Lake. R. F. and MRS. THOMAS, Castor, both had crappie limits from Saline Bayou. GEORGE BOOTH and partner took ten bass in a short night trip to St. John Wednesday.

LOYAL LASTER has taken bream limits every day for the week in the Bayou D'Arbonne-Ouachita river vicinity. MRS. ALICE WHITE, RUSSELL WHITE and RUTH PYLANT have worked the same area successfully for good strings of white perch.

PETE and MRS. INGRAM, Bastrop, showed crappie limits of 50 each from Bussey Brake a few days ago. They were back Thursday night for a "level full" ice box. (We were glad to hear about Pete since we hadn't seen or heard of him since Jim Malone had that old "original Indians" night for ex-Northeast State football players over 15 years ago. Pete was an end for the first Indian football teams of 1931 and '32.)

Other Bussey success included MACK BONO, Lake Charles, 15 bass; BOB FLETCHER and R. LARY, Monroe, 22 bass; N. C. FINLEY, Crossett, Ark., 45 bream.

Reports from Lake D'Arbonne include CHARLIE HILDRETH and ELVIN VISMUKE, Bernice, 115 bream; GENE HAMPTON, JOE GREEN and CLIFF HAMPTON, Jonesboro, 72 crappie and three bass; S. R. BRANCH and FRED CLINE, Haynesville, crappie limits; H. C. GARNER and son, Athens, 40 crappie and 50 bream; BILL and MRS. COLVIN, Homer, crappie limist twice; WILLIE COLVIN, Homer, crappie limit; and crappie limits for W. E. BROWNING JR., HUGH HUNT, J. T. BROWNING and GUY CALLUDER, Haynesville.

SAM LADART and CHARLES DEAN had a good week with Black Bayou Lake bass, 16 one day and back with a couple of friends (didn't leave names) for 56. STEVE JOINER got the bass limit. ROBERT ARRANT caught eight bass Thursday morning and was back Friday for eight more, L. P. CROSSLAND caught the crappie limit; JOE and MRS. JACKSON had 90 bream; LEE HICKS, 91 bream, and CLEOPHIS DAVIS and MRS. DAVIS, 60 crappie.

Some Cheniere catches included LEE SIMPSON, 17 crappie, and back with CHARLES DREW for 22; LOUIE MATHIS, 23 crappie; I. N. CAMP, 26 crappie; NICK CAMP, 12 crappie; ED VANDERFORD, 35 bream; DAVE MAY, 11 crappie, and PEEWEE and MRS. MYER, 30 BREAM.

Packers Drill

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The Green Bay Packers got in some light contact work Saturday for the first time in their training season. After a morning workout Coach Vince Lombardi put his National Football League champions through a drill on blocking and tackling in addition to a full scale passing practice which featured live contact protection.

Richey Meets Froehling In Finals Today

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Cliff Richey added a menacing serve to his strong ground game and mowed down Marty Riessen, 6-1, 6-1, 6-3 Saturday to advance to the finals of the National Clay Courts Tennis Championships.

Richey, the nation's third-ranked amateur, will meet Frank Froehling for the title today.

The long, lean Froehling, now a New York insurance executive playing tennis only on weekends, picked apart Australia's Owen Davidson 6-3, 6-1, 6-1.

Top-seeded Nancy Richey, Cliff's older sister, moved into the womens' finals with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over Australia's Kerry Melville.

Miss Richey will meet Stephanie DeFina, the No. 2 seed, for the crown which Miss Richey has held for the past three years.

Miss DeFina, of Hollywood, Fla., defeated South Africa's Esme Emanuel 6-3, 7-5 in a Saturday semifinal.

"It was the best I've ever served in my life," said Cliff Richey, after the 19-year-old Texan demolished Riessen, of Evanston, Ill., the tournament's No. 4 seed. "I was real pleased with this."

Nancy Richey, the No. 1 women's seed and Cliff's older sister, defeated Kerry Melville of Australia, 6-3, 6-4, to advance to the finals in the womens' singles.

Miss Richey meets the winner of the semifinal match between South Africa's Esme Emanuel and Stephanie DeFina, Hollywood, Fla., in the championship round today.

Froehling, who quit the amateur tour to go into business, jumped off to a four-game lead in the first set. The left-handed Davidson rallied to take the next three games, but could not wrest control from the 6-foot-3½ former resident of Coral Gables, Fla.

"It was one of those days," said the weekend player from New York. "I didn't miss a shot."

Miss Richey, who has yet to lose a set in the tournament, fell behind in the second frame against Miss Melville. But Miss Richey, seeking her fourth straight Clay Courts crown, broke Miss Melville's service for four straight points in the final game to go ahead.

3-Week Split Dove Season

With Paul Martin

There will be a three-way split of Louisiana's dove hunting season for 1966-67, it was revealed by the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission after a poll of members of the commission. The announcement included seasons, bag limits and shooting hours for rails and gallinules, snipe and woodcock in addition to doves.

The mourning dove, considered by many a top game bird in Louisiana and heavily hunted, will face 70 half days of shooting beginning at noon each day.

The dove season opens in Louisiana at noon Saturday, September 3, and the first session ends at sunset Sunday, September 18 for a toal of 16 half days.

The second session runs October 15 through November 6 for a total of 23 half days.

The third part in from December 16, 1966, through January 5, 1967, for 31 half days.

No morning hunting will be permitted for doves during any of the periods.

The daily limit of doves is generous, an even dozen. The possession limit after the second day is 24 birds.

Commission Director J. D. Hair Jr., who made the announcement of the dove regulations, also listed other seasons already established as:

Rail and gallinule, Nov. 5, 1966, through Jan. 13, daily limit 15, possession limit of 30 singly or in aggregate; woodcock, Dec. 10, 1966, through Jan. 28, 1967, daily limit five, possession ten; Wilson snipe, Nov. 26, 1966, through Jan. 14, 1967, daily limit of eight, possession limit 16 birds.

The special teal season, Sept. 17 through Sept. 25, had earlier been announced for waterfowl hunters who need a specal permit for this "bonus" waterfowl hunt. Deadline for teal permit applications is August 17. Requests for teal permits should be made by individual hunters to "Teal Section, Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission, Room 305, Old Peabody Hall, Capitol Station, Baton Rouge, La., 70804."

The hunting regulations for other resident game — deer, squirrel, rabbit, quail, turkey — will be announced after a commission meeting in New Orleans July 26. Federal waterfowl regulations usually are announced complete in August.

New Era For Cheniere

The Ouachita Parish Police Jury has given the green light to Cheniere Lake improvement plans with the approval of the entire structure of recommendations made by biologists of the LWLFC as a cure for Cheniere's ills.

The jury did not present a solid front on the question, voting 12-7 for the recommendations, and there has been outspoken criticism of the plans, opponents finding it a bitter pill to take. The cure prescribed by the doctor is sometimes bitter, but saving the patient is what counts, not the taste of the remedy.

The word "drain" has been kicked around too much in the arguments for and against. The lake is not going to be drained, but an annual drawdown of water is considered beneficial in all phases of fish and lake management.

The board of directors of the Ouachita Wildlife Unit, in session this week, went on record commending the police jury for officially approving the recommendations and thus giving the Cheniere Lake Commission and fish biologists the signal to start the work.

The lake commission is paying for the work out of its own funds. No request for money was before the jury. E. D. Elmore, lake commission chairman, said a working fund of $17,000 is currently available (it comes from our tax money specially earmarked for Cheniere) and more cash becomes available annually.

The work is not to be completed in a year for certainly all the work can't be done during a single water "draw down." The cleaning of the lake will be done during the low water periods.

Disagreeable as some sportsmen still find plans for Cheniere, we think they will change their ideas in time after the project has had a chance to work. Certainly Cheniere will be able to present a better appearance as a recreation resource.

Recommendations include annual draw down of the water "as soon as possible after July 5" from a 66.5 feet (sea level) to 60.5; cleaning of 100 acres in each of the lake's seven public park areas (no living cypress trees will be removed from any of these areas); creating 50-foot boat lanes connecting the park areas; continuing supervised commercial fishing; continuing the spraying program for aquatic vegetation; deepening shoreline waters two feet at park areas; removing spillway screens; continue fish management studies, and polution control.

Last Month Of Fish Contest

The second phase of the Ouachita Wildlife Unit's summer fishing contest is over, but results won't be announced until the unit's July 26 meeting.

Jim Packer, contest chairman, has reported more entries were registered for the second session than the first and another big batch of prizes are waiting for them.

Tre third and final session of the contest started Friday and will run through August 15.

Fishermen who are not members of the Ouachita Unit still have time to join and become eligible for the grand prizes to be awarded for the best catches over the three-month period. Awards for the third session, plus the grand prizes will be made at the same meeting, August 30.

Sportsmen In Action

Fishing can sometimes become a dangerous game, particularly if you tie into one of those vicious loggerhead snapping turtles of which there's nothing meaner when bothered.

JERRALD KING, Lake Providence, hooked a 96-pound loggerhead on an H and H lure while fishing East Carroll's Concordia Lake. Pulling the turtle up to his boat, the snapper promptly bit a chunk out of the boat. JIMMY DILLARD, fishing nearby and seeing he might be of some assistance, joined the battle and got his paddle snapped in two. With caution and hard work the men finally captured the turtle, weighed it in, and then King gave it to a neighbor.

Fishing the River Chute at Lake Providence, MRS. MORRIS COLEMAN took 24 nice crappie. "POP" WHITNEY, Natchez, needed only an hour, 4 to 5 a.m., to take 12 bass Wednesday at Lake Concordia (Ferriday). MRS. D. L. STEWART, Heflin, and MRS. BRYANT HUTCHINS, Sibley, took crappie limits two straight days at Larto Lake. R. F. and MRS. THOMAS, Castor, both had crappie limits from Saline Bayou. GEORGE BOOTH and partner took ten bass in a short night trip to St. John Wednesday.

LOYAL LASTER has taken bream limits every day for the week in the Bayou D'Arbonne-Ouachita river vicinity. MRS. ALICE WHITE, RUSSELL WHITE and RUTH PYLANT have worked the same area successfully for good strings of white perch.

PETE and MRS. INGRAM, Bastrop, showed crappie limits of 50 each from Bussey Brake a few days ago. They were back Thursday night for a "level full" ice box. (We were glad to hear about Pete since we hadn't seen or heard of him since Jim Malone had that old "original Indians" night for ex-Northeast State football players over 15 years ago. Pete was an end for the first Indian football teams of 1931 and '32.)

Other Bussey success included MACK BONO, Lake Charles, 15 bass; BOB FLETCHER and R. LARY, Monroe, 22 bass; N. C. FINLEY, Crossett, Ark., 45 bream.

Reports from Lake D'Arbonne include CHARLIE HILDRETH and ELVIN VISMUKE, Bernice, 115 bream; GENE HAMPTON, JOE GREEN and CLIFF HAMPTON, Jonesboro, 72 crappie and three bass; S. R. BRANCH and FRED CLINE, Haynesville, crappie limits; H. C. GARNER and son, Athens, 40 crappie and 50 bream; BILL and MRS. COLVIN, Homer, crappie limist twice; WILLIE COLVIN, Homer, crappie limit; and crappie limits for W. E. BROWNING JR., HUGH HUNT, J. T. BROWNING and GUY CALLUDER, Haynesville.

SAM LADART and CHARLES DEAN had a good week with Black Bayou Lake bass, 16 one day and back with a couple of friends (didn't leave names) for 56. STEVE JOINER got the bass limit. ROBERT ARRANT caught eight bass Thursday morning and was back Friday for eight more, L. P. CROSSLAND caught the crappie limit; JOE and MRS. JACKSON had 90 bream; LEE HICKS, 91 bream, and CLEOPHIS DAVIS and MRS. DAVIS, 60 crappie.

Some Cheniere catches included LEE SIMPSON, 17 crappie, and back with CHARLES DREW for 22; LOUIE MATHIS, 23 crappie; I. N. CAMP, 26 crappie; NICK CAMP, 12 crappie; ED VANDERFORD, 35 bream; DAVE MAY, 11 crappie, and PEEWEE and MRS. MYER, 30 BREAM.

Packers Drill

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The Green Bay Packers got in some light contact work Saturday for the first time in their training season. After a morning workout Coach Vince Lombardi put his National Football League champions through a drill on blocking and tackling in addition to a full scale passing practice which featured live contact protection.

Richey Meets Froehling In Finals Today

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Cliff Richey added a menacing serve to his strong ground game and mowed down Marty Riessen, 6-1, 6-1, 6-3 Saturday to advance to the finals of the National Clay Courts Tennis Championships.

Richey, the nation's third-ranked amateur, will meet Frank Froehling for the title today.

The long, lean Froehling, now a New York insurance executive playing tennis only on weekends, picked apart Australia's Owen Davidson 6-3, 6-1, 6-1.

Top-seeded Nancy Richey, Cliff's older sister, moved into the womens' finals with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over Australia's Kerry Melville.

Miss Richey will meet Stephanie DeFina, the No. 2 seed, for the crown which Miss Richey has held for the past three years.

Miss DeFina, of Hollywood, Fla., defeated South Africa's Esme Emanuel 6-3, 7-5 in a Saturday semifinal.

"It was the best I've ever served in my life," said Ciff Richey, after the 19-year-old Texan demolished Riessen, of Evanston, Ill., the tournament's No. 4 seed. "I was real pleased with this."

Nancy Richey, the No. 1 women's seed and Cliff's older sister, defeated Kerry Melville of Australia, 6-3, 6-4, to advance to the finals in the womens' singles.

Miss Richey meets the winner of the semifinal match between South Africa's Esme Emanuel and Stephanie DeFina, Hollywood, Fla., in the championship round today.

Froehling, who quit the amateur tour to go into business, jumped off to a four-game lead in the first set. The left-handed Davidson rallied to take the next three games, but could not wrest control from the 6-foot-3½ former resident of Coral Gables, Fla.

"It was one of those days," said the weekend player from New York. "I didn't miss a shot."

Miss Richey, who has yet to lose a set in the tournament, fell behind in the second frame against Miss Melville. But Miss Richey, seeking her fourth straight Clay Courts crown, broke Miss Melville's service for four straight points in the final game to go ahead.

Pope To Study 2 Months On Birth Control Problem

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (AP) — Pope Paul VI drove to his summer palace here Saturday for two months of study that will lead him to one of the most difficult decisions any pontiff ever had to make: what his Church shall do about birth control.

He told welcoming crowds outside the gate: "This will be a period of work and mediation. Please pray for the Pope, as he also prays for you."

He must decide what Roman Catholic teaching on contraception is to be from now on. He must decide it alone — a task he has described as extremely difficult because "the Church has not confronted such problems in centuries."

Two years ago Pope Paul created a special commission to advise him on problems of population, family and birth. Three weeks ago the 75-man birth control commission gave him a secret report 800 pages long.

In the quiet isolation of the Alban Hills, 16 miles outside Rome, with all audiences canceled except one each Wednesday for tourists, the pontiff will sift through the report and search for the answer he must give — probably this fall.

What choices are possible? The Pope could hold to existing Church teaching that all means of contraception are sinful except the rhythm system of periodic abstinence by a man and wife from their marital relations.

He could erase that teaching, citing deeper scientific knowledge about sex during the 36 years since the last major papal pronouncement on the subject, and announce that artificial contraceptives will no longer be forbidden to Catholics.

He could decide for a limited permission somewhere between.

Some Vatican sources have said a majority in the papal commission presented the Pope a case in favor of freedom for Catholics to use contraceptives. These sources said such a decision is now quite possible, if the Pope agrees with the commission majority.

Catholicism has shifted its thinking on birth control and marital sex little by little in the past two decades. Pope Pius XI condemned all contraception as intrinsically evil when he wrote the encyclical "Casti Connubii" — On Chaste Wedlock — in December 1930. Pope Pius XII upheld most of that encyclical in key speeches in October 1951, but he said Catholic married couples could practice rythm for better spacing of children when there was need.

The trend toward shifting was emphasized during the 1962-65 Vatican Ecumenical Council. Debating modern world problems, liberal bishops arose one after the other to argue for a bold new look at birth control and a new Church stand.

The council left the decision up to the Pope and his advisory commission. But it reached ground that was new for the Church when it put the two purposes of marriage — procreation of children and mutually expressed love between spouses — on equal terms, in its final document.

The church had long assigned primary value to the procreation and education of offspring, secondary value to the mutual ulfillment of man and wife.

The council also asserted that it was up to each man and wie, and up to them alone, to decide how many children to have and when to have them.

Weighing heavily on Pope Paul, should he lean toward a concept described as "responsible procreation" with contraception a valid principle, would be how to explain such a change in Church moral teaching.

But informants say the documentation given by the papal commission of theologians, doctors, psychiatrists, psychologists, sociolgists and married couples contains scientific evidence so sound that the need of bringing Church teaching into line with the attained knowledge would be self-evident, that the Pope would be able to explain that the theology of 36 years ago was based on a scientific knowledge about sex that was limited in those days.

Passengers Of Train Battle Crew, Police

By CONRAD FINK

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A railroad engineer in eastern India pulled his passenger cars onto a side track to let the Bombay mail express go by. What followed was predictable.

Shouting passengers, angry at the delay, attacked the locomotive and put engineer and crew to flight. They next dispatched a stationmaster to a hospital with bone fractures, and beat his wife.

Battling police all the while, the passengers then spent three busy hours ripping up tracks, tearing down signals and cutting telephone lines. Six express trains—including the Bombay mail—and three locals were delayed for hours.

This was a not uncommon example of the fine art of rioting being developed in India these days.

Some riot connoisseurs, who have watched howling mobs in many parts of the world, maintain Indian riots are as thorough and damaging as any they've seen.

India's multiplicity of languages, customs and religions is a regular source of trouble.

A riot erupted in Punjab State because someone threw a cigarette package at a procession of Sikhs, whose religion forbids smoking.

Although untouchability has been illegal since 1947, a person standing on the social order's lowest rung can touch off a riot by drawing water from a well traditionally reserved for higher castes.

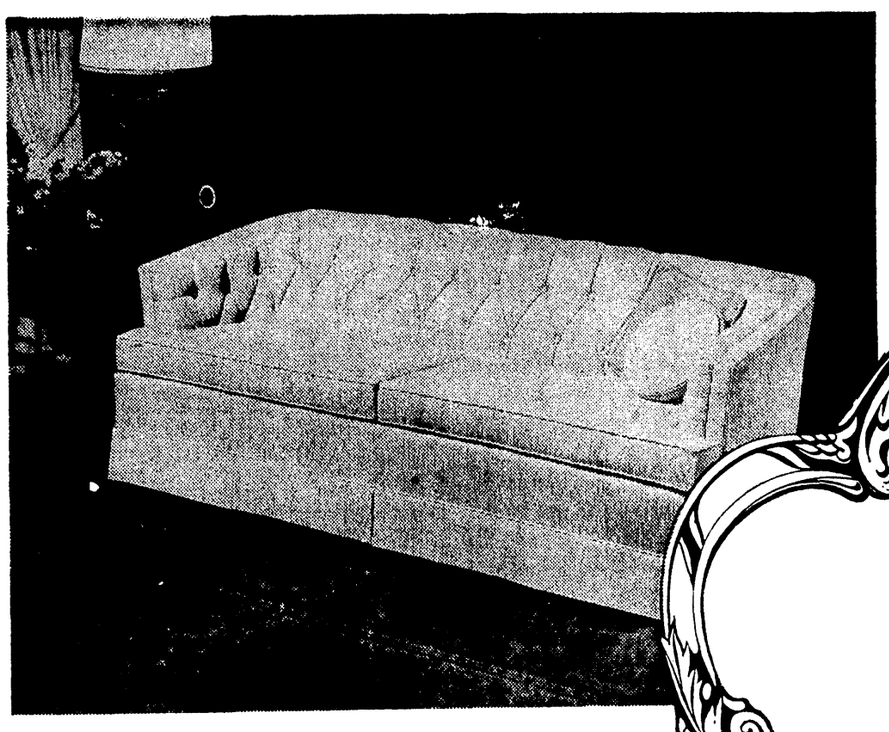

One village mob fight erupted near New Delhi when untouchables won an 18-year court fight for the right to visit a local Hindu temple—and then tried.

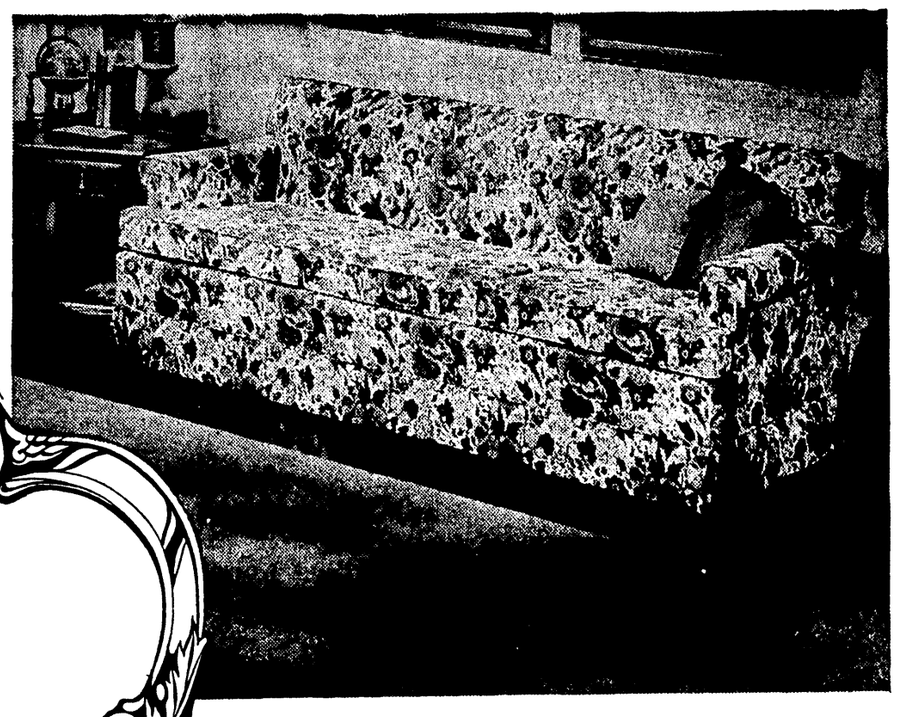

Language differences frequently burst into violence and food shortages sometimes make life hazardous for police and local officials.

Riots in India are bloody. Hundreds of people die annually and property worth millions is destroyed.

The right of protest is zealously guarded in India and police normally are lenient. But at first sign of violence, they get out the riot gear: helmets, wicker shields, clubs and tear gas. Rifles sometimes are used also.

But the riots continue.

Linda Joy Crow Becomes Bride Of Matthew Hamner III In Candlelight Ceremony

Miss Linda Joy Crow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Reginald Crow, 1406 Park Avenue, became the bride of Matthew Morgan Hamner III, son of Mrs. Matthew Hamner of Monroe, in a candlelight ceremony Saturday July 16 at 7 p.m. in Parkview Baptist Church.

Rev. James Edwards performed the double ring ceremony with Mrs. William Wilkerson as organist and Mrs. Dee Hollyfield as soloist.

Beneath the lighted cross at the back of the altar was a nine-branched candle tree holding lighted tapers and an arrangement of magnolia foliage. On either side, cathedral candelabra garlanded with smilax were placed in plateaus highlighting the altar. On each side of the steps were two massive fan - shaped arrangements of giant chrysanthemums, majestic daisies, stock and gladioli. Behind the rail a candelabra holding crystal votive lights completed the picturesque setting.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown of exquisite silk organza over taffeta designed on empire lines. The scalloped neckline of hand-run Alencon lace was lavishly appliqued with seed pearls and crystals. The lace motifs were repeated on the A-line skirt. Overlays of the jeweled lace held her full chapel length train which fell from the waistline and was completely outlined with reembroidered lace. Her two tiered veil of imported silk illusion was held by a crown of matching lace and seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white bridal roses and stephanotis with streamers of white velvet ribbon and English ivy.

Mrs. Grisham Lewis of Houston, Texas, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. John Parker, Mrs. Ronald Mack, Miss Lynn Hamner, sister of the groom and Miss Diane Smith. They wore formal length gowns of powder blue georgette with three-quarter sleeves. A band of organza defined the Josephine waistline and topped the graceful bell skirts. Back interest was achieved by detachable trains wheih fell from flat bows at the back waistline. Their headdresses were silk organza roses in powder blue holding circular veils. They carried bouquets of Pink Sensation roses with tuberose blossoms, pink velvet streamers and English ivy.

Will Lewis, nephew of the bride, served as ring bearer Candles were lighted by Randy Taylor and Wayne Taylor. Ralph Hamner of Bradley, Arkansas, served his cousin as best man. Groomsmen ushers were Grisham Lewis, Charles Dupuy III, Ralph Taylor and John Parker.

Mrs. Crow, was wearing an original design gown of raspberry pink silk with a sleeveless bodice and Florentine lace overblouse. Her accessories were of pale pink and raspberry and she wore a corsage of Japhet orchids. Mrs. Hamner, mother of the groom, chose a mauve pink silk sheath with matching shoes and bow of self fabric for her headpiece. Her corsage was also of Japhet orchids.

RECEPTION

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church reception rooms. A long buffet table covered with an embroidered organdy cloth over pink, held silver punch bowls at either end. Centering the table was a tall antique brass and crystal container holding an arrangement of pink roses and white stock. Brass floor candelabra holding lighted tapers formed a background for the table.

Assisting in serving were Mrs. Armand McHenry, Mrs. Ted Allen, Mrs. John Kolb, Mrs. Kenneth A. Kellan, Mrs. Henry Weaks, Mrs. Paul Blackmon and Mrs. Leon Culberhouse.

The bride's table held the pink and white cake which was served to guests by Mrs. George Weaks, Mrs. Ralph Hamner, Mrs. Tom Scott, Mrs. Wendell Towery, Miss Eva Reed and Mrs. Charles Dupuy Jr.

Guests registered at a small table ornamented by an arrangement of pink and white carnations and a single taper. Miss Virginia Hamner presided at the guest book.

Assisting in the courtesies were Mrs. Bruce Brooks Sr., Mrs. Allen Guthrie, Mrs. Joe Files, Miss Marcy Taylor, Mrs. Phillip Guthrie Jr., Miss Margaret Taylor and Mrs. Bruce Brooks Jr.

For going away, Mrs. Hamner wore a pale blue silk costume suit with bodice of silk organza, and a tiny pillbox hat of matching organza.

After a wedding trip to Florida the couple will be at home in Biloxi, Mississippi, where Mr. Hamner is stationed with the United States Air Force.

STUFF GRAPE LEAVES

Note to cooks who like to try foreign recipes: grape leaves, packed in brine, should be rinsed and drained before using. The grape leaves take to interesting rice stuffings.

MISS POLLY ANN PARRISH

MISS CAROL MARIE WILHITE

Newest Stocking Has Hold-Up Top

The age of the short skirt has led to development of a stocking that stays up by itself. The use of a specially designed stretch fabric enables the holding band to come between 10 and 11 inches above the knee. The band is made of inch-wide spun rayon laminated to soft, porous elastic. The manufacturer, Stevens Hosiery, said extensive tests in the United States and consumer reaction in Europe — where the stockings have been for sale for months—have demonstrated their effectiveness and comfort.

Cherry-Tarpley Vows Read In Yellow, White Setting

Pale yellow gladioli and greenery interspersed with pale yellow candles in branched candelabra formed a background setting Saturday, July 16 in First Christian Church for the wedding of Miss Ordie Nell Tarpley and Richard Louis Cherry.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Anderson Tarpley, 3204 Gordon Avenue, Monroe and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. William Tanner Cherry, Shreveport.

A prenuptial concert was rendered by the organist, Mrs. Harold Shepherd, who also accompanied the soloist, Mark Bell of Shreveport. Rev. R. T. Watson officiated at the double ring ceremony at 7:30 p.m.

Escorted by her father who gave her in marriage the bride was wearing a gown of imported silk organza. The fitted bodice, enhanced with appliques of lace encrusted with pearls and crystals, featured a sweetheart neckline. The A-line skirt was highlighted by a back bow and full chapel train. Her veil of silk illusion was held in place by a tiara of lace and pearls. She carried a white Bible crested with a cattleya orchid in a bouquet of white feathered chrysanthemums.

Attending the bride were Miss Carol Ann McKeithen, maid of honor and Miss Rebecca Ann Cherry, Shreveport, sister of the groom and Mrs. Harold Davis, West Monroe, sister of the bride, as bridesmaids. They were identically gowned in dresses of pale yellow silk organza with cummerbunds of white lace. The dresses, fashioned similar to the bride's featured sweetheart necklines, tapered sleeves and bell shaped skirts. They carried nosegays of Shasta daisies with white tulle and streamers.

Flower girls were Terri Lynn Davis, niece of the bride, and Laurie Redmond Davis of Houston, Texas. They were dressed similar to the other attendants and carried baskets of Shasta daisies.

Mr. Cherry served his sons as best man and groomsmen were Elton Chevalier of Glenmora and Harold Davis of West Monroe. Ring bearer was Matt Davis of Houston, Texas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam M. Davis.

For the ceremony and reception which followed in Fellowship hall of the church Mrs. Tarpley was wearing a pale blue crepe dress with lace jacket, white accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother chose a turquoise silk shantung dress accented with lace appliques, bone accessories and a white carnation corsage.

Mrs. Kenneth Hebert served the wedding cake and presiding at the punch bowl was Miss Bettye Screpetis. Mrs. J. D. McKeithen served coffee and Mrs. William Watson presided at the guest book. Assisting as tea girls were Miss Virginia Wilson and Miss Bettye Johnson.

Susan Cherry, sister of the groom and Cynthia Davis of Houston, Texas, presented rice bags to the guests.

For their wedding trip to the Ozarks the bride traveled in a suit of white bonded lace with pink background, white accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. The couple will reside in Shreveport until September when they will make their home in Fayetteville, Ark., where they will begin graduate study.

Mrs. Cherry is a graduate of Neville high school, attended Northeast Louisiana State College and was graduated in January from Louisiana Tech. A graduate of Byrd high school in Shreveport, Mr. Cherry graduated with honors from Louisiana Tech in May. He is a member of Sigma Tau Delta, literary organization and Phi Kappa Phi, national scholastic fraternity.

List Making Is Time Saving For Housewife

NEW YORK (UPI) — List making is time saving for the housewife, it says here.

Organize your tasks and set yourself a regular routine, says the education bureau of one watch manufacturer. Suggestions from Timex on time-saving:

— List the family's daily (even weekly if you make a chart) appointments on a kitchen bulletin board that is scheduled just like a man's daily business calendar. Begin with breakfast — when to start preparations, when you will serve it.

— List departure times for the whole family.

— List telephone calls for the day and instead of interrupting other work each time you think of someone, make the calls in batches. If one line is busy go on to the next call.

— List the day's errands and plan your stops systematically. Doubling back wastes time.

— List food needs by categories and arrange the list as the foods appear in the supermarket.

— List measurements of your family and keep on a card in purse to save shopping time.

— List instructions. These can be guidelines for baby-sitter, or how to change a fuse.

NEW CLOTHESLINE

A marine rope company has come up with a new clothesline said to be extra strong and resistant to weather conditions. The inner core is made of rot and water resistant nylon and it is covered by a tightly braided fine cotton yarn sheath.

Naturally...

upon learning of the bereavement of anyone close to you, your first instinct is to express your sympathy as eloquently as possible.

Down through the ages, fresh flowers, fragrant and beautiful have brought comfort and solace during troubled times to those left behind.

Cherry-Tarpley Vows Read In Yellow, White Setting

Pale yellow gladioli and greenery interspersed with pale yellow candles in branched candelabra formed a background setting Saturday, July 16 in First Christian Church for the wedding of Miss Ordie Nell Tarpley and Richard Louis Cherry.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Anderson Tarpley, 3204 Gordon Avenue, Monroe and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. William Tanner Cherry, Shreveport.

A prenuptial concert was rendered by the organist, Mrs. Harold Shepherd, who also accompanied the soloist, Mark Bell of Shreveport. Rev. R. T. Watson officiated at the double ring ceremony at 7:30 p.m.

Escorted by her father who gave her in marriage the bride was wearing a gown of imported silk organza. The fitted bodice, enhanced with appliques of lace encrusted with pearls and crystals, featured a sweetheart neckline. The A-line skirt was highlighted by a back bow and full chapel train. Her veil of silk illusion was held in place by a tiara of lace and pearls. She carried a white Bible crested with a cattleya orchid in a bouquet of white feathered chrysanthemums.

Attending the bride were Miss Carol Ann McKeithen, maid of honor and Miss Rebecca Ann Cherry, Shreveport, sister of the groom and Mrs. Harold Davis, West Monroe, sister of the bride, as bridesmaids. ENGAGEMENT of Miss Martha Clifton Shelton and Lewis Henry Hussing Jr., is announced today by her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Frazier Clifton Shelton of Monroe. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Henry Hussing of Texarkana, Arkansas. Miss Shelton is a graduate of Neville high school and Louisiana State University. Her fiance was graduated from Southern Methodist University School of Engineering and is now with the United States Army, stationed at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri. A small family wedding is planned in the late summer following which the couple will be at home in Washington D. C.

September Wedding Planned By Karen Williams, Fiance

Announcement is made by Dr. and Mrs. Guy Davenport Williams of Mer Rouge of the engagement of their daughter, Karen Jane to Charles Edward Frith of Longview, Texas. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Frith of Shreveport.

The wedding is calendared for September 3 at 10:30 a.m. in St. Andrews Episcopal Church in Mer Rouge. Rev. Richard R. Cook of Church of the Good Shepherd, Lake Charles, will perform the ceremony.

Miss Williams has chosen Miss Nancy Wilson of Monroe as her maid of honor. Bridesmaids will be Miss Jeannie Clark, Mer Rouge; Miss Julia Gregory, Versailles, Ky., Mrs. Joseph Wells, Palo Alto, Calif., and Mrs. John Wilson, Baton Rouge.

Mr. Frith will serve his son as best man and named as ushers are George Tedford, Baton Rouge; Michael Ilse, Charles Ligon, Houston, Texas; James Mitchell, Shreveport; Capt. Brian M. Stancil, Fort Polk and Alex Rankin, Baton Rouge.

The bride-elect was graduated from Mer Rouge high school and from Newcomb College in New Orleans and is a member of Chi Omega sorority. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Alex N. Williams, Mer Rouge and the late Mr. Williams and the late Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas Sartor of Alto.

Grandparents of the future bridegroom are Mrs. Edgar Holmes and the late Mr. Holmes Carthage, Texas and Mrs. J. H. Frith and the late Mr. Frith of Columbia. Mr. Frith finished C. E. Byrd high school in Shreveport and graduated from Texas A & M College, College Station, Texas. He is presently employed as an architect in Longview, where the couple will establish a home.

Reaction To Extreme Styles Inspires British Designers

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

Now that the fashion revolution started by the young English designers is rolling on its way, where do the innovators go? Are they planning more upsets, or feeling a reaction?

According to a survey taken by the fashion trade paper, "Women's Wear Daily," the best young British designers are thinking in terms of a reaction against extreme fashions.

Not that their customers are still buying all the extreme short skirts and so forth. But a designer has to think at least a year ahead.

Mary Quant believes the natural shape will stay, as do most of the others, as all agree that modern times are against any construction of the body.

But Mary is thinking in terms of clothes that will go anywhere in the world, be interchangeable such as brief dresses over tights that will themselves be a costume for at-home.

John Bates thinks colors will stay in, and fabrics will advance, with little change in the basic shapes of clothes.

Tuffin and Foale believe tights will largely replace stockings, with a light girdle top, and pure form will replace gimmicks like cut-outs.

Footwear For Brides This Season Is Gossamer Light

Lucky in love — and leather. Brides have all the luck this year, for never has footwear been so smart-looking yet so sensible. After standing, dancing and table-hopping, the new bride will bless the comfort as well as the beauty of her leather shoes.

With footwear fashions abounding in low and mid heels, fuller toes and feather-weight leathers, the '66 bride is fortune's child from heart to toe, comments Leather Industries of America. Her shoes will look light as gossamer, yet sustain her staunchly through the happy but hectic hours of her wedding.

Bridal authorities — as well as authorities on foot health — agree that the best wedding footwear is a soft leather shoe with mid-heel and pliable leather sole. Depending on the style of the gown, the choice may be an unadorned pump, a simple sling-back or a graceful sandal.

Snowy white in calf, kid or matte lustre leather is, of course, the traditional bridal color. However, the girl who is looking for off-white, a creamy pastel, or a deeper shade will find a complete and colorful collection of leather shoe styles available.

If the wedding or reception should be held in a garden, the bride and her attendants will stay flower-fresh in care-free leather shoes. Grass and dirt stains are easily wiped off, leaving the shoes ready for the next wearing.

John B. Vance, Mississippi Girl Are Wed

Miss Bennie Lou Satterwhite of Jackson, Miss., became the bride of John Burton Vance, El Dorado, Ark., at the Central Presbyterian Church in Jackson, Friday night, July 15, in a setting of candlelight and greenery.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben M. Satterwhite, Jackson, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jackson Vance, El Dorado.

Dr. G. Roland Sims, pastor of the church, read the vows.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a regal gown of alpaca. Re-embroidered Alencon lace fashioned the scoop neck, bodice and elbow sleeves. A wide border of appliques encircled the sheath skirt and banded the sleeveless cardinal's coat train. Her only jewelry was a strand of pearls, a gift from the bridegroom. She carried a bouquet of garlands of stock bells and feathery moon chrysanthemums in a cascade design centered with a white orchid. Her veil of English illusion was attached to a matching pillbox of lace frosted with pearls and crystals.

Her sister, Miss Beth Satterwhite, served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Carolyn Vance, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Beverly Brooks, Miss Jeanne Burnet, and Mrs. J. Spurgeon Weatheral Jr., all of Jackson.

His father served the bridegroom as best man. Ushers were J. D. Beauchamp, El Dorado; Bob Fulcher, Jackson; Gary Wayne Sauls, Heidelburg, Miss.; and Ed Kennedy, Taylorsville, Miss.

A reception followed the ceremony in Fellowship Hall of the church.

After the wedding trip, the couple will be at home in El Dorado until the fall when the bridegroom will resume his studies at the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa.

Felines Found To Be Southpaws

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (UPI) — The research Dr. J. Michael Warren does at Pennsylvania State University is catty. Testing 34 felines, the psychologist found that the animals are right or left pawed — as people are handed.

About half were southpaws, he reports. He learned by tying a bulky glove on the favorite paw of some cats, forcing them to use the other paw to obtain meat or other rewards outside a cage. After as many as 1,400 gloved-test trials, the cats would revert to using their favorite paw later.

MRS. ROBERT GREGORY STASSI

Sally Spier, Robert Stassi Exchange Vows In Bastrop

St. Joseph's Church in Bastrop was scene of the ceremony at 10 a.m. Saturday, July 9 which united in marriage Miss Sally Scott Spier of Bastrop and Robert Gregory Stassi of Los Angeles, Calif. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence C. Spier of Bastrop and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Stassi of Metairie.

Altar candles and vases filled with white stock and Majestic daisies formed a setting for the exchange of vows. Father Remy Stiglitz performed the nuptials in the presence of members of the immediate families and out-of-town guests.

Serving as altar boy was Michael Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Martin. A prenuptial concert was rendered by the organist, Mrs. J. B. Spier, who also played traditional wedding marches.

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white imported organza designed with empire waist and slim skirt, highlighted by a sweeping chapel train. The bodice featured a portrait neckline and short sleeves. Crocheted beading, threaded with pale pink satin ribbon, defined the high rise waistline, and bordered the sleeves and hemline. Her shoulder length veil of illusion was attached to a pillbox of satin leaves embroidered with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses and Majestic daisies showered with pink streamers.

Miss Larrie Kathleen Spier, who attended her sister as maid of honor, wore a frock of pale pink embroidered dotted Swiss fashioned on slim lines with scoop neck, short sleeves and empire waist. Her headdress was a coronet of tiny daisies and she carried a nosegay of Majestic daisies and pink streamers.

Serving as best man for his brother was John A. Stassi II and usher was Scott Rawls, cousin of the bride.

For the occasion Mrs. Spier wore a three piece costume of deep pink tucked voile with pillbox hat of light pink velvet and maline. Her accessories were of matching shade and she wore a corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother selected a yellow linen sheath with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Goodwin, Mer Rouge Road, Bastrop. Covered with an imported linen cloth trimmed with Brussels lace, the refreshment table was centered with a silver epergne filled with pink carnations and greenery. Silver appointments were used with a silver punch bowl. The bride's cake was served in the living room from a table adorned with a pink wedding ring filled with pink roses and stephanotis.

Out of town guests attended from New Orleans, Baton Rouge, El Dorado, Ark., and Atlanta, Ga.

When the couple left for a wedding trip to Ochos Rios, Jamaica, the bride was wearing a blue polished cotton dress and jacket ensemble with blue Milan straw hat and white accessories. They will reside in New York City until October, when they will move to Los Angeles, Calif.

Mrs. Stassi was graduated from the University of Mississippi. A graduate of Tulane Law School, Mr. Stassi is employed by E. F. Hutton and Company, brokers in their Los Angeles, office.

MRS. GEORGE SANDERS BOOTH

Martha Kay Cobb Is Bride Of George Sanders Booth

Miss Martha Kay Cobb, daughter of Mrs. Johnnie Mae Cobb, 3517 South Grand, became the bride of George Sanders Booth, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Booth, 213 Moore Avenue, in a double ring ceremony Friday, July 15 in Central Baptist Church.

White cathedral tapers in wrought iron candelabra formed a background at the altar for a massive fan shaped arrangement of pink and white gladioli. Rev. C. Roger Johnson officiated at the exchange of vows with traditional wedding music by Mrs. Beverly Donelson, organist.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, James Watts. She wore a floor length empire sheath of white satin with reembroidered Chantilly lace appliqued on the chapel length train. A headpiece of the lace, outlined with seed pearls, held in place her bouffant veil of illusion. She carried an orchid surrounded by stephanotis.

Miss Vicki Presnall, who served as maid of honor, wore a pink satin dress with belled skirt and a matching pillbox hat. Her bouquet was of pink chrysanthemums with showers of net and ribbons in varied shades of pink.

Serving as best man was Roy Bledsoe and ushers were Carroll McHenry and Michael White.

Mrs. Cobb chose for her daughter's wedding a two piece beige chiffon model with an overlay of white lace. Her accessories were white and she wore a corsage of pink rosebuds. The groom's mother wore a beige ensemble with matching accessories and a corsage of white roses.

A reception followed in the church social room where the bride's table was ornamented by an arrangement of pink chrysanthemums in a crystal compote. Mrs. James Watts and Mrs. Carroll McHenry served the cake and punch and presided at the bride's book was Mrs. Donald Stewart.

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip to Texas the bride was wearing a beige sheath with an orange linen jacket and an orchid corsage. Upon their return the couple will be at home at 5330 DeSiard.

Trinity Baptist Church Site Of Colvin-Thigpen Wedding

Trinity Baptist Church was scene of the ceremony at 8 p.m. Friday, July 15 which united in marriage Miss Mary Alice Thigpen and James Henry Colvin. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Zelma Carson, 1606 Eby, and the late W. B. Thigpen and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lee Colvin, 407 Chickasaw, all of West Monroe.

Southern smilax draped over wrought iron candelabra which held burning white tapers and flanked by large fan shaped arrangements of white gladioli formed a background setting for the exchange of vows, performed by Rev. James B. White. Mrs. Ronnie Stephens, organist, played appropriate selections and accompanied Ronnie Stephens, soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by her step-father, James Edward Carson. She wore a traditional gown of white crystal taffeta with beaded bodice of Chantilly lace, styled with scalloped neckline and long tapered sleeves. The chapel length train was also of the lace. Her veil of illusion drifted elbow length from a forehead cluster of lace blossoms tipped with pearls and crystals. She carried a white Bible crested with a white cattleya orchid and garlands of feathered white chrysanthemums and valley lily.

Miss Brenda Roberts served as maid of honor and brides maids were Mrs. Linda Parker and Miss Linda Case. They wore yellow street length dresses of burnt organdy and carried cascade arrangements of yellow pompons accented with sprays of yellow coral fern.

Mr. Colvin attended his son as best man and groomsmen-ushers were Dickie Colvin and DeWaine Lenard.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Carson wore a blue linen dress with matching lace coat and black accessories. The groom's mother was wearing a moss green bonded crepe model with bone accessories.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the reception hall of the church. Central decor for the refreshment table was of yellow Fuji chrysanthemums, pompons and coral ferns arranged in a brass compote which also held burning yellow tapers.

The guest book table held the traditional wedding candle nestled in poufs of white and yellow maline studded with clusters of valley lily.

When the couple left on a wedding trip to Hot Springs, Arkansas the bride was wearing a blue linen ensemble with bone accessories. They will be at home on their return at 704 N. 3rd, West Monroe. The bride was graduated from West Monroe high school and attended Northeast Louisiana State College. Also a graduate of West Monroe high school, Mr. Colvin is now attending Louisiana Tech.

YEAR ROUND GERANIUMS

Geraniums this time of year? F. W. Woolworth reports a run on them and the other new artificial flowers, so much better looking than their saggy predecessors of some years back. City dwellers mass them in huge jugs which they set on the floor to perk up a dark corner. Some of the more imaginative flower lovers use them in winter window boxes. And one Southern Californian "planted" her back yard to give a festive air to her daughter's wedding.

Short Skirt Fashions Make Knee Grooming A Must

NEW YORK — Some thirty years ago, Percy Hammond, a famous drama critic, wrote: "The female knee is a joint and not an entertainment."

Times have changed! Today's brief fashions make knees newsier and more entertaining than ever before. And with attention focused on the knees, it's important that they look as pretty as possible. Even those who aren't blessed by nature with beautiful knees can improve their looks through regular exercise and good grooming. Here's how:

To firm up thighs, knees and legs, here are three easy exercises to try. (They're more fun if you do them to music with a beat.)

1. Drum Majorette. Stand straight, holding on to a chair at your side. Bend your left knee and raise it as far up to the chest as you can. Lower your leg and do the same with your right knee. Alternate briskly, pretending you are leading the Rose Bowl Parade.

2. Skywriting. Lie flat on your back on the floor. Flex your left knee, keeping the left foot planted on the floor. Bend and raise your right leg and with your toes nicely pointed, write your name in the air. Then reverse legs, writing with your left. (No cheating, please, write your full name.)

3. Pendulum Swing. Stand up straight and hold on to a chair at your side for balance. Keeping both knees straight, swing your left leg forward as high as you can without bending. Then swing the left leg backward, keeping the knee straight. Do this ten times, then repeat the pendulum swing with the right leg, forward and back, steady as a metronome.

Along with exercise goes good grooming. To beautify legs and knees follow four basic routines. Two are weekly; two, daily.

1. Defuzz legs weekly with a razor or depilatory. If you use a razor, take a tip from the men and apply a lather shave to make the job easier. In shaving, use a downward motion with long strokes, being specially sure not to nick knee and skins. If you use a depilatory, be careful to apply it as directed; leave it on the legs the amount of time specified and rinse well under the shower.

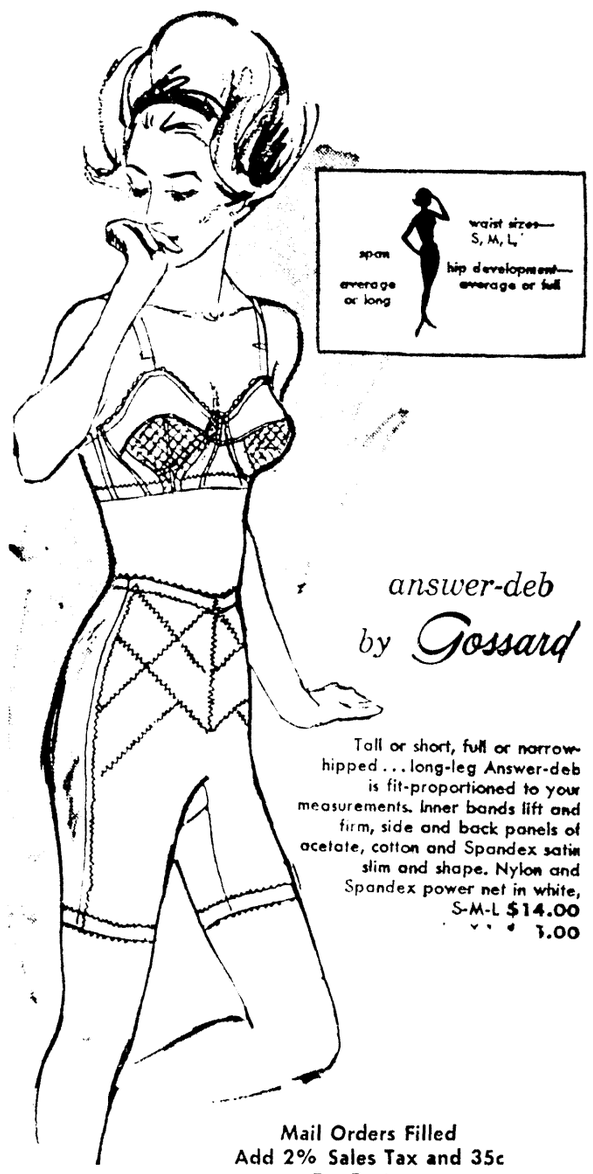

2. Follow-up defuzzing with a creamy lotion to satinize the skin. A fragrant hand and body lotion has skin softeners that smooth rough areas and leave knees and legs daintily feminine.

3. Nightly for knees: Give them a beauty treatment while you sleep. Before bedtime, apply a special-formula hand cream that penetrates deep to soften and smooth away roughness and dryness.

MRS. JAMES HODGES JONES

Jacqueline Burns, Bud Jones Wed In Baton Rouge Church

Miss Jacqueline Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sidney Burns Jr., of Baton Rouge, formerly of this city, became the bride of James Hodges "Bud" Jones of Monroe, in a double ring ceremony Saturday, July 16 in First Presbyterian Church, Baton Rouge. The groom is the son of James L. Jones Jr., 2306 Hawthorne St., Monroe and the late Dorothy Hodges Jones.

Two large sprays of white gladioli formed a background setting for the ceremony performed by Dr. John Melton at 3 p.m. Mrs. Russel L. Hudson, Baton Rouge, rendered an organ prelude and accompanied Davis Bingham of Monroe, as he sang.

Mr. Burns gave his daughter in marriage. She wore a floor length gown of silk linen and Baroque Venise lace with a swallow - tail train appliqued with matching lace floral motifs. Her bouffant veil of illusion was held in place by a small lace covered pillbox encrusted with pearls. She carried an old fashioned bouquet of white roses interwoven with ivy.

Wearing floor length empire style gowns of aqua silk linen featuring white lace covered bodices, were the bride's attendants, Miss Frances Kay Jones, sister of the groom, as bridesmaid and Mrs. Robert L. Perkins of Lafayette; Miss Dorothy Strait and Mrs. James C. Way, Lake Charles, bridesmaids. Their headdresses were of self fabric double bows veiled in matching illusion and they carried large rose-shaped bouquets fashioned of white gladioli petals.

Mr. Jones served his son as best man. Groomsmen - ushers were Timothy T. King and A. Sidney Burns III, brother of the bride, Baton Rouge; O. Duke Hart Jr., H. E. "Gene" Hodges, Carl W. Statham of Monroe.

Mrs. Burns chose for her daughter's wedding a pink lace knit ensemble with matching accessories and a corsage of pink cymbidium orchids. Mrs. Jones, step-mother of the groom, was wearing a mauve lace over satin model with bone accessories and a matching cymbidium orchid corsage.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained in the reception rooms of the church. White floral arrangements were noted throughout the reception area where the round linen covered table held a tiered wedding cake and crystal punch bowl. Silver coffee service was on a smaller linen covered table.

Assisting with courtesies were Mrs. A. P. Andrews, Mrs. A. Lee Hodges, grandmother of the groom; Mrs. O. D. Hart Sr., aunt of the groom, all of Monroe and Mrs. Linne Burns, Lake Charles, grandmother of the bride. Tea girls were Miss Jill Hodges and Miss Becky Bingham, both of Monroe. Mrs. Gary A. Brooms of Baton Rouge presided at the guest book.

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip to New Orleans the bride changed into a white lace knit ensemble with white accessories and the groom's stepmother's orchid. They will be at home at Fort Walton, Florida where Mr. Jones is stationed at Eglin Air Force Base.

The bride was graduated from Neville high school and attended the University of Southwestern Louisiana. She graduated from Spencer Business school. Mr. Jones also is a graduate of Neville high school.

Mary C. Hughston To Be August Bride

Of interest to friends in Madison Parish is announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. John Edward Hughston of Golden Shores of the engagement of their daughter, Mary Catherine to Wayne Patrick Parker of Jefferson, son of Mrs. Alton Parker and the late Mr. Parker, Jefferson.

The bride-elect, whose father formerly resided in Madison Parish, is the granddaughter of Mrs. T. L. Hughston of Tallulah. She is a graduate of St. Joseph's Academy in New Orleans and attended Louisiana State University. Mr. Parker was graduated from Jesuit high school and from the College of Liberal Arts at Louisiana State University, New Orleans.

The wedding will take place at Our Lady of the Lake Catholic Church in Mandeville on Saturday, August 27.

Patricia Wade Is Bride Of Jackson Dean

Wedding bells suspended by white and blue satin bows to an arch of Jade fern flanked by baskets of white gladioli and pompons and spiral candelabra formed a setting in First Baptist Church, Crowville, for the wedding Friday, July 8 of Miss Patricia Ann Wade and Jackson William Dean.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Pershing Wade of Crowville and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Wilson M. Dean of Winnsboro.

Rev. Clemen T. Smith officiated at the double ring ceremony with nuptial music provided by Miss Shelia Hart of Monroe, cousin of the bride, and Stanley Davis, soloist.

Escorted by her father the bride was wearing a floor length gown of silk organza over peau de soie with fitted bodice of reembroidered hand clipped Chantilly lace, with scallops at the waist and elbow sleeves. Her veil of silk illusion was held in place by a tiara of seed pearls and lace petals. She carried a white orchid and lily of the valley inside an open kissing ball adorned with garlands of white frenched carnations.

Miss Dianne Brazell of Alexandria was maid of honor and bridesmaid was Miss Linda Ferris. They wore short dresses of blue peau de soie featuring fitted bodices and semi-gathered skirts. Two roses held their tulle veils. They wore blue shoes and carried kissing balls with blue tulle and garlands of white frenched carnations.

MRS. JACKSON WILLIAM DEAN

Joe Dean served his brother as best man and groomsman was Tommy McMurry of Minden. Ushers were Charles Simmons, brother of the bride and Charles Johnston of Winnsboro.

Mrs. Wade was wearing a light blue crepe model with embroidered lace bodice, blue flower hat and white accessories. The groom's mother chose a pink dress with matching hat and gloves. Their corsages were of white orchids.

The bride's parents entertained following the ceremony at a reception in their home. A five branch silver candelabra holding white tapers and a center arrangement of white carnations and leatherleaf centered the white covered refreshment table. Miss Kieran Benoit and Mrs. Charles Simmons, presided at the crystal bowl of blue punch. The tiered wedding cake, adorned with blue bells was served by Mrs. Mary Higgins, aunt of the bride, assisted by Mrs. C. C. Bedenbaugh. The guest book table, ornamented by a memory candle, was presided over by Mrs. George Pylant Jr., Vicksburg, Miss.

When the couple departed on a wedding trip to Biloxi, Miss., the bride was wearing an aqua silk suit with blue flower hat, white accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. They will be at home in Winnsboro. The bride is a graduate of Crowville high school. Mr. Dean graduated from Winnsboro high school and attended Benz School of Design in Houston, Texas. He is presently serving in the U. S. Army Reserve.

MRS. VIRGIL L. NIX

Lt. Virgil L. Nix, Bride To Reside In Honolulu

A home in Honolulu, Hawaii is planned by First Lt. and Mrs. Virgil L. Nix, whose marriage was a recent event in Monroe. The bride, the former Miss Nita Evans of Monroe, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Evans of Choudrant. Lt. Nix, who will be assigned to the U. S. Army Pacific Command in Honolulu, is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Nix of Gadsden, Ala.

The ceremony took place on July 2 at 8:30 p.m. in the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bullock, Hinke Drive, Monroe with Rev. James O. Evans officiating. Vows were exchanged in a setting of white gladioli in lace-iron stands and a mass arrangement of miniature white chrysanthemums and gladioli.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a suit of white Swisslin and a fingertip veil of white French illusion. She carried a nosegay bouquet of white carnations.

Miss Ireese Coates of Monroe and Jackson attended the bride as maid of honor. She wore a deep aqua peau de soie dress with matching veil and carried a long stemmed pink rose.

Lt. Paul Quinn of Portland, Oregon, served the groom as best man.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Evans wore a pink linen dress with a corsage of white carnations.

A reception in the home followed the ceremony with Miss Robbie Bulloch, cousin of the bride, presiding at the punch bowl and Miss Bobbie Bentley, of Jackson, Miss., serving the cake. Miss Barbara Bulloch, cousin of the bride, presided at the guest book.

For travel the bride wore a blue and green cotton knit with matching accessories.

Mrs. Nix is a graduate of Atlanta high school, Atlanta, Texas and Bish Mathis Institute, Monroe. She has been employed for the past three years in Monroe. Lt. Nix attended Jacksonville State College, Jacksonville, Alabama where he received his B. A. in Political Science and attended Northeast Louisiana State College in Monroe where he received his B. Knee Art Becoming Popular With Short-Skirted Fashions

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

PARIS (AP) — If you're smart, you'll learn knee art, now that leg art is the fashion game.

If you're an uninhibited wit, you can flirt with your newly bared knees by deeply denting your knee dimples with a wee bit of eye make up. You can widen them into winks that flirt audaciously as you move.

Strictly for fun, and to go with the ultra short cocktail dresses make up artist William Loew recently painted stop and go signs over the knees.

Even if you're not that outgoing, you'll want to make your gams worth gawking at, now that more of them are exposed. To accomplish this the beauty people are concentrating old products in new places.

That you should first use a good depilatory goes without saying. Either that, or you should have a steady hand with a sharp razor.

Hand lotions and body creams are recommended to soften and preserve knees now exposed to the wind and weather. One company suggests facial masks and lubricators for this new beauty spot.

Then you can brush on a little blushy pink powder if your naked knees have become too blase to rosy up of their accord.

Or you can paint them with luminous paint so that your leg art can be seen in the dark.

Bath Towels Make Good Slipcovers

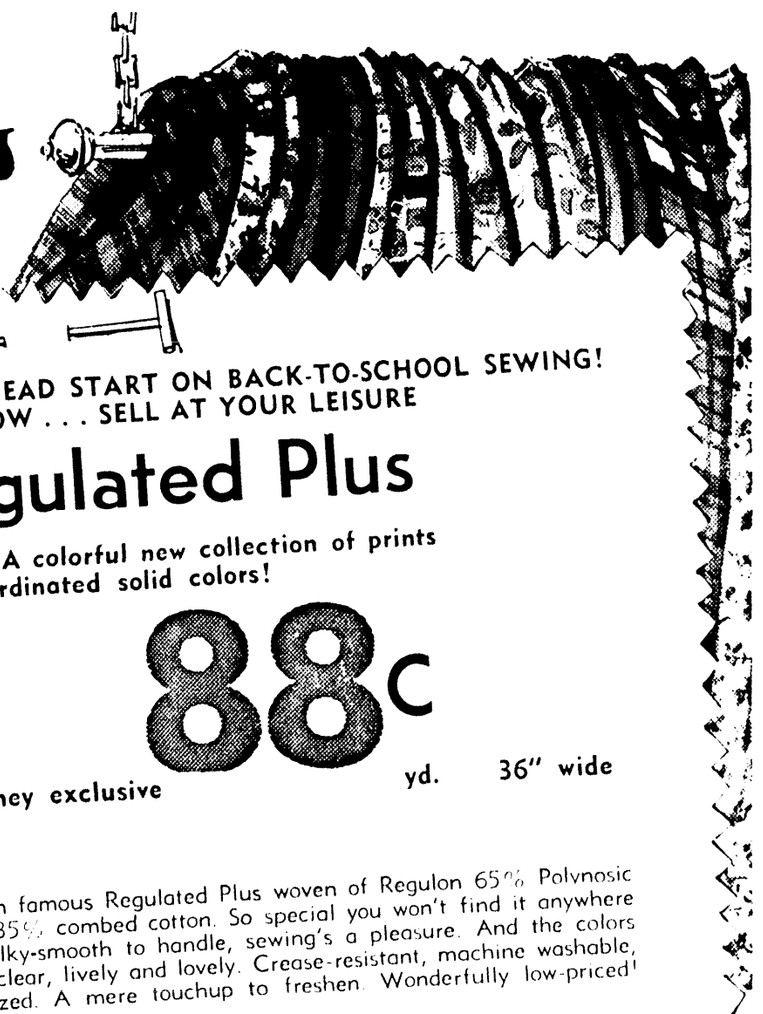

To protect furniture where shoes are likely to soil upholstery fabrics, use a bath towel of appropriate size as a "slipcover." Just fold it to fit at the corners, tuck in the extra material, and pin where needed.

Terrycloth has enough body to stay put where you drape it and, most important, it can be machine-washed and fluffed dry in minutes. One thorough sudsing will banish even the blackest shoe polish stain.

MRS. JAMES HODGES JONES

Jacqueline Burns, Bud Jones Wed In Baton Rouge Church

Miss Jacqueline Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sidney Burns Jr., of Baton Rouge, formerly of this city, became the bride of James Hodges "Bud" Jones of Monroe, in a double ring ceremony Saturday, July 16 in First Presbyterian Church, Baton Rouge. The groom is the son of James L. Jones Jr., 2306 Hawthorne St., Monroe and the late Dorothy Hodges Jones.

Two large sprays of white gladioli formed a background setting for the ceremony performed by Dr. John Melton at 3 p.m. Mrs. Russel L. Hudson, Baton Rouge, rendered an organ prelude and accompanied Davis Bingham of Monroe, as he sang.

Mr. Burns gave his daughter in marriage. She wore a floor length gown of silk linen and Baroque Venise lace with a swallow - tail train appliqued with matching lace floral motifs. Her bouffant veil of illusion was held in place by a small lace covered pillbox encrusted with pearls. She carried an old fashioned bouquet of white roses interwoven with ivy.

Wearing floor length empire style gowns of aqua silk linen featuring white lace covered bodices, were the bride's attendants, Miss Frances Kay Jones, sister of the groom, as bridesmaid and Mrs. Robert L. Perkins of Lafayette; Miss Dorothy Strait and Mrs. James C. Way, Lake Charles, bridesmaids. Their headdresses were of self fabric double bows veiled in matching illusion and they carried large rose-shaped bouquets fashioned of white gladioli petals.

Mr. Jones served his son as best man. Groomsmen - ushers were Timothy T. King and A. Sidney Burns III, brother of the bride, Baton Rouge; O. Duke Hart Jr., H. E. "Gene" Hodges, Carl W. Statham of Monroe.

Mrs. Burns chose for her daughter's wedding a pink lace knit ensemble with matching accessories and a corsage of pink cymbidium orchids. Mrs. Jones, step-mother of the groom, was wearing a mauve lace over satin model with bone accessories and a matching cymbidium orchid corsage.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained in the reception rooms of the church. White floral arrangements were noted throughout the reception area where the round linen covered table held a tiered wedding cake and crystal punch bowl. Silver coffee service was on a smaller linen covered table.

Assisting with courtesies were Mrs. A. P. Andrews, Mrs. A. Lee Hodges, grandmother of the groom; Mrs. O. D. Hart Sr., aunt of the groom, all of Monroe and Mrs. Linne Burns, Lake Charles, grandmother of the bride. Tea girls were Miss Jill Hodges and Miss Becky Bingham, both of Monroe. Mrs. Gary A. Brooms of Baton Rouge presided at the guest book.

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip to New Orleans the bride changed into a white lace knit ensemble with white accessories and the groom's stepmother's orchid. They will be at home at Fort Walton, Florida where Mr. Jones is stationed at Eglin Air Force Base.

The bride was graduated from Neville high school and attended the University of Southwestern Louisiana. She graduated from Spencer Business school. Mr. Jones also is a graduate of Neville high school.

Mary C. Hughston To Be August Bride

Of interest to friends in Madison Parish is announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. John Edward Hughston of Golden Shores of the engagement of their daughter, Mary Catherine to Wayne Patrick Parker of Jefferson, son of Mrs. Alton Parker and the late Mr. Parker, Jefferson.

The bride-elect, whose father formerly resided in Madison Parish, is the granddaughter of Mrs. T. L. Hughston of Tallulah. She is a graduate of St. Joseph's Academy in New Orleans and attended Louisiana State University. Mr. Parker was graduated from Jesuit high school and from the College of Liberal Arts at Louisiana State University, New Orleans.

The wedding will take place at Our Lady of the Lake Catholic Church in Mandeville on Saturday, August 27.

Patricia Wade Is Bride Of Jackson Dean

Wedding bells suspended by white and blue satin bows to an arch of Jade fern flanked by baskets of white gladioli and pompons and spiral candelabra formed a setting in First Baptist Church, Crowville, for the wedding Friday, July 8 of Miss Patricia Ann Wade and Jackson William Dean.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Pershing Wade of Crowville and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Wilson M. Dean of Winnsboro.

Rev. Clemen T. Smith officiated at the double ring ceremony with nuptial music provided by Miss Shelia Hart of Monroe, cousin of the bride, and Stanley Davis, soloist.

Escorted by her father the bride was wearing a floor length gown of silk organza over peau de soie with fitted bodice of reembroidered hand clipped Chantilly lace, with scallops at the waist and elbow sleeves. Her veil of silk illusion was held in place by a tiara of seed pearls and lace petals. She carried a white orchid and lily of the valley inside an open kissing ball adorned with garlands of white frenched carnations.

Miss Dianne Brazell of Alexandria was maid of honor and bridesmaid was Miss Linda Ferris. They wore short dresses of blue peau de soie featuring fitted bodices and semi-gathered skirts. Two roses held their tulle veils. They wore blue shoes and carried kissing balls with blue tulle and garlands of white frenched carnations.

MRS. JACKSON WILLIAM DEAN

Joe Dean served his brother as best man and groomsman was Tommy McMurry of Minden. Ushers were Charles Simmons, brother of the bride and Charles Johnston of Winnsboro.

Mrs. Wade was wearing a light blue crepe model with embroidered lace bodice, blue flower hat and white accessories. The groom's mother chose a pink dress with matching hat and gloves. Their corsages were of white orchids.

The bride's parents entertained following the ceremony at a reception in their home. A five branch silver candelabra holding white tapers and a center arrangement of white carnations and leatherleaf centered the white covered refreshment table. Miss Kieran Benoit and Mrs. Charles Simmons, presided at the crystal bowl of blue punch. The tiered wedding cake, adorned with blue bells was served by Mrs. Mary Higgins, aunt of the bride, assisted by Mrs. C. C. Bedenbaugh. The guest book table, ornamented by a memory candle, was presided over by Mrs. George Pylant Jr., Vicksburg, Miss.

When the couple departed on a wedding trip to Biloxi, Miss., the bride was wearing an aqua silk suit with blue flower hat, white accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. They will be at home in Winnsboro. The bride is a graduate of Crowville high school. Mr. Dean graduated from Winnsboro high school and attended Benz School of Design in Houston, Texas. He is presently serving in the U. S. Army Reserve.

MRS. VIRGIL L. NIX

Lt. Virgil L. Nix, Bride To Reside In Honolulu

A home in Honolulu, Hawaii is planned by First Lt. and Mrs. Virgil L. Nix, whose marriage was a recent event in Monroe. The bride, the former Miss Nita Evans of Monroe, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Evans of Choudrant. Lt. Nix, who will be assigned to the U. S. Army Pacific Command in Honolulu, is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Nix of Gadsden, Ala.

The ceremony took place on July 2 at 8:30 p.m. in the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bullock, Hinke Drive, Monroe with Rev. James O. Evans officiating. Vows were exchanged in a setting of white gladioli in lace-iron stands and a mass arrangement of miniature white chrysanthemums and gladioli.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a suit of white Swisslin and a fingertip veil of white French illusion. She carried a nosegay bouquet of white carnations.

Miss Ireese Coates of Monroe and Jackson attended the bride as maid of honor. She wore a deep aqua peau de soie dress with matching veil and carried a long stemmed pink rose.

Lt. Paul Quinn of Portland, Oregon, served the groom as best man.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Evans wore a pink linen dress with a corsage of white carnations.

A reception in the home followed the ceremony with Miss Robbie Bulloch, cousin of the bride, presiding at the punch bowl and Miss Bobbie Bentley, of Jackson, Miss., serving the cake. Miss Barbara Bulloch, cousin of the bride, presided at the guest book.

For travel the bride wore a blue and green cotton knit with matching accessories.

Mrs. Nix is a graduate of Atlanta high school, Atlanta, Texas and Bish Mathis Institute, Monroe. She has been employed for the past three years in Monroe. Lt. Nix attended Jacksonville State College, Jacksonville, Alabama where he received his B. A. in Political Science and attended Northeast Louisiana State College in Monroe where he received his B. MRS. BILLY DEAN JOHNSON

Monroyan Claims Texas Bride

The wedding of Miss Barbara Alice Hughes and Billy Dean Johnson was solemnized Saturday, July 9 in Western Hills Methodist Church at El Paso, Texas. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Earl Hughes of El Paso and Mr. Johnson is the son of Mrs. Edward Tonore, Monroe and Ralph Johnson, Crossett, Arkansas.

The Rev. Jack Wallis officiated at the 4 p.m. ceremony before the altar which was banked with white gladioli and carnations, interspersed with gold candelabra and white satin streamers. Mrs. Judson Williams, soloist, was accompanied at the organ by Mrs. Bruce Hallmark.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a formal gown of white satin appliqued with lace on her empire waistline and chapel train. A crown of pearls held her tiered veil of English silk illusion and lace and she carried a cascade bouquet of white orchids and stephanotis.

Mrs. Lannie R. Hughes was matron of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Joyce Thompson, Mrs. Robert Litchlyter and Mrs. Norman Dowdy. They wore gowns of turquoise silk with matching jackets of Italian lace and matching pillbox hats. Turquoise tinted carnations formed their cascade bouquets.

Thomas A. Hughes, brother of the bride, served Mr. Johnson as best man. Ushers were Dr. Lannie R. Hughes, Steven H. Hughes, Colin Flannigan, Jimmy Vorwald and Herbert Hammer.

Mrs. Hughes wore for the occasion a green silk model with matching Chantilly lace jacket and a pink cymbidium orchid. Mrs. Tonore, mother of the groom, selected a blue gown fashioned with lace bodice and chiffon skirt. Her corsage was a white orchid.

A reception in Fellowship Hall followed the ceremony. Assisting with courtesies were Mrs. Dennis Lane, Mrs. Milton Harper, Mrs. Norman Wendler, Mrs. John Warden, Mrs. Tom Watrous and Miss Rhonda Tonore.

After a wedding trip to Florida the couple will be at home in West Monroe.

REHEARSAL SUPPER

On the evening preceding the wedding Mrs. Tonore, mother of the groom and Miss Lana Logan of Denver, Colorado, aunt of the groom, entertained at a rehearsal supper at El Paso Country Club.

Attending with the bethrothed couple and members of their families were the wedding party and out-of-town guests.

MRS. HAROLD D. WHITE

Varied Silhouettes, Heel Heights Noted In Fall Shoes

This season, shoes kick their way through the fashion barrier. No longer is it just round toes . . . or squared-off toes . . . or crescent toes. This fall, anything "toes" — and everything goes — in shoe fashion. You'll score in every silhouette . . . be well-heeled in every height from the very high to the flat pancake.

And this multitude of styles is available in the stores in leathers of varied textures and scores of colors. As with shapes, so it is with leather textures. There are smooth leathers, brushed and sueded leathers, genuine patent leather, grained leathers, waxy and glove leathers, embossed and printed leathers.

For versatility and value in fall footwear, choose from the following list of paradeable possibilities compiled for you by Leather Industries of Amerca:

Leather Pumps — Bare, Buckled or Bowed: Begin with a lithe leather pump, broad in the toe and comfortable heeled. You can wear it unornamented, showing only a sleek shell with low "U" shaped or squarish throatline, perhaps bias-cut. Or you may choose to have it buckled or bowed.

Buckles are blooming at ground level this fall — in cut steel, tortoise shell, fabric, enamel, brass and all textures of leather. Brighten the autumn landscape with a gold suede pump with matching suede buckle outlinde in brass-studded brown patent leather — or a green smooth leather suit shoe with oval self-leather buckle — or plum patent leather pumps sporting silver or gold filigree buckles.

Like the buckle, the bow belongs to the elegant facet of fall's fashion picture. You'll find small flat leather bows on suit shoes, large velvet or silk bows on dress footwear, and every size and material in-between. On some late day and evening shoes, rosettes substitute for buckles or bows.

Strapped in with Leather: Strappy days are here again, with lovely leather shoes that sport every sort of strap imaginable. Straps may circle the ankle like a bracelet or bridge the instep one, two or three at a time. There are double straps on a single buckle, cross-over straps, and straps cut on the bias. For your strapproval, T's are scalloped, cone-shaped, low or high-cut, skinny, wide or split. Leather soles, trim and pliant, supply a firm foundation for this footwear, no matter how fragile.

Leather Sling-Backs: The sling-back — graceful illustration of the popular "'opened-up" shoe look — adds its delicate touch to the fall collection. It may be a one-inch sling on a smooth leather suit shoe, a skinny patent leather sling on a late-day shoe with an embossed leather front, or one of a variety of styles. Many slings are elasticized for extra security.

Leather Boots: Over the past few years, the boot has bounced from sporty, to highly detailed, to simple in cut and decoration. This season, it's back to bolder styling — thanks to such looks as the spat, "Batman," and the whole kinky British influence.

Dress Style Revived By The 'Skimp'

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

A funny thing happened on the way to fashion this summer. The dress was revived. But it was revived by nearly disappearing!

If that sounds like a magician's trick, it's the magic of design. Dresses had been disappearing for some time. It's years since anything but shifts and skimmers have been fashionable. So the designers simply made them skimpier than ever, shorter than ever, even cut holes in a lot of them. And strangely enough, the result was a sensation that put dresses right back in the spotlight.

So who's for a skimp dress, with its hemline well above the knee, its cut-outs heaven knows where, and its wild colors?

The skimp dress is not for every place and occasion. It's great for casual dressing, but hardly for the boss's secretary when she's on the job. It can be worn, in its "nude" versions, to parties in sophisticated cities, but not in the majority of smaller towns.

However, not all skimp dresses are so extreme as to be limited to the slender young think in big cities. Many are mild enough to be worn by more mature women who have kept their figures reasonably good. These are really skimmers, with bold color or print.

Window Shades Now Soil Resistant

"Scotchgard" has come to window shades. The finish, which has been used in the past on furniture fabrics to prevent soil, now is working magic on window shades produced by one leading manufacturer. The shades are said to resist water spotting in addition to dirt and grime.

Double Ring Vows Unite Ida McGrew, Ronald Sims

In a candlelight ceremony at 7 o'clock Friday evening, July 15, Miss Ida Faye McGrew became the bride of Ronald Gene Sims. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Gladys McGrew and the late E. D. McGrew and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Sims, all of West Monroe.

Rev. Leon R. Sims, uncle of the groom, officiated at the double ring ceremony in Mt. Vernon Baptist Church, beneath an arch of greenery entwined with pale yellow roses, flanked by baskets of white gladioli and lighted tapers in branched candelabra. Appropriate music was provided by Miss Wanda Jones, who also accompanied Miss Martha Rutledge, soloist.

Escorted by her brother, Dean McGrew, who gave her in marriage, the bride wore a full length gown of white silk organza over taffeta. The empire bodice featured an appliqued band of reembroidered Chantilly lace which was repeated around the hem of the skirt. A detachable Watteau train was held by a bow at the back waistline. Her double tiered veil of silk illusion fell mantilla style from a crown of pearls. She carried a bouquet of white orchids encircled with lilies of the valley atop a white Bible.

Mrs. Betty Ruth Kvatermek served her sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Patsy McGrew, cousin of the bride and Miss Emilia Cawthon. They wore identical dresses of yellow Swiss. Attached to A-line skirts the empire bodices were defined by bands of lace. Their bouquets of white carnations were set in backgrounds of apple green satin and net.

Candles were lighted by Cynthia McGrew niece of the bride and Dewanna McGrew, her cousin. Flower girls were Denise Rutledge and Lisa Kvaternik, also nieces of the bride.

Robert Sims attended his nephew as best man while Darrel Griggs, uncle of the groom, and Joe Coats served as groomsmen. Ushers were Glennie Beard and Phillip Sims, cousins of the groom.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. McGrew chose a two-piece model of turquoise acetate silk. Her accessories were beige and she wore a corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother was attired in a powder blue imported Irish linen sheath with matching shoulder cape encircled with embroidered motifs. Her accessories were of matching hue and she wore a corsage of white carnations.

Fellowship hall of the church was scene of the reception which followed. A floral arrangement of yellow and white in a cherub container flanked by the attendants' bouquets formed the central decor of the bride's table. Miss Barbara Koontz presided at the punch bowl and Mrs. Dean McGrew and Mrs. Ralph Kilpatrick alternated in serving the tiered wedding cake.

Mrs. Mary Lou Rutledge, sister of the bride, presided at the guest book table which also held a white memory candle decorated in yellow buds and encircled by a yellow net pouf.

After a short wedding trip to New Orleans the couple will be at home in Monroe where both are employed. The bride is a graduate of West Monroe high school. Mr. Sims was graduated from Neville high school and from Northeast Louisiana State College.

Harold D. White Claims Janet Worthington As Bride

Miss Janet Kay Worthington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hersel Bill Worthington of Baton Rouge, became the bride of Harold D. White, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marian Shelby White of Harrisonburg, in a 2:00 o'clock ceremony Saturday afternoon July 16 at Broadmoor Baptist Church in Baton Rouge.

The Rev. Charles W. Stevens, officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Serving as maid of honor was Miss Amelou Freeman of Houston, Texas and Bossier City. Attending her sister as bridesmaid was Miss Cindy Worthington.

Lamar Wyles of Monroe served his brother-in-law as best man. Groomsman was Clarence Prudhomme of Monticello, Ark., also brother-in-law to the groom. Ushers were Gary Worthington, brother of the bride, Don Buller and Henry Bernard, all of Baton Rouge.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white embossed floor-length gown, featuring butterfly sleeves and a scooped neckline. The slim A-line skirt was accented by a high-rise waist topped with a bow and tiny flowers. A matching train fell from the shoulders. Her bouffant veil of illusion was crowned by white seed pearls and pearl leaves. She carried a cascade of white stephanotis and stock florettes, centered with a large white cattleya orchid with a yellow throat, backed with French puffs of tulle and pearl leaves.

The attendants wore short gowns of yellow bonded lace, styled with scoop necklines and high-rise waists. Large flat bows and tulle of yellow formed their headpieces. They carried nosegays of white marguerite daisies with sprigs of English ivy and yellow streamers.

Nuptial music was provided by Mr. Drew Shaw, organist, and Mrs. Warren Clement, soloist.

A reception at the Knights of Columbus Hall on North Forster Drive followed the ceremony. Mrs. Worthington, mother of the bride, wore a powder blue lace sheath accented by butterfly sleeves, a blue pillbox and matching accessories. Her corsage was white roses. Mrs. White, mother of the bridegroom, wore a pink lace dress with matching accessories. Her corsage was also white roses.

A yellow and white theme was carried out in decor for the reception. A white topiary tree surrounded by tiny yellow rice bags and two white turtle doves decorated the entrance hall. A silver candelabra centered the register table. Registering guests were Mrs. Lamar Wyles of Monroe and Mrs. Clarence Prudhomme of Monticello, Ark., sisters of the groom.

A tiered wedding cake accented by yellow roses centered the round bride's table, which was covered by a satin and net cloth. Serving guests were Mrs. Nita Collins of Translyvania and Mrs. George Hopkins of Tallulah, aunts of the bride, Mrs. Warren Hopkins of Tallulah, cousins of the bride. All the members of the houseparty were presented corsages of majestic daisies.

Leaving for a wedding trip to the Ozarks, the new Mrs. White wore a pink printed suit, with beige accessories. Her corsage was the white orchid from her bridal bouquet. Upon their return, the couple will be home in Baton Rouge.

The bride is a graduate of Baton Rouge High School and LSU where she received a BA Degree in Journalism. She is a member of Kappa Delta Sorority and was a news editor for the campus newspaper, The Daily Reveille.

Mr. White is a graduate of Harrisonburg High School and attended Northeast Louisiana State College and LSU. Both are presently employed at a television station in Baton Rouge.

Expert Lists Tourist 'Traps'

PARIS (UPI) — The three things that most Americans forget when they plan for an overseas trip center around the problem of getting home.

Annik Touhadian, an ex-New Yorker who is a trouble-shooter for tourists at Orly Airport, says the three big problems she finds are.

— Tourists never remember the "$5 Departure Tax." Before you can leave Orly Airport, it must be paid. "Too many travelers arrive at the airport to go home completely broke."

— The baggage limit. If a tourist packs his bags full and has a tourist weight limit of 44 pounds when he leaves America how is he going to have room for his gifts going home? Twenty-pounds of gifts, if overweight, could cost an American $40 extra weight charges.

— No matter how many times they are told, travelers keep forgetting to reserve a seat home. "Just because you have a ticket on some airline doesn't mean you have a seat," she said. "You have to reconfirm — in Paris. You have to telephone your airline and say you really will take that flight home." Too often, she said, passengers arrive with tickets — but somewhere along the line the travel agent forgot," to tell the airline.

Dark Tan Passe', Harmful To Skin

NEW YORK — "The prettiest way to live the soft summer life — in its fresh, young baby-pastel fashions — is with a delicate sunny glow," says Estee Lauder. "A deep, dark tan is passe', and too much 'baking' is very harmful to the skin."

MRS. BILLY DEAN JOHNSON

Monroyan Claims Texas Bride

The wedding of Miss Barbara Alice Hughes and Billy Dean Johnson was solemnized Saturday, July 9 in Western Hills Methodist Church at El Paso, Texas. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Earl Hughes of El Paso and Mr. Johnson is the son of Mrs. Edward Tonore, Monroe and Ralph Johnson, Crossett, Arkansas.

The Rev. Jack Wallis officiated at the 4 p.m. ceremony before the altar which was banked with white gladioli and carnations, interspersed with gold candelabra and white satin streamers. Mrs. Judson Williams, soloist, was accompanied at the organ by Mrs. Bruce Hallmark.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a formal gown of white satin appliqued with lace on her empire waistline and chapel train. A crown of pearls held her tiered veil of English silk illusion and lace and she carried a cascade bouquet of white orchids and stephanotis.

Mrs. Lannie R. Hughes was matron of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Joyce Thompson, Mrs. Robert Litchlyter and Mrs. Norman Dowdy. They wore gowns of turquoise silk with matching jackets of Italian lace and matching pillbox hats. Turquoise tinted carnations formed their cascade bouquets.

Thomas A. Hughes, brother of the bride, served Mr. Johnson as best man. Ushers were Dr. Lannie R. Hughes, Steven H. Hughes, Colin Flannigan, Jimmy Vorwald and Herbert Hammer.

Mrs. Hughes wore for the occasion a green silk model with matching Chantilly lace jacket and a pink cymbidium orchid. Mrs. Tonore, mother of the groom, selected a blue gown fashioned with lace bodice and chiffon skirt. Her corsage was a white orchid.

A reception in Fellowship Hall followed the ceremony. Assisting with courtesies were Mrs. Dennis Lane, Mrs. Milton Harper, Mrs. Norman Wendler, Mrs. John Warden, Mrs. Tom Watrous and Miss Rhonda Tonore.

After a wedding trip to Florida the couple will be at home in West Monroe.

REHEARSAL SUPPER

On the evening preceding the wedding Mrs. Tonore, mother of the groom and Miss Lana Logan of Denver, Colorado, aunt of the groom, entertained at a rehearsal supper at El Paso Country Club.

Attending with the bethrothed couple and members of their families were the wedding party and out-of-town guests.

MRS. HAROLD D. WHITE

Harold D. White Claims Janet Worthington As Bride

Miss Janet Kay Worthington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hersel Bill Worthington of Baton Rouge, became the bride of Harold D. White, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marian Shelby White of Harrisonburg, in a 2:00 o'clock ceremony Saturday afternoon July 16 at Broadmoor Baptist Church in Baton Rouge.

The Rev. Charles W. Stevens, officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Serving as maid of honor was Miss Amelou Freeman of Houston, Texas and Bossier City. Attending her sister as bridesmaid was Miss Cindy Worthington.

Lamar Wyles of Monroe served his brother-in-law as best man. Groomsman was Clarence Prudhomme of Monticello, Ark., also brother-in-law to the groom. Ushers were Gary Worthington, brother of the bride, Don Buller and Henry Bernard, all of Baton Rouge.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white embossed floor-length gown, featuring butterfly sleeves and a scooped neckline. The slim A-line skirt was accented by a high-rise waist topped with a bow and tiny flowers. A matching train fell from the shoulders. Her bouffant veil of illusion was crowned by white seed pearls and pearl leaves. She carried a cascade of white stephanotis and stock florettes, centered with a large white cattleya orchid with a yellow throat, backed with French puffs of tulle and pearl leaves.

The attendants wore short gowns of yellow bonded lace, styled with scoop necklines and high-rise waists. Large flat bows and tulle of yellow formed their headpieces. They carried nosegays of white marguerite daisies with sprigs of English ivy and yellow streamers.

Nuptial music was provided by Mr. Drew Shaw, organist, and Mrs. Warren Clement, soloist.

A reception at the Knights of Columbus Hall on North Forster Drive followed the ceremony. Mrs. Worthington, mother of the bride, wore a powder blue lace sheath accented by butterfly sleeves, a blue pillbox and matching accessories.

Her corsage was white roses. Mrs. White, mother of the bridegroom, wore a pink lace dress with matching accessories. Her corsage was also white roses.

A yellow and white theme was carried out in decor for the reception. A white topiary tree surrounded by tiny yellow rice bags and two white turtle doves decorated the entrance hall. A silver candelabra centered the register table. Registering guests were Mrs. Lamar Wyles of Monroe and Mrs. Clarence Prudhomme of Monticello, Ark., sisters of the groom.

A tiered wedding cake accented by yellow roses centered the round bride's table, which was covered by a satin and net cloth. Serving guests were Mrs. Nita Collins of Translyvania and Mrs. George Hopkins of Tallulah, aunts of the bride, Mrs. Warren Hopkins of Tallulah, cousins of the bride. All the members of the houseparty were presented corsages of majestic daisies.

Leaving for a wedding trip to the Ozarks, the new Mrs. White wore a pink printed suit, with beige accessories. Her corsage was the white orchid from her bridal bouquet. Upon their return, the couple will be home in Baton Rouge.

The bride is a graduate of Baton Rouge High School and LSU where she received a BA Degree in Journalism. She is a member of Kappa Delta Sorority and was a news editor for the campus newspaper. The Daily Reveille.

Mr. White is a graduate of Harrisonburg High School and attended Northeast Louisiana State College and LSU. Both are presently employed at a television station in Baton Rouge.

Varied Silhouettes, Heel Heights Noted In Fall Shoes

This season, shoes kick their way through the fashion barrier. No longer is it just round toes . . . or squared-off toes . . . or crescent toes. This fall, anything "toes" — and everything goes — in shoe fashion. You'll score in every silhouette . . . be well-heeled in every height from the very high to the flat pancake.

And this multitude of styles is available in the stores in leathers of varied textures and scores of colors. As with shapes, so it is with leather textures. There are smooth leathers, brushed and sueded leathers, genuine patent leather, grained leathers, waxy and glove leathers, embossed and printed leathers.

For versatility and value in fall footwear, choose from the following list of paradeable possibilities compiled for you by Leather Industries of America:

Leather Pumps — Bare, Buckled or Bowed: Begin with a lithe leather pump, broad in the toe and comfortable heeled. You can wear it unornamented, showing only a sleek shell with low "U" shaped or squarish throatline, perhaps bias-cut. Or you may choose to have it buckled or bowed.

Buckles are blooming at ground level this fall — in cut steel, tortoise shell, fabric, enamel, brass and all textures of leather. Brighten the autumn landscape with a gold suede pump with matching suede buckle outlinde in brass-studded brown patent leather — or a green smooth leather suit shoe with oval self-leather buckle — or plum patent leather pumps sporting silver or gold filigree buckles.

Like the buckle, the bow belongs to the elegant facet of fall's fashion picture. You'll find small flat leather bows on suit shoes, large velvet or silk bows on dress footwear, and every size and material in-between. On some late day and evening shoes, rosettes substitute for buckles or bows.

Strapped in with Leather: Strappy days are here again, with lovely leather shoes that sport every sort of strap imaginable. Straps may circle the ankle like a bracelet or bridge the instep one, two or three at a time. There are double straps on a single buckle, cross-over straps, and straps cut on the bias. For your strapproval, T's are scalloped, cone-shaped, low or high-cut, skinny, wide or split. Leather soles, trim and pliant, supply a firm foundation for this footwear, no matter how fragile.

Leather Sling-Backs: The sling-back — graceful illustration of the popular "'opened-up" shoe look — adds its delicate touch to the fall collection. It may be a one-inch sling on a smooth leather suit shoe, a skinny patent leather sling on a late-day shoe with an embossed leather front, or one of a variety of styles. Many slings are elasticized for extra security.

Leather Boots: Over the past few years, the boot has bounced from sporty, to highly detailed, to simple in cut and decoration. This season, it's back to bolder styling — thanks to such looks as the spat, "Batman," and the whole kinky British influence.

Dress Style Revived By The 'Skimp'

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

A funny thing happened on the way to fashion this summer. The dress was revived. But it was revived by nearly disappearing!

If that sounds like a magician's trick, it's the magic of design. Dresses had been disappearing for some time. It's years since anything but shifts and skimmers have been fashionable. So the designers simply made them skimpier than ever, shorter than ever, even cut holes in a lot of them. And strangely enough, the result was a sensation that put dresses right back in the spotlight.

So who's for a skimp dress, with its hemline well above the knee, its cut-outs heaven knows where, and its wild colors?

The skimp dress is not for every place and occasion. It's great for casual dressing, but hardly for the boss's secretary when she's on the job. It can be worn, in its "nude" versions, to parties in sophisticated cities, but not in the majority of smaller towns.

However, not all skimp dresses are so extreme as to be limited to the slender young think in big cities. Many are mild enough to be worn by more mature women who have kept their figures reasonably good. These are really skimmers, with bold color or print.

Window Shades Now Soil Resistant

"Scotchgard" has come to window shades. The finish, which has been used in the past on furniture fabrics to prevent soil, now is working magic on window shades produced by one leading manufacturer. The shades are said to resist water spotting in addition to dirt and grime.

Double Ring Vows Unite Ida McGrew, Ronald Sims

In a candlelight ceremony at 7 o'clock Friday evening, July 15, Miss Ida Faye McGrew became the bride of Ronald Gene Sims. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Gladys McGrew and the late E. D. McGrew and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Sims, all of West Monroe.

Rev. Leon R. Sims, uncle of the groom, officiated at the double ring ceremony in Mt. Vernon Baptist Church, beneath an arch of greenery entwined with pale yellow roses, flanked by baskets of white gladioli and lighted tapers in branched candelabra. Appropriate music was provided by Miss Wanda Jones, who also accompanied Miss Martha Rutledge, soloist.

Escorted by her brother, Dean McGrew, who gave her in marriage, the bride wore a full length gown of white silk organza over taffeta. The empire bodice featured an appliqued band of reembroidered Chantilly lace which was repeated around the hem of the skirt. A detachable Watteau train was held by a bow at the back waistline. Her double tiered veil of silk illusion fell mantilla style from a crown of pearls. She carried a bouquet of white orchids encircled with lilies of the valley atop a white Bible.

Mrs. Betty Ruth Kvaternick served her sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Patsy McGrew, cousin of the bride and Miss Emilia Cawthon. They wore identical dresses of yellow Swiss. Attached to A-line skirts the empire bodices were defined by bands of lace. Their bouquets of white carnations were set in backgrounds of apple green satin and net.

Candles were lighted by Cynthia McGrew niece of the bride and Dewanna McGrew, her cousin. Flower girls were Denise Rutledge and Lisa Kvaternik, also nieces of the bride.

Robert Sims attended his nephew as best man while Darrel Griggs, uncle of the groom, and Joe Coats served as groomsmen. Ushers were Glennie Beard and Phillip Sims, cousins of the groom.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. McGrew chose a two-piece model of turquoise acetate silk. Her accessories were beige and she wore a corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother was attired in a powder blue imported Irish linen sheath with matching shoulder cape encircled with embroidered motifs. Her accessories were of matching hue and she wore a corsage of white carnations.

Fellowship hall of the church was scene of the reception which followed. A floral arrangement of yellow and white in a cherub container flanked by the attendants' bouquets formed the central decor of the bride's table. Miss Barbara Koontz presided at the punch bowl and Mrs. Dean McGrew and Mrs. Ralph Kilpatrick alternated in serving the tiered wedding cake.

Mrs. Mary Lou Rutledge, sister of the bride, presided at the guest book table which also held a white memory candle decorated in yellow buds and encircled by a yellow net pouf.

After a short wedding trip to New Orieans the couple will be at home in Monroe where both are employed. The bride is a graduate of West Monroe high school. Mr. Sims was graduated from Neville high school and from Northeast Louisiana State College.

Expert Lists Tourist 'Traps'

PARIS (UPI) — The three things that most Americans forget when they plan for an overseas trip center around the problem of getting home.

Annik Touhadian, an ex-New Yorker who is a trouble-shooter for tourists at Orly Airport, says the three big problems she finds are:

— Tourists never remember the "$5 Departure Tax," Before you can leave Orly Airport, it must be paid. "Too many travelers arrive at the airport to go home completely broke."

— The baggage limit. If a tourist packs his bags full and has a tourist weight limit of 44 pounds when he leaves America how is he going to have room for his gifts going home? Twenty-pounds of gifts, if overweight, could cost an American $40 extra weight charges.

— No matter how many times they are told, travelers keep forgetting to reserve a seat home. "Just because you have a ticket on some airline doesn't mean you have a seat," she said. "You have to reconfirm — in Paris. You have to telephone your airline and say you really will take that flight home." Too often, she said, passengers arrive with tickets — but somewhere along the line the travel agent forgot," to tell the airline.

Dark Tan Passe', Harmful To Skin

NEW YORK — "The prettiest way to live the soft summer life — in its fresh, young baby-pastel fashions — is with a delicate sunny glow," says Estee Lauder. "A deep, dark tan is passe', and too much 'baking' is very harmful to the skin."

Colorful Jewelry Should Complement Skin, Face Shape

With costume jewelry more colorful, larger and dramatic than ever before, make certain that the pieces you choose to wear complement your complexion, the shape of your face, and your costume, says a beauty authority.

Follow a few basic tips and your jewelry will become twice as flattering. First, apply sheer foundation make-up that will give your skin a smooth, even tone against the dazzle and color of the jewels. Bring the color down over the jawline and throat. Choose a shade to match your skin, but on the creamy beige side when you wear gold jewelry, and on the rose-beige side when silver is worn.

If you select the new dramatic and colorful contemporary-primitive jewelry, be sure the colors flatter your complexion and go with the costume you are wearing. Then, make this jewelry even more flattering by selecting a lipstick to harmonize with the most important shades.

Pure white jewelry will flatter a clear skin and point up one that is less than perfect. Black jewelry is difficult to wear for it accents lines in the face and neck. Unless your figure is tall and willowy, wear modified versions of the large earring, bracelet and bead rage. Dangling earrings are for you if your face is full or oval, but a round or chunky style, worn at the ear lobe level, will widen a face that is long and prove to be more flattering.

NO BLUE MONDAY

Blue Monday is a misnomer today. U.S. Steel questioned more than 2,000 homemakers and found that two-thirds do their wash three or more times a week. In fact, one-fourth of those interviewed did more than ten loads every week.

Women In Construction Give $300 Scholarship To NLSC

Mrs. Louis Elias was welcomed as a new member of the Women in Construction at its dinner meeting Monday night at the Holiday Inn Restaurant.

Mrs. E. D. Elmore, president, had charge of the meeting. Don Conner, a guest for the evening, expressed appreciation from the Monroe Jaycees for the breakfast given by the WIC for the Miss Louisiana contestants and their chaperones. He also told of letters received from several contestants expressing their gratitude for the hospitality shown them at the breakfast.

Prospective member, Mrs. Tommy Williams, was asked to sign an application for membership.

During the business session which followed dinner the group approved a recommendation from the board of directors to send $300 to Northeast State College for a scholarship to be awarded again this year. This is the third scholarship given by the Monroe chapter in addition to scholarships given on national basis in conjunction with National Association of Women In Construction.

Members were reminded of the NAWIC convention to be held in Miami, Florida September 16, 17 and 18. Seven members from Monroe are making plans to attend.

Marigolds in a small pottery jug served as the centerpiece for the dinner table. Miniature plastic clothes sprinklers filled with fresh cut marigolds colorfully marked places for Mrs. Lonnie Lutrick, Mrs. Jim Bradford, Mrs. Louis Elias, Mrs. Richard Carter, Mrs. Margie Moore, Miss Willie Higgens, Miss Lavergne Causey, Miss Elizabeth Shaughnessy, Mrs. Leon Miletello, Mrs. Joe Tiernan, Mrs. Tommy Williams, Mrs. Bill Burroughs, and Mrs. Elmore. Miss Causey won the door prize.

SHAPE SMOCKING

Give smocking a gentle snapping tug to put it back in shape after laundering. Stubborn puffs can be poked into a dimple shape with a fingertip.

A Beauty Hint

Margaret Merril advises that it is quite simple for every woman to promote an English countryside complexion. Her hint to gain a peaches-and-cream loveliness is to damp a cloth with cold water from your refrigerator and press it over your face for a few minutes once or twice a day. Then, to hold the good of the complexion - beautifying cold water smooth on a little tropical oil of Olay. This oil is rather scarce and expensive but your drug store should be able to get you a small supply.

Colorful Jewelry Should Complement Skin, Face Shape

With costume jewelry more colorful, larger and dramatic than ever before, make certain that the pieces you choose to wear complement your complexion, the shape of your face, and your costume, says a beauty authority.

Follow a few basic tips and your jewelry will become twice as flattering. First, apply sheer foundation make-up that will give your skin a smooth, even tone against the dazzle and color of the jewels. Bring the color down over the jawline and throat. Choose a shade to match your skin, but on the creamy beige side when you wear gold jewelry, and on the rose-beige side when silver is worn.

If you select the new dramatic and colorful contemporary-primitive jewelry, be sure the colors flatter your complexion and go with the costume you are wearing. Then, make this jewelry even more flattering by selecting a lipstick to harmonize with the most important shades.

Pure white jewelry will flatter a clear skin and point up one that is less than perfect. Black jewelry is difficult to wear, for it accents lines in the face and neck. Unless your figure is tall and willowy, wear modified versions of the large earring, bracelet and bead rage. Dangling earrings are for you if your face is full or oval, but a round or chunky style, worn at the ear lobe level, will widen a face that is long and prove to be more flattering.

NO BLUE MONDAY

Blue Monday is a misnomer today. U.S. Steel questioned more than 2,900 homemakers and found that two-thirds do their wash three or more times a week. In fact, one-fourth of those interviewed did more than ten loads every week.

Women In Construction Give $300 Scholarship To NLSC

Mrs. Louis Elias was welcomed as a new member of the Women in Construction at its dinner meeting Monday night at the Holiday Inn Restaurant.

Mrs. E. D. Elmore, president, had charge of the meeting. Don Conner, a guest for the evening, expressed appreciation from the Monroe Jaycees for the breakfast given by the WIC for the Miss Louisiana contestants and their chaperones. He also told of letters received from several contestants expressing their gratitude for the hospitality shown them at the breakfast.

Prospective member, Mrs. Tommy Williams, was asked to sign an application for membership.

During the business session which followed dinner the group approved a recommendation from the board of directors to send $300 to Northeast State College for a scholarship to be awarded again this year. This is the third scholarship given by the Monroe chapter in addition to scholarships given on national basis in conjunction with National Association of Women In Construction.

Members were reminded of the NAWIC convention to be held in Miami, Florida September 16, 17 and 18. Seven members from Monroe are making plans to attend.

Marigolds in a small pottery jug served as the centerpiece for the dinner table. Miniature plastic clothes sprinklers filled with fresh cut marigolds colorfully marked places for Mrs. Lonnie Lutrick, Mrs. Jim Bradford, Mrs. Louis Elias, Mrs. Richard Carter, Mrs. Margie Moore, Miss Willie Higgens, Miss Lavergne Causey, Miss Elizabeth Shaughnessy, Mrs. Lou Miletello, Mrs. Joe Tiernan, Mrs. Tommy Williams, Mrs. Bill Burroughs, and Mrs. Elmore. Miss Causey won the door prize.

SHAPE SMOCKING

Give smocking a gentle snapping tug to put it back in shape after laundering. Stubborn puffs can be poked into a dimple shape with a fingertip.

A Beauty Hint

Margaret Merril advises that it is quite simple for every woman to promote an English countryside complexion. Her hint to gain a peaches-and-cream loveliness is to damp a cloth with cold water from your refrigerator and press it over your face for a few minutes once or twice a day. Then, to hold the good of the complexion - beautifying cold water smooth on a little tropical oil of Olay. This oil is rather scarce and expensive but your drug store should be able to get you a small supply.

Visitors in town this week have been entertained at a variety of types of parties. A number of those honored were former residents of this area "back home" for summer visits.

FAY WINK, who has been here for about three weeks, left yesterday to return to her home in Westfield, New Jersey. Fay and her sons, JAY and KEVIN, were guests of MRS IVYE WINK and MRS E. B. TODD, while J. D. was in Europe on business. He arrived Thursday for a quick visit before taking his family home.

Among the parties planned for Fay during her stay was a morning swim at the home of FRANCES ADCOCK. CHARLOTTIE DENT was co-hostess for the affair last Friday morning. Guests were invited to arrive in shorts or swim suits about nine a.m. Following a swim, refreshments were served in the gazebo, where the glass-top table was decorated with a bouquet of Gloriosa daisies. The menu included hot biscuits wtih bacon, cheese biscuits, Danish pastries, cucumber sandwiches, and pecan rolls with a choice of lemonade or coffee.

Luncheon at Bayou DeSiard country club was the compliment planned by PAT LARY for Fay on Wednesday . . . Thursday's party was luncheon at the Chateau with MARY HART and VIRGINIA WARNER as co-hostesses. Pale pink crepe myrtle and pink calladium leaves centered the table for eight.

A real Southern menu was served when DIBBLE PATE invited Fay, members of her old Bridge club, and an extra table for lunch on Friday. Nosegays of daisies and daylilies centered the three tables for four. Ham, potato salad, fresh black-eyed peas, cornbread, and ice cream with fresh peaches or strawberries comprised the menu.

Guest in the home of the MAURICE GLAZERS for the past two weeks has been RONNIE (Mrs. Melvin) COHEN ofTerre Haute, Indiana. Ronnie left yesterday to return home.

Toby complimented her daughter at an afternoon party last Thursday. About seventy-five guests were invited for a visit with Ronnie. Pink gladioli, purple iris, and yellow and white chrysanthemums were used in the bouquet which centered the dining room table. ESTHER MASUR, SYLVIA BERNAT, and BETTY MARSHALL presided at the silver coffee service. Others who assisted between three and five were ANN RAPHAEL, HELEN EPLER, and TINA DANTI . . . Ronnie was also inspiration for a family dinner party with FAY and BILL WEINBERG as hosts.

The Glazers are expecting more company this coming week when SEYMOUR GLAZER and his family arrive for a visit. Seymour, who is American consul-general in Paris, is to visit his parents for about two weeks.

ALMA JEAN and DAVID POBST and their children, SUSAN, JANET, DAVID, and FORREST, were here last week as guests of her parents, the FORREST LINQUISTS, in their home on Marie Place. A group of ten old friends were invited for luncheon with Alma Jean when Izora entertained at Bayou DeSiard country club on Friday. A green cloth covered the table, which was centered with a silver Revere bowl filled with brilliant marigolds and euonymous.

Other parties which complimented the Pobsts were an evening party at the home of the ALBERT WEMPES on Wednesday . . . and a boating party Thursday with CAROL and HANK WELLS as hosts. Sammie Monk and I. N. McNeely entertained at a family patio party Thursday.

Here from Norman, Oklahoma, as guests of MARY LEE and DOC MILAM are EVA and FRED BECKETT and their children, DEWITT and MARY EVE. A small coffee on Thursday morning was the compliment planned by PEGGY FOLDS for Eva. A bouquet of crepe myrtle and greenery decorated the garden room of the Folds residence on Pargoud boulevard. Refreshments were served from the snack bar to about fifteen ladies.

Wednesday evening, PAULA MEEK was hostess for an outdoor supper party honoring Mary Eve. The party was held at the Meek home on Speed Avenue. Ten girls were invited for a meal of barbecued hamburgers, baked beans, and cupcakes.

Another family of former Monroyans visiting here are PAT SANDERS and her children, JIMMY and LISA, who are guests of Pat's parents, the JIM HARBUCKS, at their home on Harrison street. Pat plans to be here another two weeks, and leave the children for an extra two weeks after she returns to their home in Burlington, Ontario, Canada.

A swimming party was planned for Jimmy, Lisa, and Twelve friends by LARRY and KATHY JONES on Monday. Larry and Kathy entertained at the family home on Forsythe Avenue. Friends were invited for a late afternoon swim, followed by a supper of hamburgers cooked in the yard.

Home again after a wonderful trip were VERA and HUGO ANGELINI and their children, NICKY, DEBBIE, and LISA. The family left Monroe in early June, proceeding to Leominster, Massachusetts for a week's visit. Here the children stayed with grandparents while Vera and Hugo went on to Europe for three weeks. They returned to Massachusetts for another week, before all returned home last weekend.

Vera and Hugo give glowing reports of their trip abroad. They arrived in London is time to attend the Trooping of the Colour ceremony marking the Queen's official birthday. Later they visited Paris, Switzerland, Venice, Florence, Capri and Rome.

Guests in the home of the CLAY WILSONS have been Juanita's sister, PAULINE HUNT, and her sons BOBBY and KENNETH. They have been here about ten days, leave today to return home to Mobberly, Missouri. The visitors were entertained at a boating party Sunday afternoon with GERRY and BURT SPERRY, hosts. The group returned home for supper after several hours on the water.

Tuesday at noon, JANE SCHUBERT was hostess for luncheon at home, honoring Pauline. Ten guests were seated at a table centered with pink petunias and maidenhair fern. The menu included chicken mousse, cucumber sandwiches, fruit bowl, and gingerbread with coffee.

A party at home complimented young GLADDEN WALTERS III on his seventh birthday Wednesday. Thirty little friends were invited to the Walters home at 1100 North First between the hours of three and five. A magician show by the Great Lamont highlighted the afternoon program. Games were played, with prizes going to CHRISTOPHER SWAYZE, PAUL McKELVEY, and CAROL McNERN. Refreshment of ice cream and individual cakes iced "G III" were served on the patio.

Young Miss NANCY HARGROVE celebrated her ninth birthday at a party Friday afternoon. Twelve little girls met at the Hargrove home on Emerson Street for refreshments before going to a movie. A silver bowl filled with yellow chrysanthemums and white roses centered the table where they were seated for ice cream and cake. A honey alabaster bowl held yellow and peach-colored roses in the living room.

Alumnae of KAPPA DELTA are anticipating a busy two days Monday and Tuesday, when LEONA GOOD of Dallas will be visiting. Leona, who is national chapterian of the sorority is meeting with the group to formulate plans for installation of a chapter of Kappa Delta at Northeast Louisiana State college this fall. She will be the houseguest of BETTY HASTINGS at her home on Deborah Drive. Kappa Deltas will honor Leona at a luncheon meeting tomorrow at the Paragon club. On Tuesday, she will lunch with the local Kappa Delta executive council at Bayou DeSiard country club.

For our poem today, here is "Song" by Florence Smith:

How pleasant it is that always
There's somebody older than you—
Someone to pet and caress, you,
Someone to scold you, too!
Someone to call you a baby,
To laugh at you when you're wise;
Someone to care when you're sorry,
To kiss the tears from your eyes;
When life has begun to be weary,
And youth to melt like the dew,
To know, like the little children
Somebody's older than you.
I know that the great All-Father
loves us and the little one too;
Keep only childlike-hearted —
Heaven is older than you!

'Bellywarmers' Make Comeback

By ROB WOOD

Associated Press Writer

Those bright, bright, blanket-size neckties of the swinging 1940s, known in the trade as "bellywarmers," are making a comeback.

"The bellywarmers" were a trademark of the well - dressed gent 25 years ago. They were 4½ to 5 inches wide and decorated in flashy colors.

These have given way to narrow ties, some of which measure no more than 1½ inches.

New York stores report brisk sales of the wide tie.

The 3-inch tie is the most popular but one New York store reported the 5-inch tie sales had jumped from zero to 10 dozen a week in recent months.

Many of the new ties have big polka dots or a paisley design.

One reason given by New York and West Coast experts for the boost in wide tie sales is that men are buying more of their own neckwear, rather than leaving it to the little woman.

"Men," said a trade spokesman, "aren't as tie conservative as the women."

Nevertheless, other parts of the country have been slow to accept the bellywarmer, no matter who does the shopping.

The family left Monroe in early June, proceeding to Leominster, Massachusetts for a week's visit. Here the children stayed with grandparents while Vera and Hugo went on to Europe for three weeks. They returned to Massachusetts for another week, before all returned home last weekend.

Vera and Hugo give glowing reports of their trip abroad. They arrived in London is time to attend the Trooping of the Colour ceremony marking the Queen's official birthday. Later they visited Paris, Switzerland, Venice, Florence, Capri and Rome.

Guests in the home of the CLAY WILSONS have been Juanita's sister, PAULINE HUNT, and her sons BOBBY and KENNETH. They have been here about ten days, leave today to return home to Mobberly, Missouri. The visitors were entertained at a boating party Sunday afternoon with GERRY and BURT SPERRY, hosts. The group returned home for supper after several hours on the water.

Tuesday at noon, JANE SCHUBERT was hostess for luncheon at home, honoring Pauline. Ten guests were seated at a table centered with pink petunias and maidenhair fern. The menu included chicken mousse, cucumber sandwiches, fruit bowl, and gingerbread with coffee.

A party at home complimented young GLADDEN WALTERS III on his seventh birthday Wednesday. Thirty little friends were invited to the Walters home at 1100 North First between the hours of three and five. A magician show by the Great Lamont highlighted the afternoon program. Games were played, with prizes going to CHRISTOPHER SWAYZE, PAUL McKELVEY, and CAROL McNERN. Refreshment of ice cream and individual cakes iced "G III" were served on the patio.

Young Miss NANCY HARGROVE celebrated her ninth birthday at a party Friday afternoon. Twelve little girls met at the Hargrove home on Emerson Street for refreshments before going to a movie. A silver bowl filled with yellow chrysanthemums and white roses centered the table where they were seated for ice cream and cake. A honey alabaster bowl held yellow and peach-colored roses in the living room.

Alumnae of KAPPA DELTA are anticipating a busy two days Monday and Tuesday, when LEONA GOOD of Dallas will be visiting. Leona, who is national chapterian of the sorority is meeting with the group to formulate plans for installation of a chapter of Kappa Delta at Northeast Louisiana State college this fall. She will be the houseguest of BETTY HASTINGS at her home on Deborah Drive. Kappa Deltas will honor Leona at a luncheon meeting tomorrow at the Paragon club. On Tuesday, she will lunch with the local Kappa Delta executive council at Bayou DeSiard country club.

For our poem today, here is "Song" by Florence Smith:

How pleasant it is that always
There's somebody older than you—
Someone to pet and caress, you,
Someone to scold you, too!
Someone to call you a baby,
To laugh at you when you're wise;
Someone to care when you're sorry,
To kiss the tears from your eyes;
When life has begun to be weary,
And youth to melt like the dew,
To know, like the little children
Somebody's older than you.
I know that the great All-Father
loves us and the little one too;
Keep only childlike-hearted —
Heaven is older than you!

'Bellywarmers' Make Comeback

By ROB WOOD

Associated Press Writer

Those bright, bright, blanket-size neckties of the swinging 1940s, known in the trade as "bellywarmers," are making a comeback.

"The bellywarmers" were a trademark of the well - dressed gent 25 years ago. They were 4½ to 5 inches wide and decorated in flashy colors.

These have given way to narrow ties, some of which measure no more than 1½ inches.

New York stores report brisk sales of the wide tie.

The 3-inch tie is the most popular but one New York store reported the 5-inch tie sales had jumped from zero to 10 dozen a week in recent months.

Many of the new ties have big polka dots or a paisley design.

One reason given by New York and West Coast experts for the boost in wide tie sales is that men are buying more of their own neckwear, rather than leaving it to the little woman.

"Men," said a trade spokesman, "aren't as tie conservative as the women."

Nevertheless, other parts of the country have been slow to accept the bellywarmer, no matter who does the shopping.

Hemerocallis Club Sees Color Slides

Color slides of Russia and surrounding countries were shown members of the Twin City Hemerocallis Club when they met Monday night in the Agriculture Building in West Monroe.

Hosts for the evening were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Turner, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Eaker, Mrs. Julius Irving and Mrs. Jewel Earl.

Following a short business session conducted by Mr. Turner, Mrs. R. C. Pittard introduced the speaker, Rev. Robert White of Bastrop. Rev. White gave narration on the films shown which he had made on a trip abroad.

Present in addition to the hosts and the speaker were Miss Jerry Earl, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Pittard, Mrs. James Monroe and Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Cobb.

One Pattern Look Gains Popularity In Decorating

The one-pattern look has become increasingly popular, not only for the coordinated and truly unique appearance it gives your room, but also for the decorating tricks it can perform.

Many fabrics today can be applied to walls or, if not, come with companion wallpapers that can be used for coordinated emphasis.

Just exactly what can the one-pattern look do for you? Most important, of course, is the assurance that your room is coordinated — that the patterns you have used on walls and for draperies or slip-covers or bedspreads are designed to go together.

The one-pattern look can make a small room seem larger — as long as the pattern selected is small in scale. It can serve to emphasize the intriguing lines of a dormer room. Used boldly on one wall and for companion draperies, it can serve to add interest to a large room. For a long, narrow room, use the bold pattern on the short wall and for nearby slipcovers or draperies to make the room dimensions appear more square than elongated.

Fabric or wallpaper can also be used to conceal a damaged wall area — by building a plywood frame and stapling the fabric to the frame.

The best fabric to apply yourself is one that has a tight weave so that it will not limply stretch every which way after the paste is applied — a chintz or glosheen for example. Don't choose a silk or equally delicate fabric — these must be applied by professionals.

MISS DONNA LYNN HOGAN

Donna Lynn Hogan Engaged To Robert Benjamin Booth

Engagement of Miss Donna Lynn Hogan and Robert Benjamin Booth, seniors at Northeast Louisiana State College, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hogan of Epps. Mr. Booth is the son of Mrs. H. O. Booth of Marshall, Texas.

The wedding is calendared for September 3 in Epps Baptist Church with Rev. Don L. Roberts officiating at the 4 p.m. ceremony.

Miss Hogan has chosen Miss Ruth Kitchens as her maid of honor and Miss Sharron Cunningham as bridesmaid. Terry Holley will attend the bridegroom as best man and named as ushers are David Hogan, Tommy Wood, Bruce Hall and Wayman Tigrette.

A graduate of Epps high school, Miss Hogan is now a senior in medical technology at Northeast.

Mr. Booth graduated from Marshall high school, attended Tulane and is now a senior pharmacy student at Northeast. He is a member of Phi Delta Chi and American Pharmaceutical Association.

Following their marriage the couple will reside in Monroe.

Spanish Acent In Decorating Invades American Homes

Americans have adopted the Spanish accent in interior design because it has a magic way of adding beauty to a home without conflicting with what is already there.

Our ideas of what Spanish design consists of have been conditioned, naturally enough, by what we have seen in the way of reproductions of the original. Decorators refer to the truly Spanish design and not to mutations that have been derived from Mexico and South America. Many of the reproductions to be found on the American continents were influenced by the missionaries who had elaborate conceptions about architecture perfectly suitable for the church but often not for the home.

The real home on the Iberian Peninsula possesses elegance and is restrained, dignified and restful. It is never ostentatious, interior designers note. Much of what is known as Spanish has been influenced by the Moors who occupied Spain from 711 A. D. until 1492, the same year Columbus discovered America.

BLENDS WELL

Always bearing in mind that tastes vary from province to province in Spain, a typical home has walls of rough white plaster, sometimes combined with tile. Ceilings are flat. They may be made of carved wood, while some are beamed.

The floors are delightfully enticing and add color and design to the room. In ancient Spain they were made in white, beige, red, brown and gold. Today this classic elegance has been handcrafted in solid vinyl tile. Its name is Moda Moresca which means Moorish style. Its attractive embossed surface makes it easy to keep floors clean. Its random look harmonizes with casual as well as formal rooms.

DISTINCTIVE DESIGN

Spanish furniture is usually walnut, often inlaid. Oak is frequently combined with wrought iron in stretchers and bases. Dark finishes are favored. One piece of furniture that is popular is the chest, often covered with leather or velvet. Another is the cabinet, of which the upper section is an ornately painted or lacquered group of drawers and the lower part either a table or cupboard. Brightly colored tapestries and more somber paintings decorate the walls.

Illumination is provided by chandeliers of hoops hung from the ceiling. Lovely crystal chandeliers, wrought iron and bright pottery objects are freely used.

Spanish decorations blend so well with other motifs that home owners can use as much or as little as they please.

Melisande Frost Becomes Bride Of James Marlin

Miss Melisande Frost, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton L. Frost of Calhoun, became the bride of James E. Marlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Marlin of Muskogee, Oklahoma, in a ceremony Sunday, July 10 in Seventh-day Adventist Church, Sandal Drive, Monroe.

Elder George Green performed the ceremony before an arch of greenery, flanked by white candelabra and large fan-shaped arrangements of white gladioli.

Mrs. Pearl Averett, organist, played appropriate selections and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Charlotte Purcell.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of white silk peau de soie. The fitted bodice, encrusted with appliques of Alencon lace and seed pearls, featured a scoop neckline and elbow sleeves. Her triple tiered veil of silk illusion fell fingertip length from a crown of Alencon lace and pearls. A detachable train fell chapel length from the back waist of the sheath skirt. She carried a cascade arrangement of feathered white chrysanthemums and valley lily centered with a lavender orchid corsage.

Miss Pamala Frost, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and wore a floor length A-line gown of lavender peau de soie. White embroidered lace highlighted the empire waist, short sleeves and scoop neckline. A lavender peau circle held her matching tulle veil and she wore matching shoes and carried a nosegay of lavender chrysanthemums. Bridesmaids, dressed identically to the honor attendant were Miss Denise Elmore, Miss Priscilla Howard, cousins of the bride, Calhoun; and Miss Belinda Gill, Fort Smith, Ark.

Flower girl, Barbara Parker, Shreveport, was dressed identical to the other attendants, and carried a basket of lavender chrysanthemums.

Candlelighters were Larry Wininger, Calhoun, cousin of the bride and Randy Bare, Dallas, Texas, cousin of the groom.

Serving as best man was Richard Parker, Shreveport, and groomsmen were Phil Williams, Vivian; Richard May, Okeene, Okla., Gary Green, Huntsville, Ala. Ushers were George Elmore, Calhoun; Grady Fitzpatrick and Wesley Fitzpatrick, Jonesboro. Kevin Brunette, Dallas, Texas, cousin of the bride, was Bible boy.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore a pink lace sheath gown with matching hat and bone accessories. Her corsage was a lavender orchid. The groom's mother selected a gown of sapphire blue lace with hat of identical color and other accessories of matching hue, and a corsage of white cymbidium orchids.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the First National Bank reception room in West Monroe. The bride's table, covered with a white lace cloth was centered with lighted tapers in branched candelabra encircled with the bridesmaids' bouquets. At opposite ends were the crystal punch bowl and a tiered wedding cake.

Mrs. Bill Brunette aunt of the bride of Dallas, Texas, presided at the punch bowl and serving the cake was Mrs. Coy Lee, Calhoun, aunt of the bride. Alternating at the guest book were Mrs. Ray Murray, and Mrs. Clarence Frost, aunts of the bride.

When the couple left on a trip en route to Granby, Colorado, where they will live, the bride was wearing a purple traveling suit with white accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. Mrs. Marlin attended Ozark Academy in Gentry, Ark., and is a graduate of Jefferson Academy in Jefferson, Texas. The bridegroom is a graduate of Muskogee Central high school and attended Southwestern Union College, Keene, Texas.

Sleepwear Also Doubles For Lounging

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

Sleep and loungewear is often the place where a woman who hesitates over the baby look in day clothes can let herself go and have some fun. Summer styles are spiced and sugared with baby dresses for nightgowns, ruffled rompers instead of pj's.

The biggest style change in sleepwear is undoubtedly that from the baby doll pajama to the sleep dress. This new name indicates that dresses derive from the shift, and combine some of the beach and patio look with fabrics suitable for sleeping.

Thus Dorme takes navy gingham-check dotted Swiss with tiny red dots and frames the square neckline with Schiffli eyelet which extends into crossed straps over the unexpectedly bare back. The silhouette is shifty for coolness, the baby look as good for leisure hours as for sleeping.

PERKY PAJAMA

The romper has appeared as a general play wear style, youthful in gay cottons, more sophisticated in nylon jersey. It is just as perky when used as a summer pajama.

Some rompers are in tailored style, done in checks or stripes. Others are colorfully Mod, with brilliant solid colors like orange with wide bands of white at all edges.

But other rompers come in baby looks, such as Jerry Morton's made entirely of tiers of white Schiffli eyelet ruffles, or in prints interrupted by bands of lace run through with ribbon.

Coat and sleep dress combinations often look made for the patio. Gone are all the fussy lace trims and the icky-poo big sleeves. The coats usually have no sleeves, just slip on over sleep dresses with loose kimono sleeves. The colors are strong, too, and often in bold prints that mingle pink and orange.

New fabric for leisure wear that also goes into the bedroom is terry, made up now in little skimp shifts called T-shirt dresses, in togas to pop over a bikini pajama and in the wrapper, new looking with black bindings defining its casual lines.

New See-Through Fashions Attract Designer Debate

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

Socialites and designers are debating the see-through fashions, with most ladies feeling that they are for private use only.

Designers vary in their opinions, with some rejecting nudity as "merely a gimmick," others saying they'll try some sheer fabrics. Other opinions range from "strictly a gag" to "lace enough nudity for me."

The idea pops up that women should conceal for allurement, not reveal, and all designers feel that the see-through look has to be handled very carefully or else it quickly becomes cheap.

Sleep and loungewear is often the place where a woman who hesitates over the baby look in day clothes can let herself go and have some fun. Summer styles are spiced and sugared with baby dresses for nightgowns, ruffled rompers instead of pj's.

The biggest style change in sleepwear is undoubtedly that from the baby doll pajama to the sleep dress. This new name indicates that dresses derive from the shift, and combine some of the beach and patio look with fabircs suitable for sleeping.

Thus Dorme takes navy gingham-check dotted Swiss with tiny red dots and frames the square neckline with Schiffli eyelet which extends into crossed straps over the unexpectedly bare back. The silhouette is shifty for coolness, the baby look as good for leisure hours as for sleeping.

PERKY PAJAMA

The romper has appeared as a general play wear style, youthful in gay cottons, more sophisticated in nylon jersey. It is just as perky when used as a summer pajama.

Some rompers are in tailored style, done in checks or stripes. Others are colorfully Mod, with brilliant solid colors like orange with wide bands of white at all edges.

But other rompers come in baby looks, such as Jerry Morton's made entirely of tiers of white Schiffli eyelet ruffles, or in prints interrupted by bands of lace run through with ribbon.

Coat and sleep dress combinations often look made for the patio. Gone are all the fussy lace trims and the icky-poo big sleeves. The coats usually have no sleeves, just slip on over sleep dresses with loose kimono sleeves. The colors are strong, too, and often in bold prints that mingle pink and orange.

New fabric for leisure wear that also goes into the bedroom is terry, made up now in little skimp shifts called T-shirt dresses, in togas to pop over a bikini pajama and in the wrapper, new looking with black bindings defining its casual lines.

New See-Through Fashions Attract Designer Debate

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

Socialites and designers are debating the see-through fashions, with most ladies feeling that they are for private use only.

Designers vary in their opinions, with some rejecting nudity as "merely a gimmick," others saying they'll try some sheer fabrics. Other opinions range from "strictly a gag" to "'lace enough nudity for me."

The idea pops up that women should conceal for allurement, not reveal, and all designers feel that the see-through look has to be handled very carefully or else it quickly becomes cheap.

Spanish Acent In Decorating Invades American Homes

Americans have adopted the Spanish accent in interior design because it has a magic way of adding beauty to a home without conflicting with what is already there.

Our ideas of what Spanish design consists of have been conditioned, naturally enough, by what we have seen in the way of reproductions of the original. Decorators refer to the truly Spanish design and not to mutations that have been derived from Mexico and South America. Many of the reproductions to be found on the American continents were influenced by the missionaries who had elaborate conceptions about architecture perfectly suitable for the church but often not for the home.

The real home on the Iberian Peninsula possesses elegance and is restrained, dignified and restful. It is never ostentatious, interior designers note. Much of what is known as Spanish has been influenced by the Moors who occupied Spain from 711 A. D. until 1492, the same year Columbus discovered America.

BLENDS WELL

Always bearing in mind that tastes vary from province to province in Spain, a typical home has walls of rough white plaster, sometimes combined with tile. Ceilings are flat. They may be made of carved wood, while some are beamed.

The floors are delightfully enticing and add color and design to the room. In ancient Spain they were made in white, beige, red, brown and gold. Today this classic elegance has been handcrafted in solid vinyl tile. Its name is Moda Moresca which means Moorish style. Its attractive embossed surface makes it easy to keep floors clean. Its random look harmonizes with casual as well as formal rooms.

DISTINCTIVE DESIGN

Spanish furniture is usually walnut, often inlaid. Oak is frequently combined with wrought iron in stretchers and bases. Dark finishes are favored. One piece of furniture that is popular is the chest, often covered with leather or velvet. Another is the cabinet, of which the upper section is an ornately painted or lacquered group of drawers and the lower part either a table or cupboard. Brightly colored tapestries and more somber paintings decorate the walls.

Illumination is provided by chandeliers of hoops hung from the ceiling. Lovely crystal chandeliers, wrought iron and bright pottery objects are freely used.

Spanish decorations blend so well with other motifs that home owners can use as much or as little as they please.

MRS. ARNOLD NOLAN

Nolan-Davis Vows Read In Dubach Church

The wedding of Miss Virginia Lynn Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Huey Garland Davis and Arnold Nolan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Nolan, all of Dubach was solemnized Friday, July 15 in New Prospect Baptist Church of Dubach. Rev. Jerry C. Polk performed the double ring vows at 7 p.m.

Centering the altar was a pedestal basket of white and yellow gladioli against a background of tapers in arched candelabra and magnolia foliage.

Music was provided by Miss Sandra Kilgore of Ruston, pianist and Miss Lynell Stewart of Ruston, vocalist.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor length gown of white peau de soie topped with a jacket of Chantilly lace featuring long tapered sleeves. Her fingertip veil of illusion was held in place by a crown of pearls. She carried a bouquet of white daisies and greenery centered with yellow roses.

Wearing gowns of white over yellow bonded lace with long white gloves were matron of honor, Mrs. John K. Jeffcoat, bridesmaid, Miss Onedia Nolan and junior bridesmaid, Miss Cheryl Williams. Their headpieces were illusion veils attached to yellow bows and they carried yellow daisies on white fans.

Donald Nolan of West Monroe served as best man and ushers were John K. Jeffcoat of Bossier City and Bill T. Ray of Shreveport. Gary Green, Ruston was ring bearer.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore a pink lace suit with matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother selected a turquoise ensemble with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

A reception was held following the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents where tall tapers and fans from the attendants' bouquets formed the centerpiece for the bride's table which was covered with white net over taffeta.

After a short wedding trip the couple will be at home in Homer. For going away the bride wore a white and blue suit with a corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Nolan was graduated from Ruston high school and a beauty school in Ruston. A graduate of Dubach high school, Mr. Nolan also graduated from Louisiana Tech.

MR. AND MRS. DALTON WILCHER are pictured at the reception which followed their wedding Friday, July 8 in Winnsboro Church of Christ. The bride is the former Miss Shirley Marie Bowlin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Bowlin of Winnsboro. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Lester L. Wilcher, also of Winnsboro. The couple will be at home in Vicksburg, where Mr. Wilcher is employed.

MRS. RONALD RAY WILSON

Wilson-Alexander Vows Exchanged In Home Setting

Vows uniting in marriage Miss Brenda Carol Alexander of Trona, Calif., and Ronald Ray Wilson, West Monroe, were solemnized Saturday, July 9 in the home of the bride's father, J. C. Alexander on Dumas Road in West Monroe. Her mother is Mrs. Vincent Stankus of Trona. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wilson, West Monroe.

Dr. Clifton R. Tennison performed the double ring vows at 7 p.m. in a setting of branched candelabra holding lighted tapers and baskets of white gladioli and greenery.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a full skirted gown of white crystalline in afternoon length with matching headdress and an orchid corsage.

Mrs. David W. Billingsley, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a gray and beige dress with beige accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Edmond Glenn Hart attended his cousin as best man.

For the occasion Mrs. Stankus was wearing a green lace suit with white accessories and a white carnation corsage. The groom's mother chose a blue suit with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

A reception followed in the home where the bride's table was centered with a bouquet of white carnations. The wedding cake was decorated in yellow and green.

After a short wedding trip the couple will be at home in New Orleans.

Suit Jackets For Winter Are Down, Skirts Stay Up

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) —Suit jackets for fall and winter are going down—and out.

Skirts stay up—at the knee or a hand above the knee. Pleats, gores and flares give the skirts a swinging look.

The forecast of how you'll suit yourself for the new season ahead unfolded as the nation's pace-setting designers showed their newest creations to fashioned scribes in New York for the New York Couture Group's 47th semi-annual fashion press week.

Many jackets are to hip level. Most feature man-tailoring details—shaped shoulderlines, roomy pockets, lapels. Fabrics are hefty enough to provide shelter against winds when the temperature drops.

The bulkiest of the suit tops were in the B. H. Wragge collection. Call them two-piece dresses or suits. The tent-shaped tops, mostly back buttoned, were as loose fitting as a sweatshirt that's five sizes too big.

Tweed and plaids vied for attention with monotones of paintbox-bright colors in most collections. Contrasts were strong, too. The jacket, say, in one color, lapels or sleeves or pockets in contrasting colors.

The double-breasted look abounded with up to six rows of buttons on some jackets. Side and back-buttoning were among the newest. The most popular suit accessory: A colorful scarf.

A large contrasting brown scarf set off the slenderness of an apricot suit in the Monte-Sano and Pruzan collection designed by Jacques Tiffeau. The easy skirt was cut well above the knee. The slightly fitted jacket was hip level.

Highlights of other designer collections:

—Larry Aldrich designer Marie McCarthy did a hacking suit of taupe cavalry twill, with double-vented longer jacket worn over a slim skirt and turtle neck blouse. The vest appeared in a costume of black and white glen plaid. The vest was scarlet. Sweater dresses of jersey were slim and neat.

—Hannah Troy believes in violet, the longer suit jacket, double-faced materials, the return of the wide hem coat, easy little double knit dresses in clear colors, and siren-type evening dresses designed to make other women green with envy. Most spectacular in the collection were the beaded dresses.

—Nat Kaplan A Highland fling was evident in the collection.

The Scotch influence was seen in a plaid pants suit. Red, green and yellow were mixed in a soft anglo wool. The trousers were bell-bottomed. The jacket had the "Carnaby Street" long line. For evening, Kaplan believes white is right.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Mr. and Mrs. Dixie Finley of Olla, of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Sue to Donny Richardson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Richardson of Jena. The wedding will take place on August 12 at 7 p.m. in Standard Baptist Church in Olla.

MISS CAROLYN BUTTS' engagement to Benny Tannehill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Tannehill of Epps is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Butts of Epps. The wedding will be solemnized August 19 at 8 p.m. in the Epps Baptist Church.

Your Problems

Belittling Wife Only Diminishes Herself

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I hope you will print my letter on the chance even one woman will recognize herself and stop belittling her husband.

For almost 50 years my mother has chopped up my father with her razor-sharp tongue. If anyone suggested to my mother that she is being unfaithful she would be furious, but this sort of disloyalty is the cruelest of all.

Doesn't a wife realize that every time she attacks her husband in the presence of family, neighbors or friends she diminishes not him, but herself?

My parents are old now, but my sisters and I still dread to go home. It's heartbreaking to see my mother still ripping into dad — scolding, berating, needling, attacking. He sits in silence, never defending himself, not even bothering to correct her wild exaggerations. What a saint he must be to have taken such abuse for almost quarter of a century!

Put this letter in your own words, Ann, but print it. It could do a lot of good. — TOO CLOSE FOR COMFORT

Dear Too Close: Your words were excellent. And here they are — just as you wrote them. If the shoe fits, ladies — take the shoe off.

Dear Ann: My husband's oldest brother is divorced. When he got out of the army six months ago we let him move into our two-bedroom apartment. He pays one-third of the rent and utilities.

This brother has the morals of a tomcat. He runs around with the worst chippies in town — some of them professionals. It makes me sick that he brings these tramps to our apartment and forces us to sit in the park, or in a movie or coffee shop until after midnight.

My husband says I am being childish and that it is not right to interfere in the life of an adult relative, especially since he is paying part of the rent. What do you say? SPLIT LEVEL WIFE

Dear Split Level: Your husband is right. When you allowed the Tomcat to move in and pay part of your rent it became his place, too.

How did you manage the rent before your brother-in-law came on the scene? Invite the bum to find a place of his own immediately so you and your husband can get back to decent and respectable living.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband parks himself in front of the TV 10 minutes before the game starts to make sure everything is in perfect order. The minute the game begins he turns on the radio. If you haven't heard two announcers screaming at the same time you are lucky. I can't understand one word either of them is saying. My husband insists he understands them both perfectly.

If it's a double-header or a 12-or-13-inning game I have to bring his dinner on a tray. If I utter one word, he shushes me up and says, "Later, dear." I hope the house doesn't start to burn during a game because I couldn't get the message through to him.

How can I make my husband see that he is being selfish and inconsiderate? — MARRIED TO A BASEBALL NUT

Dear Married: You can't — and the sooner you accept the fact, the better.

I can think of worse things than having a husband in the next room listening to and looking at a baseball game. You've got high class worries, Honey.

Too many starry-eyed lovers do not know the difference. Do you? Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Before You Marry — Is It Love Or Sex?", enclosing with your request 20c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of Morning World, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

'Beat' Kick Rocks Fashion For All Ages In Rome Today

By SHELIA WALSH
United Press International

ROME (UPI) — "Beat" clothes have finally found the road to Rome and young and not-so-young Romans are going wild about them.

The beat kick hit the Eternal City some time ago but most of its followers had to rely on their own ingenuity or traveling friends for the appropriate costumes.

Now, the problem has been solved with the opening of the "Piper Market" that has mini-skirts and "ye-ye" styles from all over the world.

The "Piper Market" is easy to spot — it's the only store in Rome with a line in front of the door.

The market has beat music and matching decor but is only big enough to handle about 50 customers at a time without a riot.

So part of the staff has to stand at the door, politely beating back customers lining up at the entrance until others can be whisked out the exit with their purchases.

Inside, teen-agers, a few stunned-looking parents and a smattering of doggedly "with-it" society ladies grapple in the best New York bargain basement manner over piles of exotic shirts, diminutive skirts and shifts, and bell-bottomed pants.

"Show the princess where to try on her mini-skirts," Madaleine Fischer, attractive Swiss manager of the Market shouted over the background music.

The princess, not a teen-ager but uniformed by Courreges and obviously looking ahead, vanished behind the scenes with an armful of brightly colored abbreviated skirts price 3,900 lire ($6.50)

"We may never make money because our prices are so — how do you say it? — cheap. But it is amusing," Miss Fischer said.

She estimated that 500 to 600 customers a day have fought their way into the shop. It is set up supermarket style with a cash desk by the exit.

But there are salespeople — long haired boys and longer haired girls who also model the goods.

Most of the teen-agers have either come to look or be outfitted. A trio of girls in the navy blue pleated skirts and white blouses of a convent school peered wistfully at three-toned short jersey shifts with "Piper" emblazoned on the midriff but left without buying.

Others went in wearing the conservatively stylish clothes of the prosperous Roman and emerged with packages bulging with new beat outfits.

The Market takes its name and some of its backing from the "Piper Club" the sprawling, ultra-modern beat dance palace that has managed in the past year or so to make all the "dolce vita" set look very old hat.

The "Piper Club" is big, the music is loud, up-to-the-minute and incessant. Styles are launched on its multi-level, theatrically lighted dance floors.

Smart Furniture, Plants Transform Outdoor Areas

If you're faced with a bare patio and want to make into an outdoor area perfect for summer living, start by looking indoors for the answer.

Select what you need from inside the house, buy a few of the "extras" and blend them all together.

First of all you'll need something to sit on to survey the problem at leisure. If you have extra sling chairs around the house, bring them outdoors. Their canvas slings are colorful and inexpensive, and the frames are lightweight but sturdy.

Need more seating? Then try some of the wrought iron or wicker furniture. Smart and comfortable, the textures add a summery touch. Make sure they're upholstered in water-repellant fabrics over latex foam rubber. Foam rubber is as comfortable as can be, and durable, too, as well as mildew-proof. Both upholstery fabrics and "innards" should be of weather-resistant materials. Additional seating, with an informal touch, can be supplied with a stack of latex foam rubber throw pillows covered in vinyl.

For the creation of a really relaxing air for your "outdoor living room" there's nothing to compare with the beauty of living plants

Any of your clay-potted house plants will welcome the change from indoors to outdoors for the summer. One way to use them around the patio is by "'plunging." This involves digging a hole and placing the plant, pot included, into the ground with just the rim showing.

The plants will get the necessary interchange of moisture and air through the porous wells of their clay containers. It's best to keep them out of winds and make certain plants that are shade lovers get shade, while those that thrive on light, get sunshine.

Plants may also be placed directly on the patio itself, and look particularly well when "finished" with matching clay saucers. You'll find that the soft earthy tones of the clay go very well with the summery look of casual furniture.

Supplement your indoor house plants with inexpensive flowering plants to liven up your outdoor area with color. Begonias come in an abundance of bright colors, and do well in partial shade. The same holds true for the fuchsia. Popular, colorful, and easy - to - care- for geraniums thrive in the sun, as do petunias and marigolds.

Naturally, all of these ideas are meant to be guidelines, for patios vary with people, from the very elaborate to the starkly simple. But you can make your patio a delightful summer retreat with a little effort and imagination, and some very worthwhile expenditures.

Music Provides Personal Touch As Home Accessory

Music is a personal and tasteful accessory in your home and therefore, it should be given preference in your decorating or redecorating plans. Music is a delight — warm, adds color and is very soothing

It also adds beauty, too, if you choose your stereo system for style as well as performance. There is no reason why phonographic equipment should not be considered and selected as furnishings rather than just as equipment, for the right phonograph can be as pleasing to the eye as it is to the ear.

The four neat units that make-up the entire system (two speakers, a record changer and a tuner - amplifier) are handsomely cabineted in rich walnut, so that homemakers can display them proudly. And with their wall bracket design, they can be used for all types of unusual arrangement.

There is no end to the effects you can create using the "Solar System" as your inspiration for a wall of music in your home.

Some people have mounted record album covers on the wall with the units.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband parks himself in front of the TV 10 minutes before the game starts to make sure everything is in perfect order. The minute the game begins he turns on the radio. If you haven't heard two announcers screaming at the same time you are lucky. I can't understand one word either of them is saying. My husband insists he understands them both perfectly.

If it's a double-header or a 12-or-13-inning game I have to bring his dinner on a tray. If I utter one word, he shushes me up and says, "Later, dear." I hope the house doesn't start to burn during a game because I couldn't get the message through to him.

How can I make my husband see that he is being selfish and inconsiderate? — MARRIED TO A BASEBALL NUT

Dear Married: You can't — and the sooner you accept the fact, the better.

I can think of worse things than having a husband in the next room listening to and looking at a baseball game. You've got high class worries, Honey.

Too many starry-eyed lovers do not know the difference. Do you? Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Before You Marry — Is It Love Or Sex?", enclosing with your request 20c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of Morning World, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

'Beat' Kick Rocks Fashion For All Ages In Rome Today

By SHELIA WALSH
United Press International

ROME (UPI) — "Beat" clothes have finally found the road to Rome and young and not-so-young Romans are going wild about them.

The beat kick hit the Eternal City some time ago but most of its followers had to rely on their own ingenuity or traveling friends for the appropriate costumes.

Now, the problem has been solved with the opening of the "Piper Market" that has mini-skirts and "ye-ye" styles from all over the world.

The "Piper Market" is easy to spot — it's the only store in Rome with a line in front of the door.

The market has beat music and matching decor but is only big enough to handle about 50 customers at a time without a riot.

So part of the staff has to stand at the door, politely beating back customers lining up at the entrance until others can be whisked out the exit with their purchases.

Inside, teen-agers, a few stunned-looking parents and a smattering of doggedly "with-it" society ladies grapple in the best New York bargain basement manner over piles of exotic shirts, diminutive skirts and shifts, and bell-bottomed pants.

"Show the princess where to try on her mini-skirts," Madaleine Fischer, attractive Swiss manager of the Market shouted over the background music.

The princess, not a teen-ager but uniformed by Courreges and obviously looking ahead, vanished behind the scenes with an armful of brightly colored abbreviated skirts — price 3,900 lire ($6.50).

"We may never make money because our prices are so — how do you say it? — cheap. But it is amusing," Miss Fischer said.

She estimated that 500 to 600 customers a day have fought their way into the shop. It is set up supermarket style with a cash desk by the exit.

But there are salespeople — long haired boys and longer haired girls who also model the goods.

Most of the teen-agers have either come to look or be outfitted. A trio of girls in the navy blue pleated skirts and white blouses of a convent school peered wistfully at three-toned short jersey shifts with "Piper" emblazoned on the midriff but left without buying.

Others went in wearing the conservatively stylish clothes of the prosperous Roman and emerged with packages bulging with new beat outfits.

The Market takes its name and some of its backing from the "Piper Club" the sprawling, ultra-modern beat dance palace that has managed in the past year or so to make all the "dolce vita" set look very old hat.

The "Piper Club" is big, the music is loud, up-to-the-minute and incessant. Styles are launched on its multi-level, theatrically lighted dance floors.

Music Provides Personal Touch As Home Accessory

Music is a personal and tasteful accessory in your home and therefore, it should be given preference in your decorating or redecorating plans. Music is a delight — warm, adds color and is very soothing.

It also adds beauty, too, if you choose your stereo system for style as well as performance. There is no reason why phonographic equipment should not be considered and selected as furnishings rather than just as equipment, for the right phonograph can be as pleasing to the eye as it is to the ear.

The four neat units that make-up the entire system (two speakers, a record changer and a tuner - amplifier) are handsomely cabineted in rich walnut, so that homemakers can display them proudly. And with their wall bracket design, they can be used for all types of unusual arrangement.

There is no end to the effects you can create using the "Solar System" as your inspiration for a wall of music in your home.

Some people have mounted record album covers on the wall with the units.

Smart Furniture, Plants Transform Outdoor Areas

If you're faced with a bare patio and want to make into an outdoor area perfect for summer living, start by looking indoors for the answer.

Select what you need from inside the house, buy a few of the "extras" and blend them all together.

First of all you'll need something to sit on to survey the problem at leisure. If you have extra sling chairs around the house, bring them outdoors. Their canvas slings are colorful and inexpensive, and the frames are lightweight but sturdy.

Need more seating? Then try some of the wrought iron or wicker furniture. Smart and comfortable, the textures add a summery touch. Make sure they're upholstered in water-repellant fabrics over latex foam rubber. Foam rubber is as comfortable as can be, and durable, too, as well as mildew-proof. Both upholstery fabrics and "innards" should be of weather-resistant materials. Additional seating, with an informal touch, can be supplied with a stack of latex foam rubber throw pillows covered in vinyl.

For the creation of a really relaxing air for your "outdoor living room" there's nothing to compare with the beauty of living plants.

Any of your clay-potted house plants will welcome the change from indoors to outdoors for the summer. One way to use them around the patio is by "'plunging." This involves digging a hole and placing the plant, pot included, into the ground with just the rim showing.

The plants will get the necessary interchange of moisture and air through the porous wells of their clay containers. It's best to keep them out of winds and make certain plants that are shade lovers get shade, while those that thrive on light, get sunshine.

Plants may also be placed directly on the patio itself, and look particularly well when "finished" with matching clay saucers. You'll find that the soft earthy tones of the clay go very well with the summery look of casual furniture.

Supplement your indoor house plants with inexpensive flowering plants to liven up your outdoor area with color. Begonias come in an abundance of bright colors, and do well in partial shade. The same holds true for the fuchsia. Popular, colorful, and easy - to - care- for geraniums thrive in the sun, as do petunias and marigolds.

Naturally, all of these ideas are meant to be guidelines, for patios vary with people, from the very elaborate to the starkly simple. But you can make your patio a delightful summer retreat with a little effort and imagination, and some very worthwhile expenditures.

Chicago's West Side Is Tough Place For Anyone

CHICAGO (AP) — It's tough for an outsider, even a Negro, to blend into Chicago's troubled West Side.

And a tour of the area is a little frightening, especially for a stranger.

A suit, tie, and white shirt are a giveaway. Shades (dark glasses), pointed toed shoes, and some degree of "cool" help but aren't a sure passport into the area.

An outsider is an outsider and the residents know it.

The West Side is a slum. More than 300,000 Negroes are packed into an area bounded by Canal Street (400 West), Cicero Avenue (4800 West), Kinzie Street (400 North), and Cermak Road (2200 South).

The residents live in the midst of street gangs, petty thieves and broken families — a street corner society.

The unemployment rate is probably higher than 25 per cent, while the national average is around 4 per cent.

Many of the people are chronically unemployed, lacking any kind of useable job skills. Some can't read or write.

The teenagers are smart. They know that to survive street life it is necessary to join the gangs.

At least two big gangs, the Vice Lords and the Roman Saints, have divided the West Side among themselves.

Other gangs include the Disciples and the Blackstone Rangers.

It is an area in which one of the rioters was trying to peddle apparently "hot" suits while discussing the looting.

Some of the older people deplore the acts of violence but can't reach the youngsters.

The youngsters learn early in life that almost anyone "is out to beat you for your dough."

Broken glass and paper are scattered in the streets and sidewalks.

Windows on the stores that were broken into and looted are boarded with plywood.

Lonely women who know that with their bodies they can get attention from the men walk the streets and sit on the porch steps — "you got to use what you got."

The people are very much aware of unscrupulous merchants, of merchandise and food costing more than they believe it ought to, of merchants who say they "don't give a damn about the residents of the area."

The only recreation the youngsters have is running in the streets and alleys, of opening fire plugs to play in the water to cool off —all of which is repulsive to persons who live in neat neighborhoods and have standards that approach the middle class ideal.

On hot, lazy evenings the residents come out of their hot apartments and sit on the porches. Some sit on the concrete steps, some put newspapers under them.

The women wear worn house dresses, the men sports clothes.

The people are polite but wary of strangers. They offered seats to this reporter and the two young men with him. They shook hands in a friendly way.

The "diddy bops" in the streets have processed hair and wear tight-fitting pants. A few have brimmed hats perched on their heads.

Many of the men and some of the women wear "shades."

A young woman who was sitting on a porch not far from where the National Guard troops debarked from their trucks ran to the corner to see the "fine" soldiers.

She said, "I'm looking O.K except that I haven't pressed my hair."

When the Guard moved in and a helicopter flew overhead, she said, "I know how the people (Vietnamese) must feel in the war." Besieged, Embattled.

CONSOLIDATION

Cities Service Oil Company has consolidated it's Shreveport Marketing Division Office into a regional office in Atlanta, Georgia.

The company's former division offices in Atlanta, Georgia, Charlotte, North Carolina, Birmingham, Alabama, and Miami, Florida will be combined with Shreveport in this newly established regional office.

Named to head this newly established regional office for the southeastern division will be Robert C. Moore. Moore was reared in Monroe, graduated from Ouachita Parish High School and is a graduate of the engineering department of Louisiana Polytechnic Institute. He is married to the former Catherine Causey of Pine Bluff, Ark. and is the father of four children. He is the son of Lillian Moore Folds, 2607 Swiss, West Monroe and the late John Clark Moore of Bastrop.

MOORE

Moore has been with the company for the past 16 years and has been division manager in Miami, Fla. for the past year. He and his family will reside in Atlanta, Ga.

TO ATTEND MEET

Three representatives of the Prudential Insurance Company branch office in Monroe will attend the company's regional business conference at Mackinac Island, Mich., July 20-23 in the Grand Hotel. The conference is designed to provide instruction in specialized insurance subjects.

Those attending from the Monroe branch office will be Hays B. Clark Jr., division manager in charge of the office; Billy E. Bayles of West Monroe and J. Arthur Smith Jr., C.L.U., special agent.

GENERAL MANAGER

James B. Powers has been appointed general manager of The Merchants Company, President W. W. Wright announced. He will succeed Wright, who will continue as president of the company.

POWERS

Powers, who has been with the company since 1947, will be in charge of all company operations, which includes Pine Burr Meat Packing Company and Forrest Farms Poultry Operations (both processing and producing), located in Hattiesburg, Miss.; Valley Mills, Vicksburg Terminal Elevators, and Vicksburg Transhippers, all located in Vicksburg, Miss.; and the company's wholesale distributing warehouses located in Hattiesburg, Jackson, Gulfport and Vicksburg, Miss., and Monroe and Bogalusa, La.

The company has been in business since 1904, and operates extensively in Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, Arkansas and in foreign export business. The company employs over 750 people and has annual sales of $45,000,000.

LOCATION MANAGER

Charles H. Delk, who has been assigned to the Schlumberger Well Services Louisiana Coast Division in Lafayette, has been promoted to location manager here, according to F. L. Bryan, of Houston, vice president, operations.

A native of Columbus, Miss., Delk was graduated from high school in Columbus and holds a degree in electrical engineering from Auburn University. He is the son of O. H. Delk, 116 Brown, Columbus.

Delk has served with the U.S. Navy and is active in the American Institute of Mining Engineers.

He is married to the former Rose Itary of Oakdale, La. They have two children, David and Dana. The family was active in the Amanual Baptist Church in Lafayette.

NAMED INKEEPER

Bob G. Holeyfield, former manager of the Virginia Hotel here, has been named innkeeper of the Holiday Inn in Amarillo, Tex.

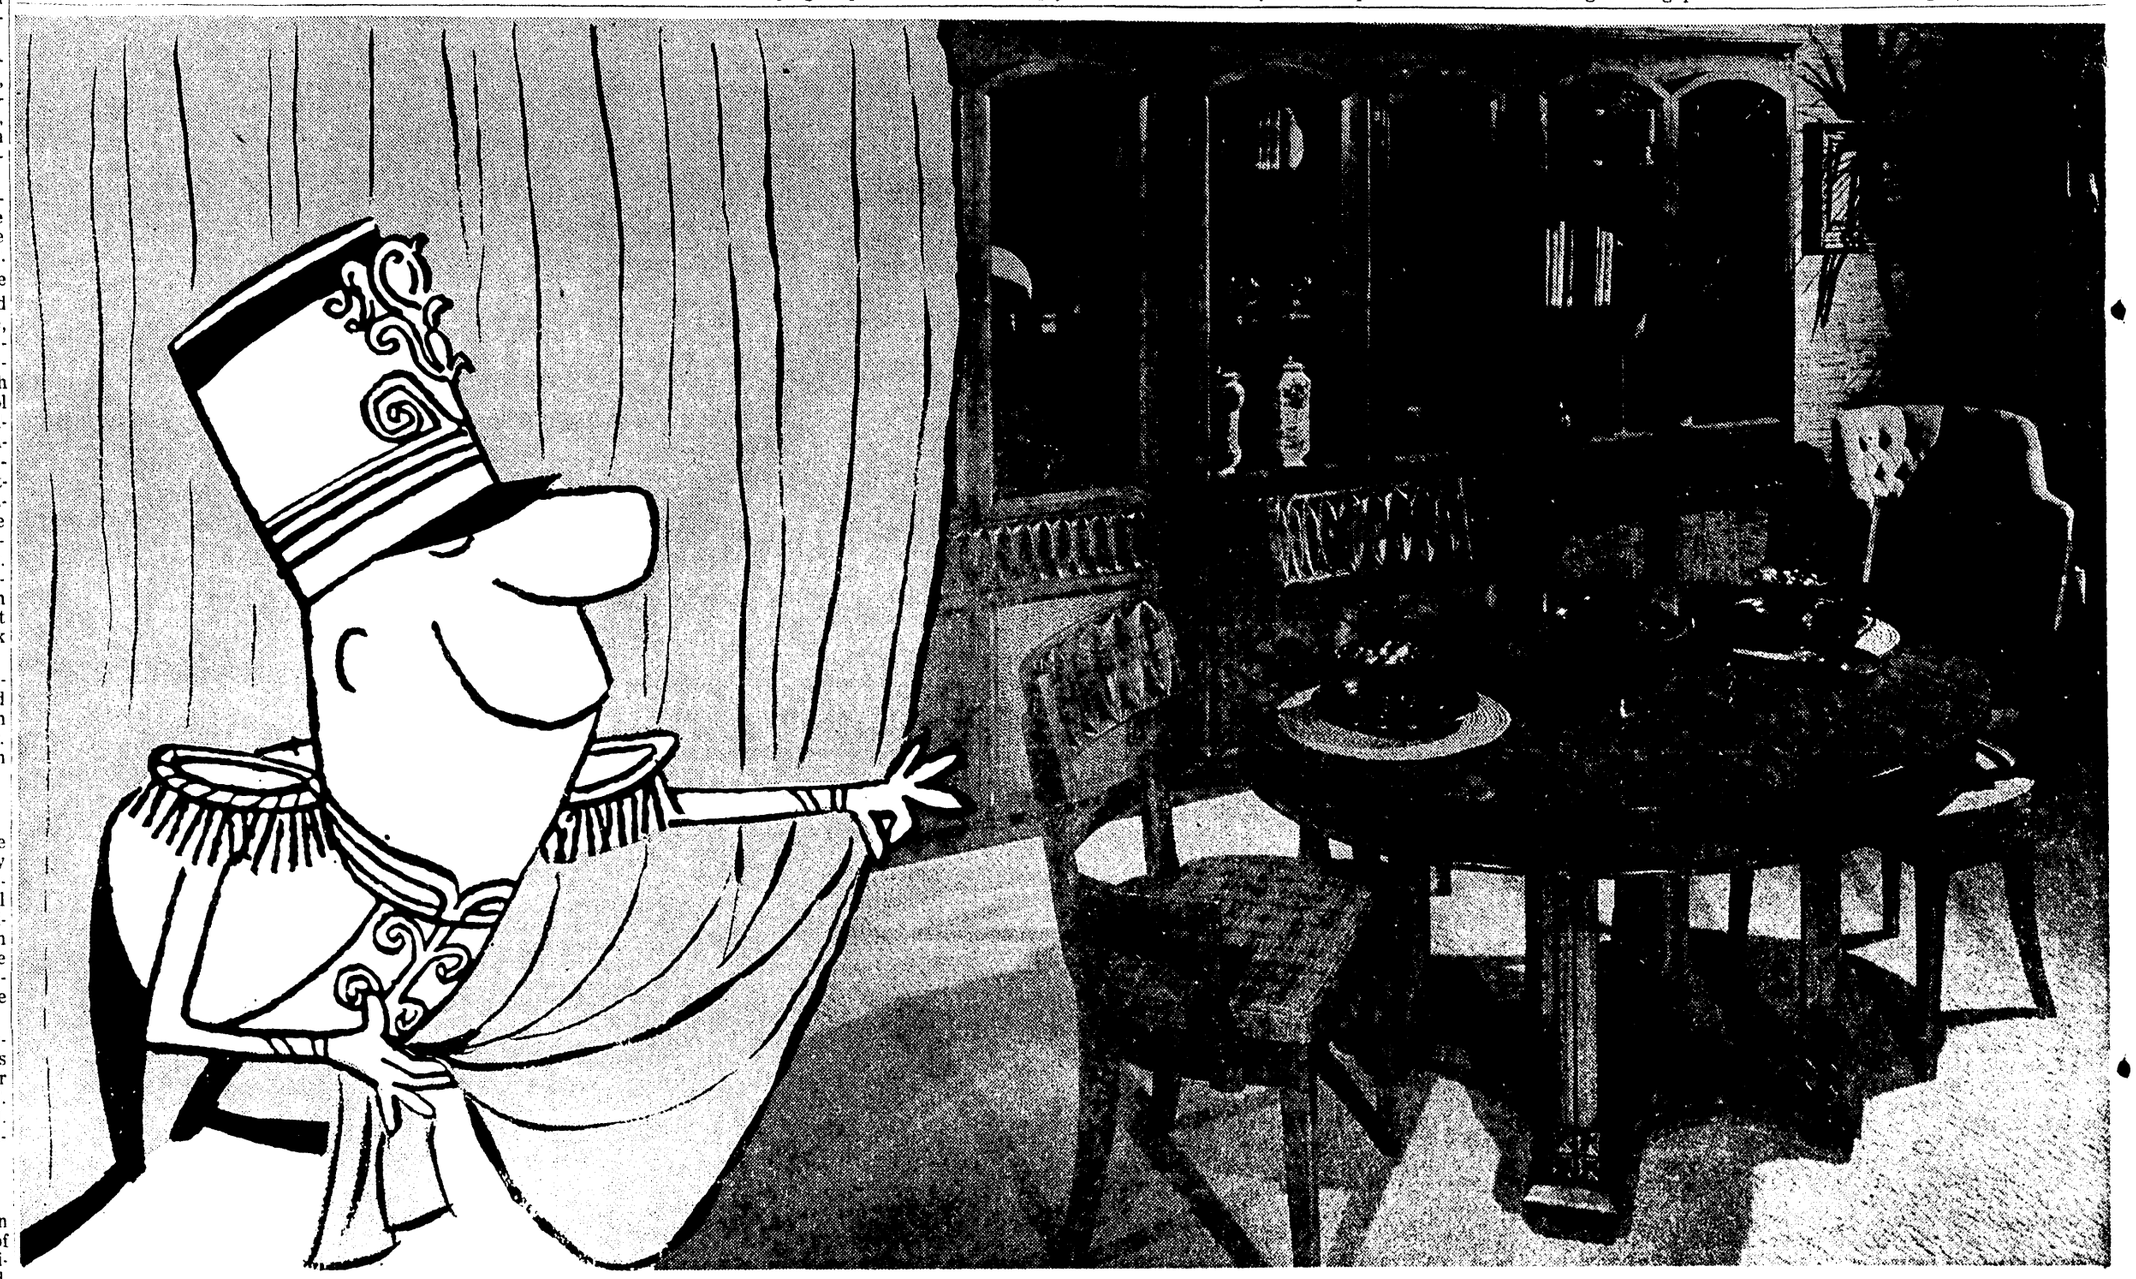

Holeyfield has been associated with the Captain Shreve Hotel, Shreveport; the Capitol House Hotel, Baton Rouge; and the Holiday Inn, Las Cruces, N. M.

He has served as vice-chairman of the Shreveport Convention and Tourist Bureau and as sergeant-at-arms of the Louisiana Hotel-Motel Association.

INSURANCE GRADUATE

Steven Bonnell Wallace, 1606 Island Dr., graduated from a multiple line insurance course at the Education Center of The Travelers Insurance Companies, Hartford, Conn. This advanced course helps prepare the insurance agent to provide a complete insurance program for a family or a business.

Wallace, who attended Louisiana Tech, is an agent with the McCleary Insurance Agency, Ouachita National Bank Building.

MRS. INDIRA GANDHI, prime minister of India, is escorted to plane in Moscow Saturday by Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin as spectators wave Indian and Soviet flags. The Soviets promised India economic development loans, but rejected Mrs. Gandhi's proposal to call a Vietnamese peace conference. (AP Wirephoto by cable from Moscow)

Soviet Union Promises Loan Of Billion Dollars To India

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union, after turning a cold shoulder on Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Vietnamese peace suggestions, promised economic devleopment loans to India Saturday worth about a billion dollars over the next five years.

This is roughly equal to the amount of economic aid which the Kremlin already has provided to the big South Asian exponent of nonalignment. The Soviet Union also sells weapons to India at low prices.

Up to now, U.S. aid to India, much of it nonrepayable, has been worth about $6 billion. But Soviet aid projects have been eye-catching ones in India.

Mrs. Gandhi disclosed the value of the new Soviet-aid promises to reporters just before flying home to New Delhi after a four-day visit. She left just an hour before the arrival of Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain, who is not expected to get far on Vietnamese peace, either.

Indian sources said most of Mrs. Gandhi's talks with Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin had been devoted to international problems, sepecially Viet Nam. Kosygin rejected her proposal to call a Vietnamese peace conference because, he said, Hanoi had not asked for one.

Informants said that, contrary to expectations in India, the Soviet Union did not seek from Mrs. Gandhi assurances that her internal economic policies would remain Socialistic. The Kremlin had been reported worried about recent moves by the Indian government to increase production by encouraging some free enterprise.

Talking separately with reporters, Kosygin said his talks with Mrs. Gandhi "have reinforced the conviction that India will strengthen its public sector" of government-owned industry.

"Our cooperation with India proceeds through the public sector," Kosygin added.

He listed some major Indian projects due to get Soviet aid. He began with a new steel plant at Bokharo, northwest of Calcutta.

The United States discussed with India for several years helping build the Bokharo plant for the Indian government. Talks broke down in 1964 over U.S. insistence on tight quality controls on the work and some private participation. Then the Soviet Union, which had built a steel plant at Bhilai in India and got a lot of publicity out of it, moved in.

It took over Bokharo—establishing its own tight controls and raising the price more than India had expected. Bokharo gave the Soviet Union another "impact project" to display its aid.

There have long been complaints in Washington that U.S. aid to India has gone into vital but largely invisible things like keeping people fed and supplying industry with spare parts.

Indictment Against 8 Announced

CAIRO (AP) — The Egyptian prosecutor-general Saturday issued an indictment naming eight alleged members of the Moslem Brotherhood who were said to have renewed attempts to assassinate President Gamal Abdel Nasser and other top leaders to overthrow the regime.

Three were charged with conspiring to overthrow the government and kill its leaders. The other five were accused of trying to revive the activities of the disbanded terrorist organization.

The indictment demanded life imprisonment for the first three defendants and three years imprisonment for the others.

Cooperation Of Catholics Is Assured

GENEVA (UPI) — A high Vatican official told Protestant churchmen Saturday that Roman Catholics are willing to cooperate in broad areas to help deal with social problems of the modern world.

The major address by Msgr. Charles Moeller to the World Council of Churches (WCC) social conference represented a significant declaration of the Vatican's willingness to collaborate in inter-faith dealings.

Msgr. Moeller, undersecretary of the Holy Office and a professor of theology at the University of Louvain, is one of eight official Vatican observer-delegates attending the worldwide Protestant gathering.

The Roman Catholic churchman predicted that two new Vatican organizations—a secretariat for the laity and a secretariat for problems of international peace—will be given "every advantage for the closest cooperation" with Protestant groups.

Church Sets Homecoming

Homecoming will be observed Sunday, July 24 at Calvary Baptist Church, 812 Mississippi St., Monroe, it was announced by the Rev. L. L. Morris, pastor.

The minister said that the objective is to have as many former members and pastors of the church, as well as friends of the congregation, to attend the event. Morning services will start at 11 o'clock, and will be followed by dinner on the grounds at the Baptist Children's Home park on DeSiard.

The church was organized in 1921.

Revival Slated

The Cartwright Baptist Church between Eros and Calhoun, will open a revival today at the 11 a.m. services. The meetings will continue nightly at 7:30 through Sunday, July 24, with the Rev. George Womack of Monroe serving as evangelist. Rev. Womack until recently was pastor of Pine Grove Baptist Church of Monroe. Rev. Frank Smith is pastor of the church, and will serve as song director for the services. Mrs. George Womack will be pianist.

Soviet Union Promises Loan Of Billion Dollars To India

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union, after turning a cold shoulder on Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Vietnamese peace suggestions, promised economic devleopment loans to India Saturday worth about a billion dollars over the next five years.

This is roughly equal to the amount of economic aid which the Kremlin already has provided to the big South Asian exponent of nonalignment. The Soviet Union also sells weapons to India at low prices.

Up to now, U.S. aid to India, much of it nonrepayable, has been worth about $6 billion. But Soviet aid projects have been eye-catching ones in India.

Mrs. Gandhi disclosed the value of the new Soviet-aid promises to reporters just before flying home to New Delhi after a four-day visit. She left just an hour before the arrival of Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain, who is not expected to get far on Vietnamese peace, either.

Indian sources said most of Mrs. Gandhi's talks with Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin had been devoted to international problems, sepecially Viet Nam. Kosygin rejected her proposal to call a Vietnamese peace conference because, he said, Hanoi had not asked for one.

Informants said that, contrary to expectations in India, the Soviet Union did not seek from Mrs. Gandhi assurances that her internal economic policies would remain Socialistic. The Kremlin had been reported worried about recent moves by the Indian government to increase production by encouraging some free enterprise.

Talking separately with reporters, Kosygin said his talks with Mrs. Gandhi "have reinforced the conviction that India will strengthen its public sector" of government-owned industry.

"Our cooperation with India proceeds through the public sector," Kosygin added.

He listed some major Indian projects due to get Soviet aid. He began with a new steel plant at Bokharo, northwest of Calcutta.

The United States discussed with India for several years helping build the Bokharo plant for the Indian government. Talks broke down in 1964 over U.S. insistence on tight quality controls on the work and some private participation. Then the Soviet Union, which had built a steel plant at Bhilai in India and got a lot of publicity out of it, moved in.

It took over Bokharo—establishing its own tight controls and raising the price more than India had expected. Bokharo gave the Soviet Union another "impact project" to display its aid.

There have long been complaints in Washington that U.S. aid to India has gone into vital but largely invisible things like keeping people fed and supplying industry with spare parts.

Cooperation Of Catholics Is Assured

GENEVA (UPI) — A high Vatican official told Protestant churchmen Saturday that Roman Catholics are willing to cooperate in broad areas to help deal with social problems of the modern world.

The major address by Msgr. Charles Moeller to the World Council of Churches (WCC) social conference represented a significant declaration of the Vatican's willingness to collaborate in inter-faith dealings.

Msgr. Moeller, undersecretary of the Holy Office and a professor of theology at the University of Louvain, is one of eight official Vatican observer-delegates attending the worldwide Protestant gathering.

The Roman Catholic churchman predicted that two new Vatican organizations—a secretariat for the laity and a secretariat for problems of international peace—will be given "every advantage for the closest cooperation" with Protestant groups.

Church Sets Homecoming

Homecoming will be observed Sunday, July 24 at Calvary Baptist Church, 812 Mississippi St., Monroe, it was announced by the Rev. L. L. Morris, pastor.

The minister said that the objective is to have as many former members and pastors of the church, as well as friends of the congregation, to attend the event. Morning services will start at 11 o'clock, and will be followed by dinner on the grounds at the Baptist Children's Home park on DeSiard.

The church was organized in 1921.

Revival Slated

The Cartwright Baptist Church between Eros and Calhoun, will open a revival today at the 11 a.m. services. The meetings will continue nightly at 7:30 through Sunday, July 24, with the Rev. George Womack of Monroe serving as evangelist. Rev. Womack until recently was pastor of Pine Grove Baptist Church of Monroe. Rev. Frank Smith is pastor of the church, and will serve as song director for the services. Mrs. George Womack will be pianist.

Indictment Against 8 Announced

CAIRO (AP) — The Egyptian prosecutor-general Saturday issued an indictment naming eight alleged members of the Moslem Brotherhood who were said to have renewed attempts to assassinate President Gamal Abdel Nasser and other top leaders to overthrow the regime.

Three were charged with conspiring to overthrow the government and kill its leaders. The other five were accused of trying to revive the activities of the disbanded terrorist organization.

The indictment demanded life imprisonment for the first three defendants and three years imprisonment for the others.

THERE'S A KIND of elegant Colonial charm about this three-bedroom, two-story house, with the rectangular appearance of the basic structure given added width by flanking wings, one of which masks a trellised terrace.

FLOOR PLANS: A simple but practical room arrangement on both floors keeps construction costs from soaring, but lower and upper terraces, porch and deck provide plenty of extra space for outdoor living; note front-to-rear living room and master bedroom.

Wings Add Width To Modest Colonial Design Residence

By ANDY LANG

Thers is some merit to having a house that appears to be larger than it really is.

For one thing, it is more imposing to the eye. For another, construction costs generally are lower in a house with less habitable area even though the structure may seem quite sizable.

A full study of this architect - designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan G-45.

This latest House of the Week, authentically Colonial, appears big because of the manner in which architect Rudolph A. Matern has designed its flanking wings. But the basic house covers only 869 square feet of ground. Also, the shape of this livable portion is a simple rectangle. And the plan is very straightforward, with the two main interior - bearing partitions on both floors running straight through front to rear and directly over one another. The two upstairs baths also are directly over the first floor lavatory. All these factors help to cut costs.

SIMPLE EXPEDIENT

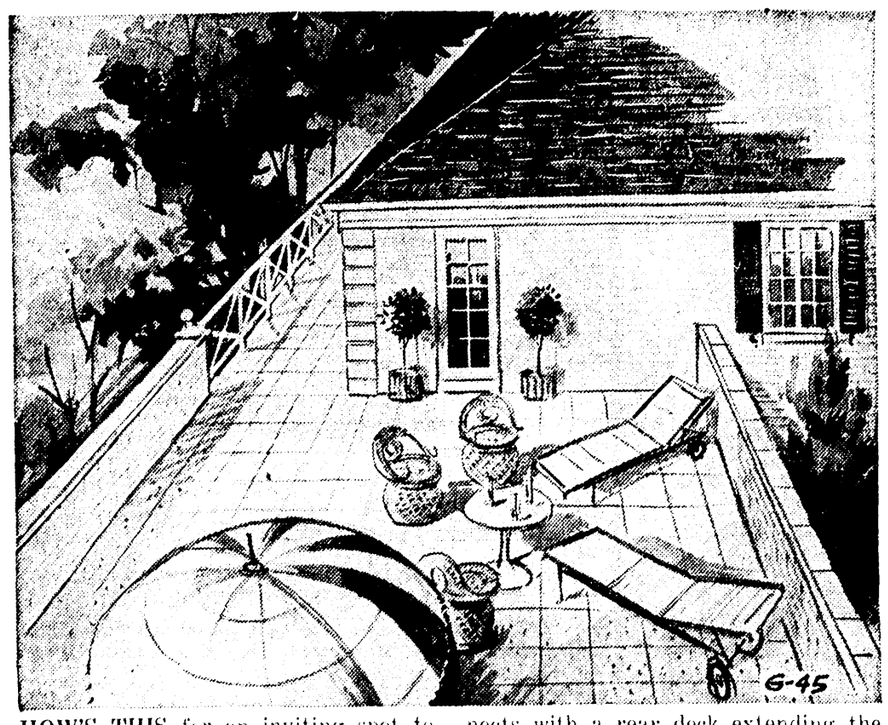

By the simple expedient of placing the two-car garage on one side of the house as a separate wing and locating the doors at the side — and by having a similar wing on the other side — the apparent habitable size of the house increases to a grand proportion. Actually, it isn't really a wing on the right side, but a wall with a short return to give privacy to a trellised terrace. A widow in the wall creates the necessary illusion.

Inside the formal front entrance is a 9 by 12-foot foyer. As in the Colonial period, the living and the dining rooms are on either side of the foyer. For a modest-sized house, the living room can be considered large, having a length of 23' 4". The design of a full front-to-rear room, with widows on both ends and at the side, has always been popular. There is access to the terrace at the rear of the room. A centrally-located fireplace is another feature, with the chimney also serving a barbecue on the terrace.

The kitchen is well laid out, with a curved seating arrangement and table in one corner for breakfast. To the right of the kitchen is a rear service area, which includes a lavatory, closets and a door to a porch. The porch design serves a four-fold purpose: it weather-protects the rear door; gives cover from garage to house; has a flat roof which is the deck space at the second-floor level; and has wooden rails and posts to enhance the rear facade.

One of the most fascinating parts of this house is the roof. It is 19' by 20' and so will accomodate family and friends. Yet it can be reached through the master bedroom, which gives it an extra use as a private outdoor area for the principals. The long deck along the rear connects with the roof terrace. The master bedroom has its own bath and plenty of closet space. All three bedrooms have cross ventilation.

Brick veneer is used all around the house to make it almost maintenance - free. Slate shingles cover the roof. A glance at the artist's rendering will show Design G-45 to have an elegance seldom seen in modern houses.

HOW'S THIS for an inviting spot to relax? It's an attractively - designed terrace atop a two - garage and connects with a rear deck extending the full width of the house.

Backyard Fountain At Low Cost

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

If you have yearned for a fountain in your backyard, you can set one up yourself if you have as little as $20, a few materials and muscles.

There are now an estimated 500,000 display fountains in this country's private gardens or yards, up from 10,000 in 1960, according to one report.

The boom is attributed largely to sharply reduced costs. And the fountain fancy has been influenced by the magnificent water displays at the World's Fair in New York and by increased travel to Europe.

A Dallas, Tex., company has patented a recirculating nugget pump that stands 3½ inches high. The pump, with brochure, is being sold by department stores as part of a do-it-yourself kit for $20.

Most of today's fountains are of the so-called jet stream type in which water rises from water. With the underwater nugget pump, water is recirculated, an important factor in water-short areas.

The tiny pump not only is unobtrusive, but it leaves no traces of oil, a troublesome problem in some fountains. It has a thermal overload protector that shuts off the motor if it becomes too hot.

An attractive new ivy is gold band. It may be started indoors in pots, then transplanted outdoors for ground cover when the soil is warm.

Garden Center Notes

Designs Whet Appetites

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

Now is the time that the vegetable garden is a popular place to gather materials for our artistic designs. If you are not fortunate in having a vegetable garden, you can always visit the neighborhood market to select the interesting vegetables and fruits that can be used in very attractive designs.

Mrs. Gladys Kulcke, member of College Height's and Monroe Garden Club, demonstrated the use of colorful vegetables in two designs on last Wednesday's program for Fifth District Garden Center. One of the designs, containing eggplant, green tomatoes, red cabbage leaves, and loquat foliage, was made on a round wooden tray. Mrs. Kulcke, very talented in the art of flower arranging, explained that her selection of materials was mainly to show how to use vegetables when flowers become scarce.

Now is the in - between time when we seem to search for blooms in the garden. Then, too, the vegetables will hold up much longer now during the warm days of summer — thus giving the long-lasting design suitable for patio or den, and even the party table, if combined with foliage that is suitable in color and texture.

INTERESTING TEXTURE

The loquat leaves, interesting in texture, served as the basic line for the small stemmed green tomatoes, followed with the large egg plant for focal interest. A row of bell peppers (picked with wooden florist picks) formed the secondary line. For a colorful background, the red cabbage leaves were used, giving a pleasing contrast of color. One deep red-brown avocado added interest in the lower part of the design. This colorful design created a lot of interest after the program. Many admirers came to the center for a close look. The expression, "Looks good enough to eat," came from almost everyone who came by the center. My answer for this is that it is indeed good enough to eat. The vegetables are not harmed one bit when used in a design of this type. After several days use in a design we can certainly turn to them for our table use, other than esthetic beauty in design. We can certainly eat them. It is never wise to cut the vegetables for use in design. This is prohibited in flower show work and will be counted off by the judges if this is done.

From one of our valuable books on this subject by Emma H. Cyphers, "Fruit and Vegetable Arrangements," we learn that fruits and vegetables have been used through the centuries in decorative expressions. The tendrils of the grapevine inspired the first artistic scratches on rock during the Stone Age. When the harvest was gathered this gave reason to celebrate. In the early centuries, there were altars to the onion, the radish, and the cabbage with rites in honor of the gods.

SYMBOLISM

Symbolism of fruits influenced by the carvings and paintings in the early Christian churches is used today in our contemporary designs. In the 15th century, Andrea Della Robbia became noted for his enameled ceramics featuring fruits and pine cones. This style design bears his name today and many of us feature this type wreath at Christmas and other festive occasions with great pride. The pyramid type arrangement of fruits and vegetables can be traced back to the 17th century as a table design.

For her second design, Mrs. Kulcke used a wooden base, irregular form, as a container for a grouping of cucumbers and yellow squash (picked with wooden florists picks) to one side on the base. A needle holder served as the basic holder for the vegetables. The wooden picks will pick into the holder.

For line material she used two stems of sansavera (mother-in-law tongue). One large bell pepper served as the focal interest. Small ivy was placed around the picks to conceal them from view and create a pleasing contrast of form as a filler. For an accessory, two large white onions, placed on the opposite side of the base, anchored with clay, added interest and harmonized in the rounded forms that dominated the design.

The texture, color, and forms of the vegetables offer a fabulous supply of materials and ideas for table decorations. We should utilize them whenever possible. We can be sure to have a unique design, filled with individual interpretation. Try your hand and see how attractive your design will be next time you need something different.

Wednesday, Mrs. Wiley Moseley will be our special guest. A treat is in store for you.

Foliage Plants Brighten Shade

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

When azaleas and camellias became popular some 20 years ago, we filled our yards and gardens and then the woods with them. They are dazzling when they are in bloom, but then such large plantings leave us in a somewhat monotonous, flowerless landscape for the rest of the year, a condition entirely unnecessary.

There are innumerable plants with beautiful and colorful foliage and there are many shade and semi - shade lovers which will bring flowers into planting of azaleas and camellias. Most of these woodland plants like a mulch of leaves and the same conditions which are favored by rhododendrons, camellias and azaleas.

HOSTAS PLANTS

At this time of the year, one thinks of the hostas, only one of which is common in southern gardens, but there are many kinds now in catalogues. These gorgeous foliage plants come in many forms, with shades of yellow in stripes and with silvery edgings. They crowd out weeds and thrive in almost dense shade. While their foliage is beautiful enough, they also send up lily-shaped flowers in summer when flowers are badly needed in the shade.

Of course, all of our native woodland flowers like the shade, and they can be used in hundreds as a ground cover in the leaves around camellias. Bloodroot, iris cristata, wild ginger, trailing arbutus, spring beauties, the summer blooming cohosh, hepaticas, and a long list of wild flowers love the woods. They can be grown right at the feet of camellias to good advantage.

To bring real color and excitement into woodland shrub plantings in late summer and early Autumn, one needs only to plant large masses of our common red spiderlilies, the yellow sternbergias, the large flowered colchicums and the true fall crocuses. All of these will put on a show second only to the azaleas for color at a time when nothing much is blooming.

SUMMER SHOW

If you wish to stage a real summertime show, you can plant from a dozen to a hundred of the big pink spiderlilies right now to bloom by or during August. These bulbs are available from seed stores and bulb companies. They like ordinary conditions suitable to daffodils .. . a soil well tilled and to which bone meal has been added. The flowers will show up sooner if you soak the bulbs overnight before planting them.

Colchicums will follow the pink spiderlilies (lycoris squamigera) some time in August or early September. There are numerous varieties of colchicums but get hold of any kinds available. Overlapping with them will come the yellow sternbergias and then the big show of red spiderlilies. When spiderlilies bloom, you will think the azaleas are in flower again!

Doors Basis For Many Projects

AP Newsfeatures

A door provides a means of access. It is opened and closed. It is operated while in a vertical position.

All of these things are not necessarily so. If it's a flush door, which is completely lacking in trim, it can serve quite a few purposes that have nothing to do with swinging on hinges. Its very absence of paneling and molding makes it ideal as a horizontal, smooth, fixed surface.

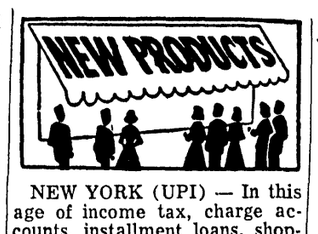

The unhandiest of handymen can produce a simple but practical and eye-pleasing coffee table merely by purchasing a flush door and ready-made legs of the kind that screw into baseplates. These baseplates are attached to the underside of the door - table with screws. The legs, which come in a variety of styles and sizes, have threaded tops which are inserted into the plates by turning in a clockwise direction. Give the door a clear finish and you have a coffee table that will fit in with any decor, especially if you select a wood that harmonizes with the rest of your furniture.

By placing longer legs on the door, you can similarly make a dining table. It can be used regularly for that purpose or, because the legs can be so easily detached, used only when you have a houseful of company and need an emergency dining table. In the latter case, the legless door can be conveniently stored for use at another time.

Flush doors also make excellent work surfaces for many endeavors, among them laying out patterns. And they are good for various types of games and as a foundation for train tracks when the use of the floor isn't practical.

ANOTHER USE

Still another use for a flush door is as a base for a sofa. In addition to the door, you will need a latex foam rubber mattress, slipcovers and a set of six sturdy legs. A 7-foot door will serve the purpose. One leg should be attached in each corner, and one in the middle on each side. The slip-covered mattress is then placed on the platform. There are many variations of this. Pincore foam, sold in thicknesses up to 6-inches, can be used instead of a finished mattress.

NEW YORK (UPI) — In this age of income tax, charge accounts, installment loans, shop-by-mail, pay-by-mail, it's never too soon to learn the essentials of personal finance.

And no better way for youngsters to learn about budgets, bookkeeping and banking than through a novel plan developed by a father when his elder daughter, off at college, had trouble keeping accounts straight. The Chek-A-Lowance kit, designed for children of 8 to 15, includes deposit slips, checks, cash vouchers, an accounts book and statements of account. With a parent acting as adviser and banker, the youngster draws up an allowance budget for the year, covering such items as recreation, school supplies, scout dues, Christmas money, perhaps a portion of clothing expenditures. Allowance vouchers, received each week instead of cash, are deposited in the "bank" and the child writes checks payable by any member of the family. Monthly statements by the "banker" keep everything in order.

Hungry for a bacon and tomato sandwich but hate the thought of the fuss — cooking, draining, pan washing, all for a couple of slices of bacon? Try the new pre-broiled, foil-packed gourmet bacon. Just slip the neat packet in your toaster, heat for one minute — and eat.

Sad, but true, if you don't tie it down somebody's likely to walk off with it: bicycle, skis, outboard motor, what-have-you. The tying-down is made simple by a new type of lock in which a yard of flexible steel aircraft cable, vinyl-encased, replaces the shackle in a key-operated lock. Use it, too, to secure power tools such as lawn mowers and snow blowers, baby carriages, ladders and fence gates, to lock luggage to a car-top carrier.

People really do collect butterflies — and for the serious hobbyist there's a new zippered, chrome-plated net, constructed from the steel shaft of a golf club. The zipper-fitted, detachable bag can be replaced in seconds with accessory bags designed for sampling water insects, plankton and other marine life.

There's a brush for any purpose in a new line — a shoe polish dauber with bristles on both sides for different color polishes; a lint brush which combines bristles and a roller of sticky tape to remove really stubborn lint; a matched set of dish washing and pan scouring brushes — one with white plastic bristles the other with crimped brass bristles for heavier duty; a long-handle dust brush and dustpan which snap together for easy storage.

A new lounge chair provides most of the benefits of a professional massage, thanks to a unique combination of roller mechanism and pulsating cyclo-massage action. The combination, it is claimed, results in a kneading, penetrating massage from neck to base of spine. The chair adjusts from an erect seating position to a three-quarter reclining point, and includes an adjustable leg and foot rest, both with cyclo-massage units. Available in a wide variety of fabric, nauga-hyde vinyl upholstery.

Diseases Of Plants Are Costly

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

You may not think about it in your little garden, but plant disease epidemics cost Americans about $5 billion each year.

A South African plant specialist, Dr. James E. van der Plank, speaking at a world workshop recently at Pennsylvania State University, said a plant disease takes on epidemic form when it attacks whole populations of plants.

The disease may devastate large areas where huge plantings of crops grow side by side. Once started, the epidemic sweeps through closely planted fields, said Dr. van der Plank, who is chief of the Plant Protection Research Institute in the South African Department of Agriculture.

He explained that the intensity of an epidemic depends on "a disease triangle" involving the host (plant) the pathogen (viruses, bacteria or fungi) and the environment.

CHANGE FACTOR

A change in any of the three can make an epidemic worse or halt it. Plant pathologists try to alter either the environment or the host to control an epidemic.

They change the environment with pesticides. They try to control temperature and humidity levels since the pathogen can operate only under specific climatic conditions. But maintaining these conditions is costly and difficult outdoors.

Host alteration is achieved by breeding more resistant plants. Various crops are being mated with more disease - resistant varieties.

Van der Plank reported that in his work or increasing the resistance of potatoes to disease, a Mexican weed, a distant relative of the potato, was found to have a high resistance to the fungus responsible for potato blight. After many crosses, scientists developed a hybrid that resembled the potato plant but had the resistance of the weed.

STURDIER

Of course, crossbred plants may succumb but they are less liable to be infected than a non-resistant plant and the infection will not spread as widely, van der Plank explained.

Home, Garden Week Nearing

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

If you, Mrs. Ouachita Parish, want up-to-date information on gardening, then make plans now to attend Home and Garden Week on our LSU Campus, August 17 and 18. On Wednesday of that week there will be a program on how to grow, propagate and create new begonias. The speaker will recommend types for beginners. There will, also, be a program Wednesday on "Azaleas for the Southern Gardens." This session will include propagation of deciduous azaleas available for the deep south and use of azaleas in the landscape. Wednesday afternoon a demonstration on flower arranging will be given by Mrs. Howard Kittel of Ft. Worth, Texas.

Thursday morning's program at the event will be "Roses A to Z". Information will be given on varieties for Louisiana, how to grow specimen roses, problems, and grooming roses for a show.

Also, Vaughn Banting will give a program on "The Art of Bonsai." He will demonstrate special techniques in creating new bonsai, also, plants recommended for bonsai.

So, you Mrs. Gardener, are invited to attend two days of gardening programs at Home and Garden Week. Air conditioned rooms are available. If you need additional information, call your Agricultural Extension Office.

SWIM NOT BATH

Regard a swim as a good reason to take a bath because the water coats the body with salt, chlorine, oil slick and other impurities. These deposits can irritate your skin and pave the way for blemishes. After your swim, lather up well in the bathtub or under the shower then rinse thoroughly. However, in hot weather, don't dry thoroughly. Instead let a little moisture remain to cool you off as it evaporates, or if you prefer to dry well, then splash yourself with chilled cologne, which will give the same effect, plus an added touch of luxury.

SCHOOL WARDROBE

For the young student, summer is short lived and it will soon be time to turn back to classroom and fashions appropriate. The very young school girl will find tiny print dresses with front inverted pleats. Jumpers will be in the school parade in solids, window pane checks or plaids. More than likely she'll want a vinyl coated raincoat for that walk to school

Autumn trends can be grouped into major looks, the tomboy and the baby. Carrying over from summer are the print suits, the military look in sportswear, and skirts and knits of all types.

Fashions for the young male mean western mod, and military look. Corduroy and brushed denim get top billing in shirts, especially those with the western flavor, prints, particularly paisley, also, find some interest in the trouser trade, too.

HINTS

If yellow jackets are giving you trouble this summer, try this trick. Keep a pan of soap or detergent suds in the yard. It seems that yellow jackets are attracted to the suds and then fall into the water.

Once the washing suds have been rinsed out of fabric gloves, they can be re-shaped under running warm water. Let this flow through each glove to inflate the fingers and hand cavities. The water pressure smoothes the fabric and straightens the fingers so the gloves need no finger pressing after being drip dried.

A THOUGHT

The secret of financial success is to spend what you have left after saving, instead of saving what is left after spending.

Poolsides Exotic In Some Yards

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The viewer of late, late shows may have a swimming pool area far more glamorous than some seen in those old movies. But in their heyday, Hollywood pool sets were envied.

Good design and new materials are widely available to bring posh living to the smallest pocketbook. Poolside cabanas, umbrella tables, exotic plantings and dramatic lighting are all part of the scenery in many little backyards.

Those who can't afford elaborate dressing rooms, rig up a do-it-yourself project that can compete. A simple dressing room may be made by pulling fabric over four tall rods inserted like curtain rods through seams in the fabric. These rods may then be stuck into the ground. A little canopy may be made to fit across the rods at the top with a ruffle trim and a flap that can fall down in front of the unit. Fancy dressing units can be designed by local canvas fabricators if you give them a basic plan.

STURDINESS

If you make it yourself, be sure cabana rods are long enough to pierce the ground to provide sturdiness. Rods can be attached to a permanent platform and material pulled down the same way. If rods can be removed, it makes for easier storage, and a temporary platform may be slipped in between rods. You can also build a more permanent dressing room of lumber, painting boards in beachside colors.

It should be possible to use a canvas tent as a dressing room. Paint it a pretty color and it can be a great substitute for a cabana. It's a good use for an old tent that has seen better camping days.

Some people like very elaborate pool awnings for lounging, others are content to decorate with a few tables and umbrellas offering a saucy look of comfort as one sips or dines.

Pools are providing new ways to entertain in the evening. Floodlights are put at the base of trees or behind plantings to silhouette the garden layout. There are umbrella lights and decorative bell and mushroom domed lights. There are Oriental-style tall lamps that resemble floor lamps that play light up and down at the same time. These stand as high as 62 inches, spreading a pool of light 20 to 60 feet in diameter, depending on their height. Their pretty green color offers on antique look.

Another dramatic poolside improvement is nonslip outdoor carpet available under many trade names and in a great range of colors including grassy green. This is used around pools and on terraces. It is cut easily with scissors to conform to a pool's shape and the carpet is touted by manufacturers to be good for many seasons.

Well-heeled owners pamper their pools with the latest accessories. In addition to floating chaises, floating toys and glasses, there are the floating games — basketball with hoop, volleyball game with net.

Proper Care Preserves Garden Hose

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) -- New garden hose on your shopping list?

If so, it's a notation that need not appear again for years if you take a little care.

"You're just not trying if you don't get 20 years of life -- or more — from a quality grade garden hose," according to John Kuhar, a specialist for Goodyear's automotive replacement products department

Kuhar knows hose — whether it's used to heat a car, pump gasoline or water the garden. A good quality hose to start with and a few simple rules, he says, will add years of useful life to garden hose.

— Keep it out of the path of all traffic — automobiles, bicycles, wheelbarrows, lawnmowers, even feet.

— Don't drag hose over curbs or across gravelled drives. Never yank it around fence posts or the corners of buildings.

— Coil it carefully after use. A curved wall rack is best, but if you don't have one, choose a shady spot to make a neat coil on the ground. Avoid sharp kinks and never hang hose on a nail or hook.

— Pressure buildup can burst plastic hose if you leave it in the sun with the faucet turned on but the nozzle turned off. Rubber hose won't burst, but hot sun doesn't add to its life.

— Lay hose flat before storing it and allow trapped water to run out one end as you coil the other. Don't store hose near a furnace or in an unheated garage or shed.

THERE'S A KIND of elegant Colonial charm about this three-bedroom, two-story house, with the rectangular appearance of the basic structure given added width by flanking wings, one of which masks a trellised terrace.

FLOOR PLANS: A simple but practical room arrangement on both floors keeps construction costs from soaring, but lower and upper terraces, porch and deck provide plenty of extra space for outdoor living; note front-to-rear living room and master bedroom.

Wings Add Width To Modest Colonial Design Residence

By ANDY LANG

Thers is some merit to having a house that appears to be larger than it really is.

For one thing, it is more imposing to the eye. For another, construction costs generally are lower in a house with less habitable area even though the structure may seem quite sizable.

A full study of this architect - designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan G-45.

This latest House of the Week, authentically Colonial, appears big because of the manner in which architect Rudolph A. Matern has designed its flanking wings. But the basic house covers only 869 square feet of ground. Also, the shape of this livable portion is a simple rectangle. And the plan is very straightforward, with the two main interior - bearing partitions on both floors running straight through front to rear and directly over one another. The two upstairs baths also are directly over the first floor lavatory. All these factors help to cut costs.

SIMPLE EXPEDIENT

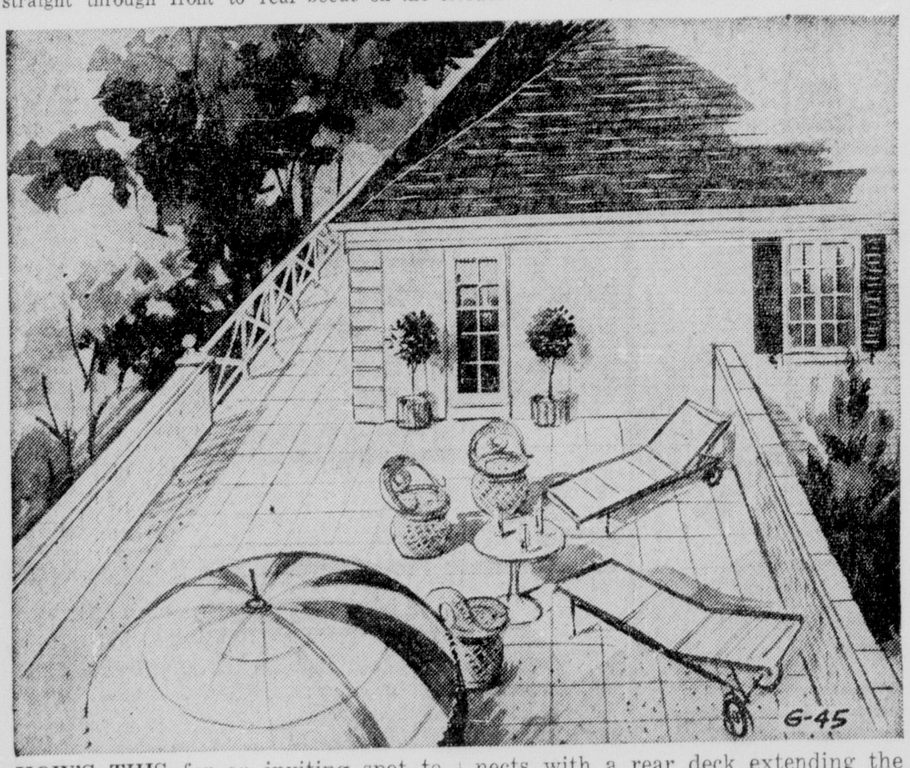

By the simple expedient of placing the two-car garage on one side of the house as a separate wing and locating the doors at the side — and by having a similar wing on the other side — the apparent habitable size of the house increases to a grand proportion. Actually, it isn't really a wing on the right side, but a wall with a short return to give privacy to a trellised terrace. A widow in the wall creates the necessary illusion.

Inside the formal front entrance is a 9 by 12-foot foyer. As in the Colonial period, the living and the dining rooms are on either side of the foyer. For a modest-sized house, the living room can be considered large, having a length of 23' 4". The design of a full front-to-rear room, with widows on both ends and at the side, has always been popular. There is access to the terrace at the rear of the room. A centrally-located fireplace is another feature, with the chimmey also serving a barbecue on the terrace.

The kitchen is well laid out, with a curved seating arrangement and table in one corner for breakfast. To the right of the kitchen is a rear service area, which includes a lavatory, closets and a door to a porch. The porch design serves a four-fold purpose: it weather-protects the rear door; gives cover from garage to house; has a flat roof which is the deck space at the second-floor level; and has wooden rails and posts to enhance the rear facade.

One of the most fascinating parts of this house is the roof. It is 19' by 20' and so will accomodate family and friends. Yet it can be reached through the master bedroom, which gives it an extra use as a private outdoor area for the principals. The long deck along the rear connects with the roof terrace. The master bedroom has its own bath and plenty of closet space. All three bedrooms have cross ventilation.

Brick veneer is used all around the house to make it almost maintenance - free. Slate shingles cover the roof. A glance at the artist's rendering will show Design G-45 to have an elegance seldom seen in modern houses.

HOW'S THIS for an inviting spot to relax? It's an attractively - designed terrace atop a two - garage and connects with a rear deck extending the full width of the house.

Backyard Fountain At Low Cost

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

If you have yearned for a fountain in your backyard, you can set one up yourself if you have as little as $20, a few materials and muscles.

There are now an estimated 500,000 display fountains in this country's private gardens or yards, up from 10,000 in 1960, according to one report.

The boom is attributed largely to sharply reduced costs. And the fountain fancy has been influenced by the magnificent water displays at the World's Fair in New York and by increased travel to Europe.

A Dallas, Tex., company has patented a recirculating nugget pump that stands 3½ inches high. The pump, with brochure, is being sold by department stores as part of a do-it-yourself kit for $20.

Most of today's fountains are of the so-called jet stream type in which water rises from water. With the underwater nugget pump, water is recirculated, an important factor in water-short areas.

The tiny pump not only is unobtrusive, but it leaves no traces of oil, a troublesome problem in some fountains. It has a thermal overload protector that shuts off the motor if it becomes too hot.

An attractive new ivy is gold band. It may be started indoors in pots, then transplanted outdoors for ground cover when the soil is warm.

Garden Center Notes

Designs Whet Appetites

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

Now is the time that the vegetable garden is a popular place to gather materials for our artistic designs. If you are not fortunate in having a vegetable garden, you can always visit the neighborhood market to select the interesting vegetables and fruits that can be used in very attractive designs.

Mrs. Gladys Kulcke, member of College Height's and Monroe Garden Club, demonstrated the use of colorful vegetables in two designs on last Wednesday's program for Fifth District Garden Center. One of the designs, containing eggplant, green tomatoes, red cabbage leaves, and loquat foliage, was made on a round wooden tray. Mrs. Kulcke, very talented in the art of flower arranging, explained that her selection of materials was mainly to show how to use vegetables when flowers become scarce.

Now is the in - between time when we seem to search for blooms in the garden. Then, too, the vegetables will hold up much longer now during the warm days of summer — thus giving the long-lasting design suitable for patio or den, and even the party table, if combined with foliage that is suitable in color and texture.

INTERESTING TEXTURE

The loquat leaves, interesting in texture, served as the basic line for the small stemmed green tomatoes, followed with the large egg plant for focal interest. A row of bell peppers (picked with wooden florist picks) formed the secondary line. For a colorful background, the red cabbage leaves were used, giving a pleasing contrast of color. One deep red-brown avocado added interest in the lower part of the design. This colorful design created a lot of interest after the program. Many admirers came to the center for a close look. The expression, "Looks good enough to eat," came from almost everyone who came by the center. My answer for this is that it is indeed good enough to eat. The vegetables are not harmed one bit when used in a design of this type. After several days use in a design we can certainly turn to them for our table use, other than esthetic beauty in design. We can certainly eat them. It is never wise to cut the vegetables for use in design. This is prohibited in flower show work and will be counted off by the judges if this is done.

From one of our valuable books on this subject by Emma H. Cyphers, "Fruit and Vegetable Arrangements," we learn that fruits and vegetables have been used through the centuries in decorative expressions. The tendrils of the grapevine inspired the first artistic scratches on rock during the Stone Age. When the harvest was gathered this gave reason to celebrate. In the early centuries, there were altars to the onion, the radish, and the cabbage with rites in honor of the gods.

SYMBOLISM

Symbolism of fruits influenced by the carvings and paintings in the early Christian churches is used today in our contemporary designs. In the 15th century, Andrea Della Robbia became noted for his enameled ceramics featuring fruits and pine cones. This style design bears his name today and many of us feature this type wreath at Christmas and other festive occasions with great pride. The pyramid type arrangement of fruits and vegetables can be traced back to the 17th century as a table design.

For her second design, Mrs. Kulcke used a wooden base, irregular form, as a container for a grouping of cucumbers and yellow squash (picked with wooden florists picks) to one side on the base. A needle holder served as the basic holder for the vegetables. The wooden picks will pick into the holder.

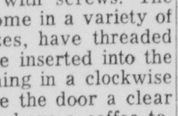

For line material she used two stems of sansavera (mother-in-law tongue). One large bell pepper served as the focal interest. Small ivy was placed around the picks to conceal them from view and create a pleasing contrast of form as a filler. For an accessory, two large white onions, placed on the opposite side of the base, anchored with clay, added interest and harmonized in the rounded forms that dominated the design.

The texture, color, and forms of the vegetables offer a fabulous supply of materials and ideas for table decorations. We should utilize them whenever possible. We can be sure to have a unique design, filled with individual interpretation. Try your hand and see how attractive your design will be next time you need something different.

Wednesday, Mrs. Wiley Moseley will be our special guest. A treat is in store for you.

Foliage Plants Brighten Shade

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

When azaleas and camellias became popular some 20 years ago, we filled our yards and gardens and then the woods with them. They are dazzling when they are in bloom, but then such large plantings leave us in a somewhat monotonous, flowerless landscape for the rest of the year, a condition entirely unnecessary.

There are innumerable plants with beautiful and colorful foliage and there are many shade and semi - shade lovers which will bring flowers into planting of azaleas and camellias. Most of these woodland plants like a mulch of leaves and the same conditions which are favored by rhododendrons, camellias and azaleas.

HOSTAS PLANTS

At this time of the year, one thinks of the hostas, only one of which is common in southern gardens, but there are many kinds now in catalogues. These gorgeous foliage plants come in many forms, with shades of yellow in stripes and with silvery edgings. They crowd out weeds and thrive in almost dense shade. While their foliage is beautiful enough, they also send up lily-shaped flowers in summer when flowers are badly needed in the shade.

Of course, all of our native woodland flowers like the shade, and they can be used in hundreds as a ground cover in the leaves around camellias. Bloodroot, iris cristata, wild ginger, trailing arbutus, spring beauties, the summer blooming cohosh, hepaticas, and a long list of wild flowers love the woods. They can be grown right at the feet of camellias to good advantage.

To bring real color and excitement into woodland shrub plantings in late summer and early Autumn, one needs only to plant large masses of our common red spiderlilies, the yellow sternbergias, the large flowered colchicums and the true fall crocuses. All of these will put on a show second only to the azaleas for color at a time when nothing much is blooming.

SUMMER SHOW

If you wish to stage a real summertime show, you can plant from a dozen to a hundred of the big pink spiderlilies right now to bloom by or during August. These bulbs are available from seed stores and bulb companies. They like ordinary conditions suitable to daffodils . . . a soil well tilled and to which bone meal has been added. The flowers will show up sooner if you soak the bulbs overnight before planting them.

Colchicums will follow the pink spiderlilies (lycoris squamigera) some time in August or early September. There are numerous varieties of colchicums but get hold of any kinds available. Overlapping with them will come the yellow sternbergias and then the big show of red spiderlilies. When spiderlilies bloom, you will think the azaleas are in flower again!

Doors Basis For Many Projects

AP Newsfeatures

A door provides a means of access. It is opened and closed. It is operated while in a vertical position.

All of these things are not necessarily so. If it's a flush door, which is completely lacking in trim, it can serve quite a few purposes that have nothing to do with swinging on hinges. Its very absence of paneling and molding makes it ideal as a horizontal, smooth, fixed surface.

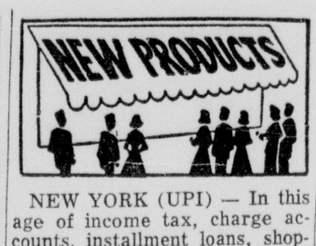

The unhandiest of handymen can produce a simple but practical and eye-pleasing coffee table merely by purchasing a flush door and ready-made legs of the kind that screw into baseplates. These baseplates are attached to the underside of the door - table with screws. The legs, which come in a variety of styles and sizes, have threaded tops which are inserted into the plates by turning in a clockwise direction. Give the door a clear finish and you have a coffee table that will fit in with any decor, especially if you select a wood that harmonizes with the rest of your furniture.

By placing longer legs on the door, you can similarly make a dining table. It can be used regularly for that purpose or, because the legs can be so easily detached, used only when you have a houseful of company and need an emergency dining table. In the latter case, the legless door can be conveniently stored for use at another time.

Flush doors also make excellent work surfaces for many endeavors, among them laying out patterns. And they are good for various types of games and as a foundation for train tracks when the use of the floor isn't practical.

ANOTHER USE

Still another use for a flush door is as a base for a sofa. In addition to the door, you will need a latex foam rubber mattress, slipcovers and a set of six sturdy legs. A 7-foot door will serve the purpose. One leg should be attached in each corner, and one in the middle on each side. The slip-covered mattress is then placed on the platform. There are many variations of this. Pincore foam, sold in thicknesses up to 6-inches, can be used instead of a finished mattress.

NEW YORK (UPI) — In this age of income tax, charge accounts, installment loans, shop-by-mail, pay-by-mail, it's never too soon to learn the essentials of personal finance.

And no better way for youngsters to learn about budgets, bookkeeping and banking than through a novel plan developed by a father when his elder daughter, off at college, had trouble keeping accounts straight. The Chek-A-Lowance kit, designed for children of 8 to 15, includes deposit slips, checks, cash vouchers, an accounts book and statements of account. With a parent acting as adviser and banker, the youngster draws up an allowance budget for the year, covering such items as recreation, school supplies, scout dues, Christmas money, perhaps a portion of clothing expenditures. Allowance vouchers, received each week instead of cash, are deposited in the "bank" and the child writes checks payable by any member of the family. Monthly statements by the "banker" keep everything in order.

Hungry for a bacon and tomato sandwich but hate the thought of the fuss — cooking, draining, pan washing, all for a couple of slices of bacon? Try the new pre-broiled, foil-packed gourmet bacon. Just slip the neat packet in your toaster, heat for one minute — and eat.

Sad, but true, if you don't tie it down somebody's likely to walk off with it: bicycle, skis, outboard motor, what-have-you. The tying-down is made simple by a new type of lock in which a yard of flexible steel aircraft cable, vinyl-encased, replaces the shackle in a key-operated lock. Use it, too, to secure power tools such as lawn mowers and snow blowers, baby carriages, ladders and fence gates, to lock luggage to a car-top carrier.

People really do collect butterflies — and for the serious hobbyist there's a new zippered, chrome-plated net, constructed from the steel shaft of a golf club. The zipper-fitted, detachable bag can be replaced in seconds with accessory bags designed for sampling water insects, plankton and other marine life.

There's a brush for any purpose in a new line — a shoe polish dauber with bristles on both sides for different color polishes; a lint brush which combines bristles and a roller of sticky tape to remove really stubborn lint; a matched set of dish washing and pan scouring brushes — one with white plastic bristles the other with crimped brass bristles for heavier duty; a long-handle dust brush and dustpan which snap together for easy storage.

A new lounge chair provides most of the benefits of a professional massage, thanks to a unique combination of roller mechanism and pulsating cyclo-massage action. The combination, it is claimed, results in a kneading, penetrating massage from neck to base of spine. The chair adjusts from an erect seating position to a three-quarter reclining point, and includes an adjustable leg and foot rest, both with cyclo-massage units. Available in a wide variety of fabric, nauga-hyde vinyl upholstery.

Diseases Of Plants Are Costly

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

You may not think about it in your little garden, but plant disease epidemics cost Americans about $5 billion each year.

A South African plant specialist, Dr. James E. van der Plank, speaking at a world workshop recently at Pennsylvania State University, said a plant disease takes on epidemic form when it attacks whole populations of plants.

The disease may devastate large areas where huge plantings of crops grow side by side. Once started, the epidemic sweeps through closely planted fields, said Dr. van der Plank, who is chief of the Plant Protection Research Institute in the South African Department of Agriculture.

He explained that the intensity of an epidemic depends on "a disease triangle" involving the host (plant) the pathogen (viruses, bacteria or fungi) and the environment.

CHANGE FACTOR

A change in any of the three can make an epidemic worse or halt it. Plant pathologists try to alter either the environment or the host to control an epidemic.

They change the environment with pesticides. They try to control temperature and humidity levels since the pathogen can operate only under specific climatic conditions. But maintaining these conditions is costly and difficult outdoors.

Host alteration is achieved by breeding more resistant plants. Various crops are being mated with more disease - resistant varieties.

Van der Plank reported that in his work or increasing the resistance of potatoes to disease, a Mexican weed, a distant relative of the potato, was found to have a high resistance to the fungus responsible for potato blight. After many crosses, scientists developed a hybrid that resembled the potato plant but had the resistance of the weed.

STURDIER

Of course, crossbred plants may succumb but they are less liable to be infected than a non-resistant plant and the infection will not spread as widely, van der Plank explained.

Home, Garden Week Nearing

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

If you, Mrs. Ouachita Parish, want up-to-date information on gardening, then make plans now to attend Home and Garden Week on our LSU Campus, August 17 and 18. On Wednesday of that week there will be a program on how to grow, propagate and create new begonias. The speaker will recommend types for beginners. There will, also, be a program Wednesday on "Azaleas for the Southern Gardens." This session will include propagation of deciduous azaleas available for the deep south and use of azaleas in the landscape. Wednesday afternoon a demonstration on flower arranging will be given by Mrs. Howard Kittel of Ft. Worth, Texas.

Thursday morning's program at the event will be "Roses A to Z". Information will be given on varieties for Louisiana, how to grow specimen roses, problems, and grooming roses for a show.

Also, Vaughn Banting will give a program on "The Art of Bonsai." He will demonstrate special techniques in creating new bonsai, also, plants recommended for bonsai.

So, you Mrs. Gardener, are invited to attend two days of gardening programs at Home and Garden Week. Air conditioned rooms are available. If you need additional information, call your Agricultural Extension Office.

SWIM NOT BATH

Regard a swim as a good reason to take a bath because the water coats the body with salt, chlorine, oil slick and other impurities. These deposits can irritate your skin and pave the way for blemishes. After your swim, lather up well in the bathtub or under the shower then rinse thoroughly. However, in hot weather, don't dry thoroughly. Instead let a little moisture remain to cool you off as it evaporates, or if you prefer to dry well, then splash yourself with chilled cologne, which will give the same effect, plus an added touch of luxury.

SCHOOL WARDROBE

For the young student, summer is short lived and it will soon be time to turn back to classroom and fashions appropriate. The very young school girl will find tiny print dresses with front inverted pleats. Jumpers will be in the school parade in solids, window pane checks or plaids. More than likely she'll want a vinyl coated raincoat for that walk to school.

Autumn trends can be grouped into major looks, the tomboy and the baby. Carrying over from summer are the print suits, the military look in sportswear, and skirts and knits of all types.

Fashions for the young male mean western mod, and military look. Corduroy and brushed denim get top billing in shirts, especially those with the western flavor, prints, particularly paisley, also, find some interest in the trouser trade, too.

HINTS

If yellow jackets are giving you trouble this summer, try this trick. Keep a pan of soap or detergent suds in the yard. It seems that yellow jackets are attracted to the suds and then fall into the water.

Once the washing suds have been rinsed out of fabric gloves, they can be re-shaped under running warm water. Let this flow through each glove to inflate the fingers and hand cavities. The water pressure smoothes the fabric and straightens the fingers so the gloves need no finger pressing after being drip dried.

A THOUGHT

The secret of financial success is to spend what you have left after saving, instead of saving what is left after spending.

Poolsides Exotic In Some Yards

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The viewer of late, late shows may have a swimming pool area far more glamorous than some seen in those old movies. But in their heyday, Hollywood pool sets were envied.

Good design and new materials are widely available to bring posh living to the smallest pocketbook. Poolside cabanas, umbrella tables, exotic plantings and dramatic lighting are all part of the scenery in many little backyards.

Those who can't afford elaborate dressing rooms, rig up a do-it-yourself project that can compete. A simple dressing room may be made by pulling fabric over four tall rods inserted like curtain rods through seams in the fabric. These rods may then be stuck into the ground. A little canopy may be made to fit across the rods at the top with a ruffle trim and a flap that can fall down in front of the unit. Fancy dressing units can be designed by local canvas fabricators if you give them a basic plan.

STURDINESS

If you make it yourself, be sure cabana rods are long enough to pierce the ground to provide sturdiness. Rods can be attached to a permanent platform and material pulled down the same way. If rods can be removed, it makes for easier storage, and a temporary platform may be slipped in between rods. You can also build a more permanent dressing room of lumber, painting boards in beachside colors.

It should be possible to use a canvas tent as a dressing room. Paint it a pretty color and it can be a great substitute for a cabana. It's a good use for an old tent that has seen better camping days.

Some people like very elaborate pool awnings for lounging, others are content to decorate with a few tables and umbrellas offering a saucy look of comfort as one sips or dines.

Pools are providing new ways to entertain in the evening. Floodlights are put at the base of trees or behind plantings to silhouette the garden layout. There are umbrella lights and decorative bell and mushroom domed lights. There are Oriental-style tall lamps that resemble floor lamps that play light up and down at the same time. These stand as high as 62 inches, spreading a pool of light 20 to 60 feet in diameter, depending on their height. Their pretty green color offers on antique look.

Another dramatic poolside improvement is nonslip outdoor carpet available under many trade names and in a great range of colors including grassy green. This is used around pools and on terraces. It is cut easily with scissors to conform to a pool's shape and the carpet is touted by manufacturers to be good for many seasons.

Writings Of Reformation In Library Collections

ST. LOUIS (UPI) —Scholars from all parts of the world come to a small library in St. Louis to view the remains of the Reformation.

They are remains, the curator of the library claims, which indicate that the rancor of the years that split Christendom could have been toned down.

The library, known as the Foundation for Reformation Research, contains 1,380 reels of microfilm—writings by 16th century scholars, theologians and statesmen. It is America's largest collection of Reformation literature on microfilm.

Dr. Alfred O. Fuerbringer, director of the foundation and president of the Concordia Lutheran Seminary where the library is housed, hopes to come closer to the heart of the argument between Roman Catholicism and Protestantism.

RE-EXAMINATION

"It is important, to re-examine the documents and find that a lot of the originally divisive issues might have either ceased to be, or, at least, can be better understood," Dr. Fuerbringer said.

Fuerbringer said studies of the Reformation documents show that "Often people had different meanings for a term, and that their personal background would force them into accepting a different meaning than their opposition.

"One such instance is the Last Supper. Here we find that because of various environmental meanings of words, there was much debate as to what was said at the Last Supper."

Since its establishment in 1957, the foundation has tried to become the Protestant counterpart of the Pius XII Memorial Library's Vatican collection at St. Louis University.

COLLECTION DIFFERENT

The Protestant agency's collection differs from the Vatican microfilms. "The Vatican collection encompasses a broad view, from the ancient Greeks to the 19th century, while ours dwells on the 16th century," Fuerbringer said.

Of significant value to the library are the microfilms of 50 writings by Johannes Cochlaeus, a Roman Catholic participant in the Reformation.

Cochlaeus spent years trying to obtain a reconciliation between Martin Luther and Rome. He later wrote article after article refuting Luther's theses.

Financial help for the foundation is received through the Aid Association for Lutherans, a fraternal group with headquarters in Appleton, Wis.

OTHER SOURCES

Dr. Fuerbringer said other funds have been received from Concordia Seminary, the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod, and the non-sectarian Lilly Foundation.

"As our holdings increase, we hope to be able to draw more and more scholars to pursue their research," Dr. Fuerbringer said.

"At present we are dickering for an extensive collection of writings from France and just recently we received an inquiry concerning documents located in Prague, Czechoslovakia," he said.

Fuerbringer said the library's work is in line with the Roman Catholic ecumenical movement.

"Our search for pertinent documents on the Reformation in Western Europe is a constant task," he added.

Attendance At Church Said Gaining

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The number of Americans who attend church every Sunday has increased during the past 14 years from 32 to 38 per cent of the population.

This finding—which contradicts the prevalent notion that there has been a slump in religious interest—comes from a nationwide survey conducted by Dr. George Gallup for the Catholic Digest.

The results of the survey were compared with a similar study made in 1952.

In 1952, 32 per cent of the people interviewed said they never attended church, 36 per cent attended occasionally, and 32 per cent were regular every-Sunday churchgoers.

MARKED SHIFT

In 1966, the number who never darken the doors of the church remains at 32 per cent. But there has been a marked shift from occasional to regular attendance, with only 30 per cent now in the once-in-a-while category and 38 per cent showing up every week.

The new survey shows that Catholics continue to be much more faithful in church attendance than Protestants. Two-thirds of America's Catholics are at Mass every Sunday, and only one out of eight is so lapsed in his faith that he never attends. Among Protestants as a group, the comparable figures are one-third every Sunday, one-third never.

The survey shows that the number of Jews who never attend a synagogue service has dropped sharply, from 56 per cent in 1952 to 39 per cent in 1966. But there also has been a decline, from 12 to 4 per cent, in the number who attend every Sabbath. The vast majority of Jews today are in the occasional-attendance category, with the largest single group—43 per cent —saying that they show up at the synagogue once a month or less.

MORE WOMEN ATTEND

That more women than men attend worship services is a fact anyone can discern by simply looking around him in a church or synagogue. The survey documents the disparity between the sexes. Forty-two per cent of the women and only 34 per cent of the men attend regularly.

Age also makes a difference. Attendance is lowest in the young adult (25 to 34 years) bracket, and becomes higher in each age group until there is a decided drop among those over 65.

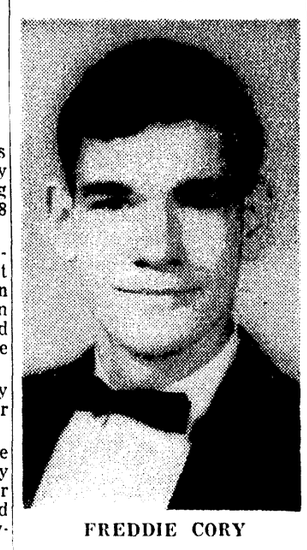

The more education a person has, the more likely he is to attend church. The lowest percentage of regular churchgoers was found among persons with less than an eighth-grade education, the highest percentage among those who had gone to college.

Other figures corroborated the indication that church-going is more prevalent among middle-class families than among those who have had fewer advantages. Among occupational groups, the highest percentage of regular attendance was reported by business and professional people and white collar workers, the lowest by manual and service workers. Forty per cent of those in middle or upper income brackets, but only 33 per cent of those in lower income brackets, go to church every week.

Geographically, the survey contains two mild surprises. The big cities, far from being a religious wasteland, actually surpass small towns and rural areas in church attendance. And New England has a slight but definite edge over the Southern "Bible Belt" in the percentage of residents who are in church every week.

Bethel Sets Preachers' Licensing

Two members of Bethel Baptist Church, 300 Washington St., West Monroe, will be licensed to preach the gospel ministry today in services at the church, it was announced by the Rev. B. K. Miller Jr., pastor.

Maurice Cotton will be licensed during the 11 a.m. service and Freddie Cory at the 7 p.m. service.

Cotton was born in Okaloosa community and grew up in that area. He is 32, married to the former Mary Helen Thatcher of West Monroe, and they have three children. He is employed in the bag department of Olin Mathieson paper mill in West Monroe.

Cory was born in Alexandria, but has spent most of his years in West Monroe, where he graduated from high school in 1959. He is 21, married to the former Shirley Parsons of West Monroe, and is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. W. O. Cory. He is employed at Olin Mathieson paper mill.

Both of the men will give testimony on their call to the gospel ministry at services today. Two other men were licensed to preach in services last Sunday at Bethel Baptist Church.

Rev. Miller said the newly licensed preachers will be looking for opportunities to preach, and may be contacted through the church.

Amish Struggles Range Far From Communities

CAMDEN, Mich. (UPI) —It was Sunday. Victor Eicher had completed his morning chores before dawn and was hitching his best horse to the family buggy.

His wife and their baby climbed aboard and the iron wheel rims ground over the pavement as they rolled into Camden. The young family, dressed in black suits and cloaks, stood out in bold relief against the early morning light.

They pulled up outside of town at the home of Amos Wagler where several other wagons already stood in the yard for this week's worship service.

HOMES SIMPLE

The homes of the "Plain People" are simple and free of "prideful" trappings. The two large rooms in this farmhouse were almost bare of furniture. There were no curtains, no rugs and no electrical fixtures. The long, backless wooden benches, hauled in for the services, filled the room.

The men sat in one room; the women in the other. Each new arrival greeted the other with a handshake and the "holy kiss" commanded by St. Paul in his Epistles.

There were two sermons, in German, interrupted by Bishop Levei Graber's reading of Hebrews 11. The congregation went on its knees on the bare wooden floor for a final prayer and the service closed with a song —a clear expression of Amish ideals.

"Lord, my heart is not haughty, nor mine eyes lofty; neither do I exercise myself in great matters, or in things too wonderful for me."

STRUGGLE RANGES FAR

With their basic, forthright religion, these 65 "plain folks" —eight families —are engaged in a struggle that ranges far beyond their tiny community.

For their world is a thoroughly religious one—in their vocations, their dress, their entire lives. And it is this attitude, especially toward the world of education, that has placed them in a controversy that began at the local level and has since aroused feelings throughout Michigan.

The Camden Amish sect is one of several colonies around the country. Others are in Lancaster and Lebanon counties of Pennsylvania, known as "Pennsylvania Dutch" country and in the hills of northern Ohio and in Iowa, where the Amish last winter were involved in a long battle with public school officials.

ATTEND EIGHT YEARS

As elsewhere, the Camden Amish reject formal schooling beyond eight grades. The school's 23 pupils are taught by the 19-year-old daughter of Bishop Graber. Ruth Graber has an eighth-grade education and under Michigan law is not certified to teach.

Thus the "plain folk" found themselves, from 1964 on, embroiled in a question of law: Should their religious beliefs be held more important than the state law.

The problem was tossed back and forth between state and local boards. Voices were raised in Lansing and in editorial columns around the state. On Oct. 6, 1965, the state Board of Education voted to close the school.

But through the winter and until planting time the little unpainted schoolhouse was still used for classes. Amish boys with Abe Lincoln type haircuts, dressed in black, and young girls, in braided hair, dressed in long pastel frocks, studied in the unlighted building.

SEEKS MORE AID

Eicher, whose farm is across the street from the school, said the certification problem began because the Camden-Frontier School District wanted the Amish children in public school in order to be eligible for a larger share of state aid.

State authorities indicated the district could receive an extra $3,000 annually, if the 23 children were in one of its schools.

"They wanted to give us a teacher for teaching secular subjects," Eicher said. "But we don't call any of them secular. When our kids study about wars we have to show them how we think about wars."

The Amish are conscientious objectors.

"Every subject is taught in the light of God's word and God's will. We don't separate secular teaching from religious teaching," Eicher said.

RESPECT FOR LAW

"We respect the law. We pay our taxes; we put more windows in our school like the law said. We put electric turn signals on our buggies when we were told to. We don't want to be the cause of anybody having an accident and getting killed.

"But when the law is agin' what we believe, we have to obey the will of God."

This summer, the weather-worn schoolhouse is empty. But the problem will return.

The state board has yet to enforce the section of the law governing private schools.

Former state School Supt. Lynn M. Bartlett, now with the U.S. Office of Education, indicated last year the state realizes how thorny the problem is.

"These people, in the practice of their free choice of religious beliefs, have contributed much to the growth of the state of Michigan," Bartlett said. "They should be encouraged to be a part of Michigan's future."

The Amish would quote St. Paul: "The wisdom of the world is foolishness with God."

Pope's Problems With Third Reich Revealed In Letters

By ZANDER HOLLANDER

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Pius XII, who has been criticized for not speaking out publicly against Nazi crimes during World War II, is depicted in a new Vatican historical volume as a man in agony, trying to do what he thought best in awful circumstances.

The volume, "Letters of Pius XII to German Bishops, 1939-1944," explains the Pope's motives for not openly denouncing the evils of Hitlerism.

But it also may provide some ammunition for Pius' critics by recording his efforts to reach an accommodation with Nazi Germany before the war.

Pius' public silence on Nazism has been condemned by many, perhaps most effectively and probably somewhat unfairly — by German dramatist Rolf Hochhuth in his play, "The Deputy."

The Pope's critics imply that a papal denunciation of Nazi crimes, coupled with a threat of excommunication for German Catholics who helped commit them, would have persuaded Hitler that the mass extermination of Jews and others condemned by the regime could cause wartime disunity.

Even in Vatican circles, where Hochhuth's name is anathema, you hear churchmen say they think Pius may have erred in not speaking out. But they are generally quick to add that the Pope's motives were the best, that he feared a public denunciation of Jewish persecutions would not have helped the victims at all — indeed, would have spurred the Nazis to worse brutalities, and not only against Jews, but against Catholics.

Moreover, these sources say, Pius feared a public denunciation would wreck not only his private efforts to help the Jews but also the papal potential as an impartial arbiter who might further peace.

The 124 letters to German bishops seem to bear out this explanation for Pius' silence.

"Superhuman efforts are required to keep the Holy See above the quarrels of the parties . . . It is often painfully difficult to decide whether reserve and prudent silence or frank words and energetic action are called for; all this tortures us much more than the threat to peace and safety in our house," Pius wrote Archbishop Joseph Frings of Cologne, now Cardinal Frings, on March 3, 1944.

WHY PUBLISHED

Some Vatican observers suggest that one of the main reasons for releasing the hitherto secret letters was to put in the public record the true motives of Pius' silence.

The Vatican archives usually keep such documents secret for 50 years.

But in answering critics who accused Pius of criminal ignorance, callousness and even Nazi sympathies, the Vatican also has conceded material for other charges.

For example, an appendix to the letters gives the transcript of conferences Pius held with the four German cardinals a few days after he became Pope in March, 1939, and six months before the invasion of Poland.

The Pope, the transcripts show, responded warmly to the urgings of Cardinals Adolph Bertram of Breslau, Carl Josef Schulte of Cologne, Michael Faulhaber of Munich and Theodor Innitzer of Vienna that the Church should make an all-out effort to reach an understanding with Nazi Germany.

Pius agreed to write to Adolf Hitler in German because, as Faulhaber said, "Der Fuehrer might not like to call in a theologian," to translate a Latin message.

The Pope also agreed to muzzle the anti-Nazi opinions of the Vatican City newspaper Osservatore Romano to avoid offending Hitler.

Pius' critics are likely to seize on what is omitted in the transcripts as well as what was said. There is no mention of concentration camps, then already mushrooming in Germany, nor of Nazi racism and anti-Jewish measures.

In these meetings, Pius was concerned with holding Hitler to the concordat signed between the Vatican and the third Reich in 1933 — that is, with protecting church property, safe guarding Catholic education of German children, and ending Nazi propaganda against the Church and the papacy.

"My wish is for peace between church and state . . . if they wish a conflict, we shall not fear it. But we do want to see if there is any possibility of arriving at peace . . ." Pius told the cardinals.

As events were to show, the Nazis were not interested in 'peace' on any terms but their own. "We emphasize that we are talking about a peace presentable to God and to the future of the Catholic Church in Germany," Pius wrote Cardinal Bertram. "We are not talking about a 'peace at any price'."

Bertram, in the view of contemporary German historians, leaned toward appeasing the Nazis. The volume reveals that Bishop Konrad von Preysing of Berlin, perhaps the most vigorous anti-Nazi of the German bishops, asked the Pope to remove Bertram as head of the Bishops Conference and, the request rejected, tried to resign his own bishopric.

But Pius, unwilling to remove Bertram, was equally unwilling to lose Preysing.

The Pope made the Berlin bishop one of his most frequent correspondents, relying on him for frank reports of Nazi crimes and encouraging him to speak out against them.

URGED ACTION

Preysing, the volume shows, did just that and at least twice urged Pius to publicly condemn the persecution of Jews.

"The Holy See has done all within its power both economically and morally to help in charity the Catholic non-Aryans (persons of inferior race, according to the Nazis) as well as those of the Jewish faith," Pius wrote Preysing April 30, 1943.

He made clear that he wanted German Catholics to help the Jews. "It consoled us to hear . . . that Catholics, especially Berlin Catholics, have responded with great love to the needs of the so-called non-Aryans."

REV. LEE GRISSO, pastor of Alabama Presbyterian Church, Choudrant, will be guest speaker at 11 a. m. services today at First Presbyterian Church of Monroe. A native of western Virginia, he served three years in the U. S. Army. Following discharge he was engaged in business for 12 years before entering the ministry. He graduated from Austin College and Austin Theological Seminary. He served in temporary pastorates in Orange, Tex. and DeRidder, La. while at Austin Seminary. Rev. and Mrs. Grisso have served as adult advisors for senior high fellowship during their service in the ministry.

'Old Fashioned' Revival Services Continuing Here

A revival in progress at the First United Pentecoastal Church, 1800 Parkview Dr., Monroe, is expected to run for several weeks, it was announced by the Rev. G. E. Chance, pastor.

The revival, described as an "old fashioned" type, is being led by Evangelist and Mrs. Kenneth Phillips, who are well known throughout the denomination.

Preaching, singing, and the subject of divine healing are features of the services held 7:30 p.m. daily. A nursery is open during services.

Revival Series Will Open Today In West Monroe

A series of revival meetings starting this evening at 7 at the West Monroe Methodist Protestant Church, corner of Patsy Ann Dr. and Washington St., will feature the Rev. Ben B. Gerald as evangelist.

Rev. Gerald is pastor at the Forest and Newton, Miss. Methodist Protestant churches and is secretary of the Mississippi Conference of the denomination, which includes Mississippi and Louisiana. Services will be held daily at 7 p.m. through Friday.

The Rev. Ken Renfroe, pastor, will lead singing at the services. The church building is air conditioned and has a nursery.

REV. RALPH GRAVES, "chalk talk" artist and industrial plant chaplain from Vicksburg, Miss., will be evangelist at a revival opening today and continuing through July 24 at Faith Baptist Church, 513 Sunnyside Dr., Monroe, it was announced by the pastor, Rev. Roy Myers. Musical director for the services will be E. B. Sehon. Sunday services will be at 10:55 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Morning services Tuesday through Friday will be held at 10. Evening services, except Saturday, will be held at 7:30. A nursery will be open during the revival services.

Church Of God 6th World Camp Project Planned

The Church of God's sixth world work camp will involve 25 young people from six countries to construct a dormitory at La Buena Tierra Training Center in Saltillo, Mexico, this summer.

The Rev. Isaac Mitchell, San Antonio, dean and teacher at Bay Ridge Christian College nearby, has been named director for the project.

Workers, in Mexico City for a one-week orientation program, come from the United States, Guayana, Panama, Costa Rica, Guatemala and Mexico.

Rev. Kenneth Prunty, director of youth ministries for the sponsoring Board of Christian Education at general offices of the church at Anderson, Ind., said a similar program in 1967 has been scheduled for Alaska. Other work camps have been held in Trinidad, Canada, Lebanon, Barbados, and Panama.

Associational Meeting Slated

"Tell Them What Great Things The Lord Hath Done For Thee . . ." will be the theme of the Concord Associational WMU quarterly meeting to be held at First Baptist Church, Farmerville, Thursday, beginning at 9:30 a.m. The featured speaker, Miss Suthell Walker, who will discuss state mission needs, is director of the Caddo Mission. Temple Church will present an interpretation of the theme for the meeting.

A special feature on state missions will be presented by Mrs. Fred Hamilton. Mrs. Ingram Ballard will install the officers for the coming year. Special music will be presented by Farmerville WMU. Various other reports will be presented.

The Farmerville church will provide lunch for all those attending.

REV. DARRELL PILCHER, shown here, and his wife, Carolyn, will be evangelists in a revival starting Monday at College Town Assembly of God Church, corner D'Arbonne and Harrison, and continuing through July 24, it was announced by the Rev. E. J. Graves, pastor. Rev. and Mrs. Pilcher work out of Monroe as evangelists. Services will be held nightly, except Saturday, at 7:30. There will be special musical presentations by the evangelists as well as the church choir and trio. A nursery will be open during services.

Pulpit Guests Are Announced

Three area churches have named pulpit guests for today.

Wade B. East, superintendent of the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home here, will be pulpit guest at 10:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. at the Ridge Avenue Baptist Church in West Monroe.

Earl D. Mercer, Children's Home public relations director, will speak at 10:50 a.m. at the First Baptist Church in Olla, and at 6:30 p.m. at the First Baptist Church in Jena.

GUEST PASTOR

Guest pastor at Temple Baptist Church on Plum St., Monroe, will be the Rev. A. T. Mitchell, of West Monroe, who will speak at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. services in the absence of the pastor, the Rev. Leon Ivey.

Appraisal Of Church Is Difficult

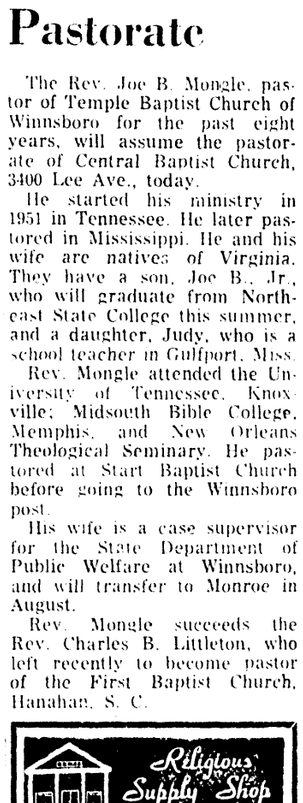

WASHINGTON (UPI)— How much is your church worth?

The question isn't meant to be irreverent. Appraising a church is a tough assignment, according to Levie D. Smith of Lakeland, Fla., a partner in the firm of Smith and Son, appraisers.

Writing in the latest issue of "The Appraisal Journal," Smith says you have to keep "a cold hard eye" on the possibility that where there's a church one day there may be a supermarket the next. But all the while bearing in mind that a church is "a symbol of beauty, warmth and . . . love."

In setting a value on a piece of property, appraisers generally use one or more of three methods — income, market value, cost. Two of these are of little or no use in appraising a church Smith says.

The income approach has little value, because there is no relationship between what the congregation puts in the plate each Sunday and the value of the church plant, he says. Few if any churches are rented and those that are seldom earn "an economic rent."

REV. JOE B. MONGLE

Rev. Mongle In Central Pastorate

The Rev. Joe B. Mongle, pastor of Temple Baptist Church of Winnsboro for the past eight years, will assume the pastorate of Central Baptist Church, 3400 Lee Ave., today.

He started his ministry in 1951 in Tennessee. He later pastored in Mississippi. He and his wife are natives of Virginia. They have a son, Joe B., Jr., who will graduate from Northeast State College this summer, and a daughter, Judy, who is a school teacher in Gulfport, Miss.

Rev. Mongle attended the University of Tennessee, Knoxville; Midsouth Bible College, Memphis, and New Orleans Theological Seminary. He pastored at Start Baptist Church before going to the Winnsboro post.

His wife is a case supervisor for the State Department of Public Welfare at Winnsboro, and will transfer to Monroe in August.

Rev. Mongle succeeds the Rev. Charles B. Littleton, who left recently to become pastor of the First Baptist Church, Hanahan, S. C.

Writings Of Reformation In Library Collections

ST. LOUIS (UPI) —Scholars from all parts of the world come to a small library in St. Louis to view the remains of the Reformation.

They are remains, the curator of the library claims, which indicate that the rancor of the years that split Christendom could have been toned down.

The library, known as the Foundation for Reformation Research, contains 1,380 reels of microfilm—writings by 16th century scholars, theologians and statesmen. It is America's largest collection of Reformation literature on microfilm.

Dr. Alfred O. Fuerbringer, director of the foundation and president of the Concordia Lutheran Seminary where the library is housed, hopes to come closer to the heart of the argument between Roman Catholicism and Protestantism.

RE-EXAMINATION

"It is important, to re-examine the documents and find that a lot of the originally divisive issues might have either ceased to be, or, at least, can be better understood," Dr. Fuerbringer said.

Fuerbringer said studies of the Reformation documents show that "Often people had different meanings for a term, and that their personal background would force them into accepting a different meaning than their opposition.

"One such instance is the Last Supper. Here we find that because of various environmental meanings of words, there was much debate as to what was said at the Last Supper."

Since its establishment in 1957, the foundation has tried to become the Protestant counterpart of the Pius XII Memorial Library's Vatican collection at St. Louis University.

COLLECTION DIFFERENT

The Protestant agency's collection differs from the Vatican microfilms. "The Vatican collection encompasses a broad view, from the ancient Greeks to the 19th century, while ours dwells on the 16th century," Fuerbringer said.

Of significant value to the library are the microfilms of 50 writings by Johannes Cochlaeus, a Roman Ratholic participant in the Reformation.

Cochlaeus spent years trying to obtain a reconciliation between Martin Luther and Rome. He later wrote article after article refuting Luther's theses.

Financial help for the foundation is received through the Aid Association for Lutherans, a fraternal group with headquarters in Appleton, Wis.

OTHER SOURCES

Dr. Fuerbringer said other funds have been received from Concordia Seminary, the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod, and the non-sectarian Lilly Foundation.

"As our holdings increase, we hope to be able to draw more and more scholars to pursue their research," Dr. Fuerbringer said.

"At present we are dickering for an extensive collection of writings from France and just recently we received an inquiry concerning documents located in Prague, Czechoslovakia," he said.

Fuerbringer said the library's work is in line with the Roman Catholic ecumenical movement.

"Our search for pertinent documents on the Reformation in Western Europe is a constant task," he added.

Attendance At Church Said Gaining

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The number of Americans who attend church every Sunday has increased during the past 14 years from 32 to 38 per cent of the population.

This finding—which contradicts the prevalent notion that there has been a slump in religious interest—comes from a nationwide survey conducted by Dr. George Gallup for the Catholic Digest.

The results of the survey were compared with a similar study made in 1952.

In 1952, 32 per cent of the people interviewed said they never attended church, 36 per cent attended occasionally, and 32 per cent were regular every-Sunday churchgoers.

MARKED SHIFT

In 1966, the number who never darken the doors of the church remains at 32 per cent. But there has been a marked shift from occasional to regular attendance, with only 30 per cent now in the once-in-a-while category and 38 per cent showing up every week.

The new survey shows that Catholics continue to be much more faithful in church attendance than Protestants. Two-thirds of America's Catholics are at Mass every Sunday, and only one out of eight is so lapsed in his faith that he never attends. Among Protestants as a group, the comparable figures are one-third every Sunday, one-third never.

The survey shows that the number of Jews who never attend a synagogue service has dropped sharply, from 56 per cent in 1952 to 39 per cent in 1966. But there also has been a decline, from 12 to 4 per cent, in the number who attend every Sabbath. The vast majority of Jews today are in the occasional-attendance category, with the largest single group—43 per cent —saying that they show up at the synagogue once a month or less.

MORE WOMEN ATTEND

That more women than men attend worship services is a fact anyone can discern by simply looking around him in a church or synagogue. The survey documents the disparity between the sexes. Forty-two per cent of the women and only 34 per cent of the men attend regularly.

Age also makes a difference. Attendance is lowest in the young adult (25 to 34 years) bracket, and becomes higher in each age group until there is a decided drop among those over 65.

The more education a person has, the more likely he is to attend church. The lowest percentage of regular churchgoers was found among persons with less than an eighth-grade education, the highest percentage among those who had gone to college.

Other figures corroborated the indication that church-going is more prevalent among middle - class families than among those who have had fewer advantages. Among occupational groups, the highest percentage of regular attendance was reported by business and professional people and white collar workers, the lowest by manual and service workers. Forty per cent of those in middle or upper income brackets, but only 33 per cent of those in lower income brackets, go to church every week.

Geographically, the survey contains two mild surprises. The big cities, far from being a religious wasteland, actually surpass small towns and rural areas in church attendance. And New England has a slight but definite edge over the Southern "Bible Belt" in the percentage of residents who are in church every week.

Associational Meeting Slated

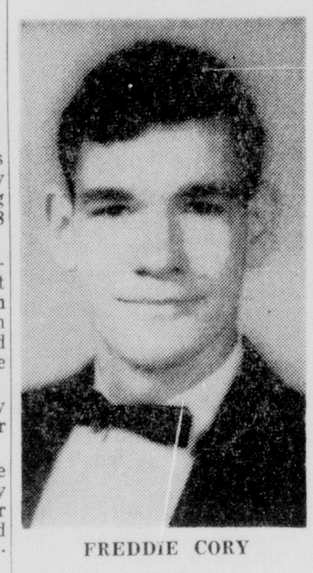

"Tell Them What Great Things The Lord Hath Done For Thee . . ." will be the theme of the Concord Associational WMU quarterly meeting to be held at First Baptist Church, Farmerville, Thursday, beginning at 9:30 a.m. The featured speaker, Miss Suthell Walker, who will discuss state mission needs, is director of the Caddo Mission. Temple Church will present an interpretation of the theme for the meeting.

A special feature on state missions will be presented by Mrs. Fred Hamilton. Mrs. Ingram Ballard will install the officers for the coming year. Special music will be presented by Farmerville WMU. Various other reports will be presented.

The Farmerville church will provide lunch for all those attending.

MAURICE COTTON

FREDDIE CORY

Bethel Sets Preachers' Licensing

Two members of Bethel Baptist Church, 300 Washington St., West Monroe, will be licensed to preach the gospel ministry today in services at the church, it was announced by the Rev. B. K. Miller Jr., pastor.

Maurice Cotton will be licensed during the 11 a.m. service and Freddie Cory at the 7 p.m. service.

Cotton was born in Okaloosa community and grew up in that area. He is 32, married to the former Mary Helen Thatcher of West Monroe, and they have three children. He is employed in the bag department of Olin Mathieson paper mill in West Monroe.

Cory was born in Alexandria, but has spent most of his years in West Monroe, where he graduated from high school in 1959. He is 21, married to the former Shirley Parsons of West Monroe, and is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. W. O. Cory. He is employed at Olin Mathieson paper mill.

Both of the men will give testimony on their call to the gospel ministry at services today. Two other men were licensed to preach in services last Sunday at Bethel Baptist Church.

Rev. Miller said the newly licensed preachers will be looking for opportunities to preach, and may be contacted through the church.

REV. DARRELL PILCHER, shown here, and his wife, Carolyn, will be evangelists in a revival starting Monday at College Town Assembly of God Church, corner D'Arbonne and Harrison, and continuing through July 24, it was announced by the Rev. E. J. Graves, pastor. Rev. and Mrs. Pilcher work out of Monroe as evangelists. Services will be held nightly, except Saturday, at 7:30. There will be special musical presentations by the evangelists as well as the church choir and trio. A nursery will be open during services.

Pulpit Guests Are Announced

Three area churches have named pulpit guests for today.

Wade B. East, superintendent of the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home here, will be pulpit guest at 10:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. at the Ridge Avenue Baptist Church in West Monroe.

Earl D. Mercer, Children's Home public relations director, will speak at 10:50 a.m. at the First Baptist Church in Olla, and at 6:30 p.m. at the First Baptist Church in Jena.

GUEST PASTOR

Guest pastor at Temple Baptist Church on Plum St., Monroe, will be the Rev. A. T. Mitchell, of West Monroe, who will speak at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. services in the absence of the pastor, the Rev. Leon Ivey.

Amish Struggles Range Far From Communities

CAMDEN, Mich. (UPI) —It was Sunday. Victor Eicher had completed his morning chores before dawn and was hitching his best horse to the family buggy.

His wife and their baby climbed aboard and the iron wheel rims ground over the pavement as they rolled into Camden. The young family, dressed in black suits and cloaks, stood out in bold relief against the early morning light.

They pulled up outside of town at the home of Amos Wagler where several other wagons already stood in the yard for this week's worship service.

HOMES SIMPLE

The homes of the "Plain People" are simple and free of "prideful" trappings. The two large rooms in this farmhouse were almost bare of furniture. There were no curtains, no rugs and no electrical fixtures. The long, backless wooden benches, hauled in for the services, filled the room.

The men sat in one room; the women in the other. Each new arrival greeted the other with a handshake and the "holy kiss" commanded by St. Paul in his Epistles.

There were two sermons, in German, interrupted by Bishop Levei Graber's reading of Hebrews 11. The congregation went on its knees on the bare wooden floor for a final prayer and the service closed with a song —a clear expression of Amish ideals.

"Lord, my heart is not haughty, nor mine eyes lofty; neither do I exercise myself in great matters, or in things too wonderful for me."

STRUGGLE RANGES FAR

With their basic, forthright religion, these 65 "plain folks" —eight families —are engaged in a struggle that ranges far beyond their tiny community.

For their world is a thoroughly religious one—in their vocations, their dress, their entire lives. And it is this attitude, especially toward the world of education, that has placed them in a controversy that began at the local level and has since aroused feelings throughout Michigan.

The Camden Amish sect is one of several colonies around the country. Others are in Lancaster and Lebanon counties of Pennsylvania, known as "Pennsylvania Dutch" country and in the hills of northern Ohio and in Iowa, where the Amish last winter were involved in a long battle with public school officials.

ATTEND EIGHT YEARS

As elsewhere, the Camden Amish reject formal schooling beyond eight grades. The school's 23 pupils are taught by the 19-year-old daughter of Bishop Graber. Ruth Graber has an eighth-grade education and under Michigan law is not certified to teach.

Thus the "plain folk" found themselves, from 1964 on, embroiled in a question of law: Should their religious beliefs be held more important than the state law.

The problem was tossed back and forth between state and local boards. Voices were raised in Lansing and in editorial columns around the state. On Oct. 6, 1965, the state Board of Education voted to close the school.

But through the winter and until planting time the little unpainted schoolhouse was still used for classes. Amish boys with Abe Lincoln type haircuts, dressed in black, and young girls, in braided hair, dressed in long pastel frocks, studied in the unlighted building.

SEEKS MORE AID

Eicher, whose farm is across the street from the school, said the certification problem began because the Camden-Frontier School District wanted the Amish children in public school in order to be eligible for a larger share of state aid.

State authorities indicated the district could receive an extra $3,000 annually, if the 23 children were in one of its schools.

"They wanted to give us a teacher for teaching secular subjects," Eicher said. "But we don't call any of them secular. When our kids study about wars we have to show them how we think about wars."

The Amish are conscientious objectors.

"Every subject is taught in the light of God's word and God's will. We don't separate secular teaching from religious teaching," Eicher said.

RESPECT FOR LAW

"We respect the law. We pay our taxes; we put more windows in our school like the law said. We put electric turn signals on our buggies when we were told to. We don't want to be the cause of anybody having an accident and getting killed.

"But when the law is agin' what we believe, we have to obey the will of God."

This summer, the weather-worn schoolhouse is empty. But the problem will return.

The state board has yet to enforce the section of the law governing private schools.

Former state School Supt. Lynn M. Bartlett, now with the U.S. Office of Education, indicated last year the state realizes how thorny the problem is.

"These people, in the practice of their free choice of religious beliefs, have contributed much to the growth of the state of Michigan," Bartlett said. "They should be encouraged to be a part of Michigan's future."

The Amish would quote St. Paul: "The wisdom of the world is foolishness with God."

Appraisal Of Church Is Difficult

WASHINGTON (UPI)— How much is your church worth?

The question isn't meant to be irreverent. Appraising a church is a tough assignment, according to Levie D. Smith of Lakeland, Fla., a partner in the firm of Smith and Son, appraisers.

Writing in the latest issue of "The Appraisal Journal," Smith says you have to keep "a cold hard eye" on the possibility that where there's a church one day there may be a supermarket the next. But all the while bearing in mind that a church is "a symbol of beauty, warmth and . . . love."

In setting a value on a piece of property, appraisers generally use one or more of three methods — income, market value, cost. Two of these are of little or no use in appraising a church Smith says.

The income approach has little value, because there is no relationship between what the congregation puts in the plate each Sunday and the value of the church plant, he says. Few if any churches are rented and those that are seldom earn "an economic rent."

REV. JOE B. MONGLE

Rev. Mongle In Central Pastorate

The Rev. Joe B. Mongle, pastor of Temple Baptist Church of Winnsboro for the past eight years, will assume the pastorate of Central Baptist Church, 3400 Lee Ave., today.

He started his ministry in 1951 in Tennessee. He later pastored in Mississippi. He and his wife are natives of Virginia. They have a son, Joe B., Jr., who will graduate from Northeast State College this summer, and a daughter, Judy, who is a school teacher in Gulfport, Miss.

Rev. Mongle attended the University of Tennessee, Knoxville; Midsouth Bible College, Memphis, and New Orleans Theological Seminary. He pastored at Start Baptist Church before going to the Winnsboro post.

His wife is a case supervisor for the State Department of Public Welfare at Winnsboro, and will transfer to Monroe in August.

Rev. Mongle succeeds the Rev. Charles B. Littleton, who left recently to become pastor of the First Baptist Church, Hanahan, S. C.

Astronauts Expecting 3 Jam-Packed Space Days

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) —"Frankly, the mission has everything in it but the kitchen sink. It should be three days jam-packed with interesting operations."

That was Navy Cmdr. John W. Young describing the flight of Gemini 10, scheduled to start Monday afternoon from Cape Kennedy.

Young and his spacewalking flying companion, Air Force Maj. Michael Collins, are to rocket skyward at 5:21 p.m. EST to start a space adventure that calls for:

A rendezvous and linkup with an Agena satellite to be launched 100 minutes earlier than Gemini 10.

A trick rendezvous with a "dead bird" satellite—an Agena left in space after the Gemini 8 flight last March.

Two 55-minute work sessions outside the orbiting space ship by Collins.

The shifting of the Gemini 10 orbit to a record altitude of perhaps 480 miles by firing the powerful Agena rocket engine.

Exposure of the astronauts to a heavier radiation than any previous spaceman.

A total of 14 different scientific, engineering and technological experiments.

Young and Collins Saturday spent several hours studying the intricate flight plan and ran through some of the procedures in a practice spacecraft in the mission control center here.

Weather experts forecast favorable conditions at launch time. They said there was a 30 per cent possibility of thundershowers, which could cause some trouble to the double launching.

"Almost everything we do will be directly applicable to the Apollo man to the moon program," reported command Pilot Young, veteran of the Gemini 3- "Molly Brown" flight that inaugurated the manned portion of the Gemini project last year.

During a five-hour pursuit of the new Agena, Young and Collins are to attempt a first—calculating the maneuvers necessary to catch the target after a 103,000-mile chase. They'll use the spacecraft inertial guidance system, a sextant to take star and horizon sightings and a small computer for the do-it-yourself navigation.

Previously this work was done by ground computers, which will be used as a backup for Gemini 10.

"On-board navigation will be a must for Apollo moon and planetary flights," commented Young.

Young plans to insert the nose of Gemini into the Agena docking collar about 11:30 p.m. Monday, executing history's second linkup of two space vehicles.

The Gemini 8 pilots, Neil Armstrong and Air Force Maj. David R. Scott, joined with an Agena last March—but their experience was short-lived because of a spacecraft thruster failure that forced a quick disconnect and an emergency landing.

Young plans two dockings and Collins one over a period of several hours. Shortly after the first linkup, the astronauts plan another first—igniting the powerful Agena engine twice to place their spacecraft in an elliptical orbit which could reach out as far as 480 miles.

That would top the altitude record of 307.5 miles set by two Soviet cosmonauts in Voskhod 2.

"We're not trying to go to a certain altitude to set a record," Collins said. "That's not our purpose. It's to set us up to go after the 8 Agena."

At the higher altitude, experts figure Young and Collins will be exposed to 10 times more radiation than any other U.S. astronaut—but still only one-tenth the dose considered dangerous.

Young said he had no apprehension about lighting up the Agena.

"When the thing goes off, we're going to get one-G (Gravity Force) and brace ourselves and see a pretty good fire off the nose of the spacecraft, and then the engine is going to quit and it'll be all over with," Young added.

They'll abandon their own Agena the next morning, conduct experiments and prepare for Collins' first Extra Vehicular Activity EVA.

That is to start late Tuesday afternoon when Collins opens his hatch and stands on the seat.

"I'm actually connected to the spacecraft by four lines," he said. "One's an electrical line for radio communications. One is an oxygen inlet line. One is an oxygen outlet line. The fourth is a simple cloth strap, a tether. The cloth tether is shorter than the rest so in case I lunge forward, it would stop me before any force would pull on the other three."

He'll conduct two experiments during the standup EVA. One is to obtain ultraviolet photographs of four star fields. On the other, he'll photograph four color patches—yellow, red, blue and gray— mounted on a slate.

Similar pictures will be made before and after the flight. Collins said the study is aimed at "reproducing those colors that we truly see in space,. . . .to determine accurately the particular photographic processes required to process the film which comes back from the moon and give better color fidelity."

All the while, the Gemini 8 Agena and Gemini 10—which started out more than 5,000 miles apart—are drawing closer together in their separate orbits. On Wednesday, Young and Collins perform maneuvers aimed at a rendezvous late in the afternoon, 247 miles above the earth.

"It will be difficult," explained Young, "because the 8 Agena is a dead bird with no battery life, guiding lights or radar transponder."

Once they achieve the rendezvous, Young is to fly in formation with the Agena and Collins is to open his hatch and stroll over to it on a 50-foot tether, using a gas-powered space gun for maneuvering.

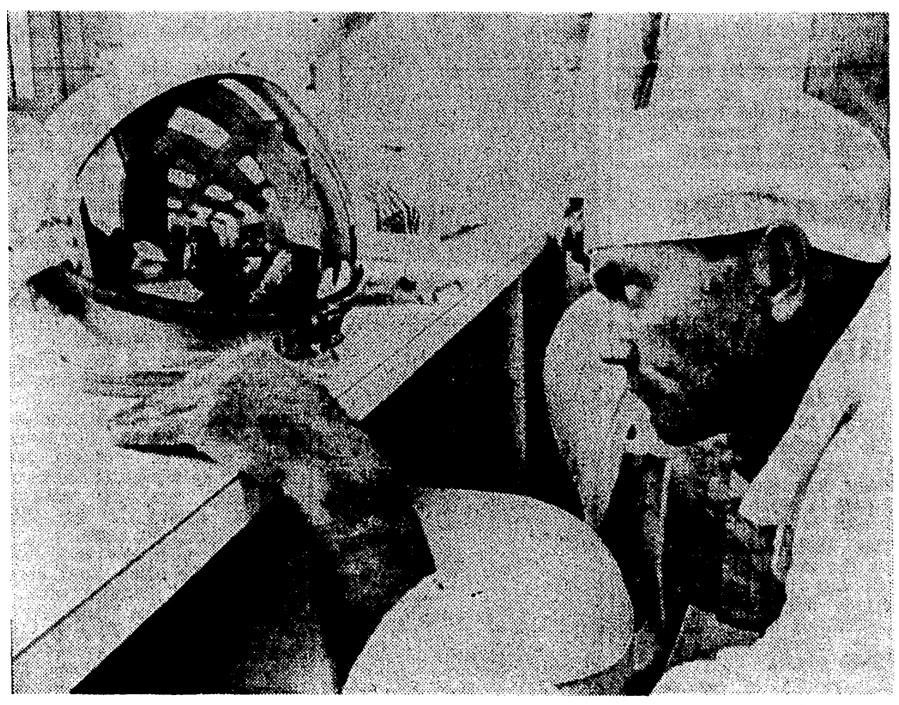

He is to remove one micrometerorite detection package from the side of the Agena and attach another for a future astronaut to retrieve.

"Following that," Collins said. "I'll push off from the spacecraft and do an evaluation of the hand-held maneuver unit Kgunl to see what problems, if any, are encountered in using it as a stabilizing device. Then, John will very kindly come over with the spacecraft and retrieve me (in a space rescue simulation).

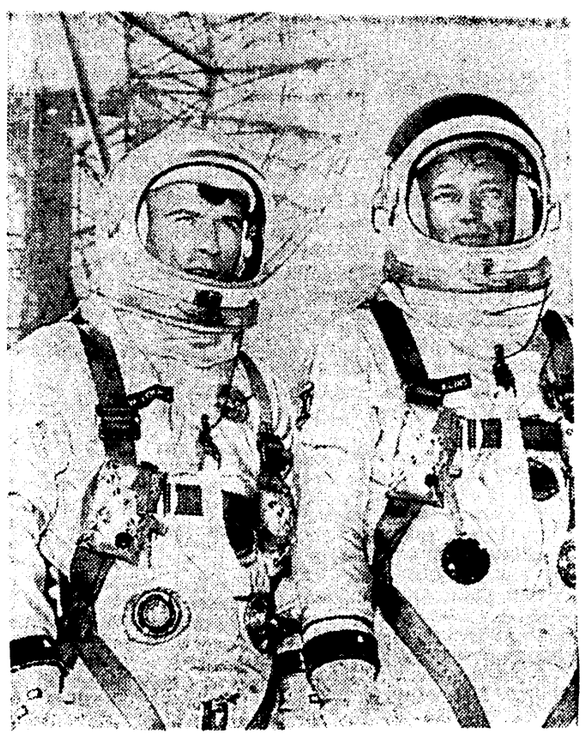

"Then we'll proceed into an analysis of tether dynamics . . . attempting to return to the spacecraft by pulling in on the tether alone without any help from the gun."

After 55 minutes outside, Collins returns to the cabin and they gradually drift away from the Agena 8. An hour later, Collins opens the hatch a final time to discard the 50-foot tether and other unneeded items so the cabin won't be so crowded.

On Thursday they are to conduct experiments, returning to earth that afternoon, landing in the Atlantic Ocean more than 300 miles east of Cape Kennedy.

Spacemen's Experiments Recounted

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — America's Gemini 10 crew will be a pair of orbiting scientists during their three days in space this week. Fourteen experiments — Several quite complex — are to be performed by the spacemen.

The 14 experiments "are the most since Gemini 7," observed Gemini 10 command pilot John W. Young.

They "will have considerable application to later space flights," the astronaut said, "and will tend to extend some of our basic knowledge about space."

The spacemen will try to obtain photographs of a faint glow caused by a layer of excited atoms in the earth's upper atmosphere. The phenomena — called airglow — was photographed on America's last gemini flight by Gemini 9 astronaut Eugene A. Cernan.

Cernan "got 17 of the most beautiful pictures we ever got," said Frank Newman, Gemini 10 experiments manager for NASA's Manned Spacecraft Center. The Gemini 9 photographs showed plumes above the airglow layer which officials did not expect — "like an airglow layer on an airglow layer," Newman said.

Other photographic experiments include snapping pictures of weather and geographic features on earth. Surface temperatures of several stars may be determined by photographs of ultraviolet light emitted from them.

Looking forward to the day American astronauts land on the moon, Gemini 10 astronaut Michael Collins will stand up outside the spacecraft and photograph four color patches mounted on a square slate.

The pictures will show what effect ultraviolet light from the sun has on colors, so technicians can determine what kind of processing is necessary to reproduce true colors when photographs are returned from the lunar trip.

Devices which will poke above and below Gemini 10 near the rear of the spaceship could pave the way for a simple system to tell future astronauts which way is up as they speed toward distant targets.

The experiment — termed by Newman as "the most complex" on board — senses the variation in charged particles surrounding the spacecraft, leading to a way the craft's attitude can be determined.

Attitude sensing devices now carried on Gemini spaceships draw a large amount of electrical power that officials would like to put to work elsewhere.

Measuring sensors aboard Gemini 10's Agena target satellite will try to record the "ion wake" left in the trail of orbiting Gemini 10. The wake — similar to the wake behind a ship traveling through water — may someday help in developing future rendezvous techniques with orbiting satellies.

Dust-like particles which zip through space at supersonic speeds — called micrometeorites — may be collected in a special pack attached to the side of Gemini 10.

During his space walk, Collins will try to retrieve another experimental pack attached to the Agena satellite launched for Gemini 8 last March. Officials believe aluminum plates on the device may contain craters after being bombarded by micrometeorites for four months.

If successful, Collins will leave another micrometeorite collection pack on the Gemini 8 Agena for America's Gemini 12 crew to pick up in November.

Legislators Hold Meeting At Houston

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Such problems as parks, tourism, water, and expanding metropolitan areas will be discussed here this week by top legislators from 15 southern states.

About 200 legislators and legislative aids will participate in the annual sessions of the southern conference of the Council of State Governments. The four-day session starts Tuesday.

In addition to the Texas Legislature, hosts for the session will be the Texas Commission on Interstate Cooperation, the Texas Legislative Council and the Texas Legislative Budget Board.

The conference's agriculture committee will hold an all-day meeting Tuesday. The Southern Water Resources Conference will convene on Wednesday and Thursday.

Wednesday business sessions will include panel discussions on natural resource advantages of the South and on current and future legislative processes. The natural resource panel will emphasize parks, tourism and water.

Thursday's discussions will emphasize the states and their growing metropolitan areas. Problems to be discussed will include city-county comsolidation, annexation, area planning, and expanding water, sewerage, police and fire protection requirements.

Friday's concluding session for the election of officers and the adoption of resolutions will be held at the Manned Spacecraft Center, training base for the nation's astronauts.

Fisherman Gone

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A fisherman stepped into deep water in the Industrial Canal here Saturday and disappeared.

Police said witnesses reported that John Lester Cash, about 45, re-appeared about 50 feet away, sank and was not seen again.

The Coast Guard assisted police in efforts to recover the body.

Druggists Open 84th Convention

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP) — Louisiana druggists opened their 84th convention Saturday with lively debate expected role of pharmacists in politics.

The subject of debate will be House Bill 891 which was beaten in the recent session of the legislature.

The bill would have reduced the state board of pharmacy from 19 members to nine, and would "have removed the board from politics."

A resolution will be proposed Monday that no member of the Louisiana State Pharmaceutical Association be allowed to hold an office or committee chairmanship in the L.S.P.A. while serving on the state board of pharmacy.

The resolution is apparently aimed at L.S.P.A. President Percy Alleman of Norco, a member of the pharmacy board.

L.S.P.A. members say Alleman argued against the bill, although the L.S.P.A. had directed its officers not to speak on the issue unless in favor of it.

Man Threatens To Take Plunge

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — George Blanks, 25, of New Orleans sat on a ledge of the Greater New Orleans Bridge for three hours and 20 minutes Saturday, threatening to jump into the Mississippi River.

Police said Blanks blamed domestic problems.

He was talked out of jumping by police and reporter - photographer Robert Caffery of The Louisiana Weekly. Blanks was booked with disturbing the peace by trying to commit suicide.

Police Sgt. Raymond Comstock said Blanks hailed a cab at 2 a.m. Saturday and asked to be taken to the West Bank.

Comstock said Blanks asked the driver to stop on the bridge because he "had to get out." Blanks vaulted over the railing, and sat on the ledge for his suicide act.

Requiem Mass For Slain Girl Is Held

DYER, Ind. (UPI) —The words "Lord have mercy, Lord have mercy, Lord have mercy" rang through the small church.

With these words about 130 relatives and friends prayed at the requiem mass for Gloria Jean Davy, one of the eight student nurses murdered in their Chicago townhouse Thursday.

Beneath the blue vaulted ceiling of St. Joseph Roman Catholic Church, they gathered to pay their last respects to the young student nurse.

Six of her fellow student nurses sat in the front row dressed in their crisp gray and white uniforms.

The Rev. Ambrose E. Switzer in the eulogy used the words of a prayer written by Gloria Jean at the time of the assassination of President Kennedy:

"Why this death, this mourning, why this overwhelming feeling of sorrow in years so short? I do not know, but in years it will show."

The Rev. Switzer said man was given the power to do good or evil. "Evil causes sorrow when the battle against the world of the flesh and the devil is lost," the Rev. Switzer said.

Gloria Jean's body lay in a shrouded coffin, flanked on both sides by tall candles. It was wheeled out by two men wearing dark suits, preceded by the six uniformed student nurses.

The six formed two ranks on the steps of the church. Behind them came the rest who had been inside. The six waited for all to leave the church, then went to a black limousine that formed the procession to the cemetery.

Traffic on U.S. 30 directly in front of the church had been halted for the procession.

When the parade of cars left the churchyard, signals were given and the traffic resumed.

The sun shone brightly on the Indiana sky.

Really Justice

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The pretty cocktail waitress plunked a scotch and soda in front of the gray-haired customer and laughed.

"Frankly, sir, I don't believe that you are Justice William O. Douglas."

But it was Supreme Court Justice Douglas, and his friendship with the cocktail waitress, Cathleen Heffernan, 23, culminated in their marriage in Los Angeles on Friday night.

Astronauts Expecting 3 Jam-Packed Space Days

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) —"Frankly, the mission has everything in it but the kitchen sink. It should be three days jam-packed with interesting operations."

That was Navy Cmdr. John W. Young describing the flight of Gemini 10, scheduled to start Monday afternoon from Cape Kennedy.

Young and his spacewalking flying companion, Air Force Maj. Michael Collins, are to rocket skyward at 5:21 p.m. EST to start a space adventure that calls for:

A rendezvous and linkup with an Agena satellite to be launched 100 minutes earlier than Gemini 10.

A trick rendezvous with a "dead bird" satellite—an Agena left in space after the Gemini 8 flight last March.

Two 55-minute work sessions outside the orbiting space ship by Collins.

The shifting of the Gemini 10 orbit to a record altitude of perhaps 480 miles by firing the powerful Agena rocket engine.

Exposure of the astronauts to a heavier radiation than any previous spaceman.

A total of 14 different scientific, engineering and technological experiments.

Young and Collins Saturday spent several hours studying the intricate flight plan and ran through some of the procedures in a practice spacecraft in the mission control center here.

Weather experts forecast favorable conditions at launch time. They said there was a 30 per cent possibility of thundershowers, which could cause some trouble to the double launching.

"Almost everything we do will be directly applicable to the Apollo man to the moon program," reported command Pilot Young, veteran of the Gemini 3- "Molly Brown" flight that inaugurated the manned portion of the Gemini project last year.

During a five-hour pursuit of the new Agena, Young and Collins are to attempt a first—calculating the maneuvers necessary to catch the target after a 103,000-mile chase. They'll use the spacecraft inertial guidance system, a sextant to take star and horizon sightings and a small computer for the do-it-yourself navigation.

Previously this work was done by ground computers, which will be used as a backup for Gemini 10.

"On-board navigation will be a must for Apollo moon and planetary flights," commented Young.

Young plans to insert the nose of Gemini into the Agena docking collar about 11:30 p.m. Monday, executing history's second linkup of two space vehicles.

The Gemini 8 pilots, Neil Armstrong and Air Force Maj. David R. Scott, joined with an Agena last March—but their experience was short-lived because of a spacecraft thruster failure that forced a quick disconnect and an emergency landing.

Young plans two dockings and Collins one over a period of several hours. Shortly after the first linkup, the astronauts plan another first—igniting the powerful Agena engine twice to place their spacecraft in an elliptical orbit which could reach out as far as 480 miles.

That would top the altitude record of 307.5 miles set by two Soviet cosmonauts in Voskhod 2.

"We're not trying to go to a certain altitude to set a record," Collins said. "That's not our purpose. It's to set us up to go after the 8 Agena."

At the higher altitude, experts figure Young and Collins will be exposed to 10 times more radiation than any other U.S. astronaut—but still only one-tenth the dose considered dangerous.

Young said he had no apprehension about lighting up the Agena.

"When the thing goes off, we're going to get one-G (Gravity Force) and brace ourselves and see a pretty good fire off the nose of the spacecraft, and then the engine is going to quit and it'll be all over with," Young added.

They'll abandon their own Agena the next morning, conduct experiments and prepare for Collins' first Extra Vehicular Activity EVA.

That is to start late Tuesday afternoon when Collins opens his hatch and stands on the seat.

"I'm actually connected to the spacecraft by four lines," he said. "One's an electrical line for radio communications. One is an oxygen inlet line. One is an oxygen outlet line. The fourth is a simple cloth strap, a tether. The cloth tether is shorter than the rest so in case I lunge forward, it would stop me before any force would pull on the other three."

He'll conduct two experiments during the standup EVA. One is to obtain ultraviolet photographs of four star fields. On the other, he'll photograph four color patches—yellow, red, blue and gray— mounted on a slate.

Similar pictures will be made before and after the flight. Collins said the study is aimed at "reproducing those colors that we truly see in space,. . . .to determine accurately the particular photographic processes required to process the film which comes back from the moon and give better color fidelity."

All the while, the Gemini 8 Agena and Gemini 10—which started out more than 5,000 miles apart—are drawing closer together in their separate orbits. On Wednesday, Young and Collins perform maneuvers aimed at a rendezvous late in the afternoon, 247 miles above the earth.

"It will be difficult," explained Young, "because the 8 Agena is a dead bird with no battery life, guiding lights or radar transponder."

Once they achieve the rendezvous, Young is to fly in formation with the Agena and Collins is to open his hatch and stroll over to it on a 50-foot tether, using a gas-powered space gun for maneuvering.

He is to remove one micrometerorite detection package from the side of the Agena and attach another for a future astronaut to retrieve.

"Following that," Collins said. "I'll push off from the spacecraft and do an evaluation of the hand-held maneuver unit Kgunl to see what problems, if any, are encountered in using it as a stabilizing device. Then, John will very kindly come over with the spacecraft and retrieve me (in a space rescue simulation).

"Then we'll proceed into an analysis of tether dynamics . . . attempting to return to the spacecraft by pulling in on the tether alone without any help from the gun."

After 55 minutes outside, Collins returns to the cabin and they gradually drift away from the Agena 8. An hour later, Collins opens the hatch a final time to discard the 50-foot tether and other unneeded items so the cabin won't be so crowded.

On Thursday they are to conduct experiments, returning to earth that afternoon, landing in the Atlantic Ocean more than 300 miles east of Cape Kennedy.

Collins is scheduled to take a walk in space and he doesn't expect — and he hopes it won't — to see his space helmet's visor fog up as it did for Eugene Cernan when he took his stroll during Gemini 9's flight June 5. Spacemen's Experiments Recounted

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — America's Gemini 10 crew will be a pair of orbiting scientists during their three days in space this week. Fourteen experiments — Several quite complex — are to be performed by the spacemen.

The 14 experiments "are the most since Gemini 7," observed Gemini 10 command pilot John W. Young.

They "will have considerable application to later space flights," the astronaut said, "and will tend to extend some of our basic knowledge about space."

The spacemen will try to obtain photographs of a faint glow caused by a layer of excited atoms in the earth's upper atmosphere. The phenomena — called airglow — was photographed on America's last gemini flight by Gemini 9 astronaut Eugene A. Cernan.

Cernan "got 17 of the most beautiful pictures we ever got," said Frank Newman, Gemini 10 experiments manager for NASA's Manned Spacecraft Center. The Gemini 9 photographs showed plumes above the airglow layer which officials did not expect — "like an airglow layer on an airglow layer," Newman said.

Other photographic experiments include snapping pictures of weather and geographic features on earth. Surface temperatures of several stars may be determined by photographs of ultraviolet light emitted from them.

Looking forward to the day American astronauts land on the moon, Gemini 10 astronaut Michael Collins will stand up outside the spacecraft and photograph four color patches mounted on a square slate.

The pictures will show what effect ultraviolet light from the sun has on colors, so technicians can determine what kind of processing is necessary to reproduce true colors when photographs are returned from the lunar trip.

Devices which will poke above and below Gemini 10 near the rear of the spaceship could pave the way for a simple system to tell future astronauts which way is up as they speed toward distant targets.

The experiment — termed by Newman as "the most complex" on board — senses the variation in charged particles surrounding the spacecraft, leading to a way the craft's attitude can be determined.

Attitude sensing devices now carried on Gemini spaceships draw a large amount of electrical power that officials would like to put to work elsewhere.

Measuring sensors aboard Gemini 10's Agena target satellite will try to record the "ion wake" left in the trail of orbiting Gemini 10. The wake — similar to the wake behind a ship traveling through water — may someday help in developing future rendezvous techniques with orbiting satellies.

Dust-like particles which zip through space at supersonic speeds — called micrometeorites — may be collected in a special pack attached to the side of Gemini 10.

During his space walk, Collins will try to retrieve another experimental pack attached to the Agena satellite launched for Gemini 8 last March. Officials believe aluminum plates on the device may contain craters after being bombarded by micrometeorites for four months.

If successful, Collins will leave another micrometeorite collection pack on the Gemini 8 Agena for America's Gemini 12 crew to pick up in November.

Man Threatens To Take Plunge

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — George Blanks, 25, of New Orleans sat on a ledge of the Greater New Orleans Bridge for three hours and 20 minutes Saturday, threatening to jump into the Mississippi River.

Police said Blanks blamed domestic problems.

He was talked out of jumping by police and reporter - photographer Robert Caffery of The Louisiana Weekly. Blanks was booked with disturbing the peace by trying to commit suicide.

Police Sgt. Raymond Comstock said Blanks hailed a cab at 2 a.m. Saturday and asked to be taken to the West Bank.

Comstock said Blanks asked the driver to stop on the bridge because he "had to get out." Blanks vaulted over the railing, and sat on the ledge for his suicide act.

Druggists Open 84th Convention

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP) — Louisiana druggists opened their 84th convention Saturday with lively debate expected role of pharmacists in politics.

The subject of debate will be House Bill 891 which was beaten in the recent session of the legislature.

The bill would have reduced the state board of pharmacy from 19 members to nine, and would "have removed the board from politics."

A resolution will be proposed Monday that no member of the Louisiana State Pharmaceutical Association be allowed to hold an office or committee chairmanship in the L.S.P.A. while serving on the state board of pharmacy.

The resolution is apparently aimed at L.S.P.A. President Percy Alleman of Norco, a member of the pharmacy board.

L.S.P.A. members say Alleman argued against the bill, although the L.S.P.A. had directed its officers not to speak on the issue unless in favor of it.

Requiem Mass For Slain Girl Is Held

DYER, Ind. (UPI) —The words "Lord have mercy, Lord have mercy, Lord have mercy" rang through the small church.

With these words about 130 relatives and friends prayed at the requiem mass for Gloria Jean Davy, one of the eight student nurses murdered in their Chicago townhouse Thursday.

Beneath the blue vaulted ceiling of St. Joseph Roman Catholic Church, they gathered to pay their last respects to the young student nurse.

Six of her fellow student nurses sat in the front row dressed in their crisp gray and white uniforms.

The Rev. Ambrose E. Switzer in the eulogy used the words of a prayer written by Gloria Jean at the time of the assassination of President Kennedy:

"Why this death, this mourning, why this overwhelming feeling of sorrow in years so short? I do not know, but in years it will show."

The Rev. Switzer said man was given the power to do good or evil. "Evil causes sorrow when the battle against the world of the flesh and the devil is lost," the Rev. Switzer said.

Gloria Jean's body lay in a shrouded coffin, flanked on both sides by tall candles. It was wheeled out by two men wearing dark suits, preceded by the six uniformed student nurses.

The six formed two ranks on the steps of the church. Behind them came the rest who had been inside. The six waited for all to leave the church, then went to a black limousine that formed the procession to the cemetery.

Traffic on U.S. 30 directly in front of the church had been halted for the procession.

When the parade of cars left the churchyard, signals were given and the traffic resumed.

The sun shone brightly on the Indiana sky.

Soldier Killed

VILLE PLATTE, La. (AP)— A Ft. Polk soldier was killed near here Saturday when his car smashed into a tree on La. 10.

State police identified the victim as Spec. 4 Tommy Ross, 23, his home address was not available.

Really Justice

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The pretty cocktail waitress plunked a scotch and soda in front of the gray-haired customer and laughed.

"Frankly, sir, I don't believe that you are Justice William O. Douglas."

But it was Supreme Court Justice Douglas, and his friendship with the cocktail waitress, Cathleen Heffernan, 23, culminated in their marriage in Los Angeles on Friday night.

Legislators Hold Meeting At Houston

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Such problems as parks, tourism, water, and expanding metropolitan areas will be discussed here this week by top legislators from 15 southern states.

About 200 legislators and legislative aids will participate in the annual sessions of the southern conference of the Council of State Governments. The four-day session starts Tuesday.

In addition to the Texas Legislature, hosts for the session will be the Texas Commission on Interstate Cooperation, the Texas Legislative Council and the Texas Legislative Budget Board.

The conference's agriculture committee will hold an all-day meeting Tuesday. The Southern Water Resources Conference will convene on Wednesday and Thursday.

Wednesday business sessions will include panel discussions on natural resource advantages of the South and on current and future legislative processes. The natural resource panel will emphasize parks, tourism and water.

Thursday's discussions will emphasize the states and their growing metropolitan areas. Problems to be discussed will include city-county comsolidation, annexation, area planning, and expanding water, sewerage, police and fire protection requirements.

Friday's concluding session for the election of officers and the adoption of resolutions will be held at the Manned Spacecraft Center, training base for the nation's astronauts.

Fisherman Gone

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A fisherman stepped into deep water in the Industrial Canal here Saturday and disappeared.

Police said witnesses reported that John Lester Cash, about 45, re-appeared about 50 feet away, sank and was not seen again.

The Coast Guard assisted police in efforts to recover the body.

DOES YOUR PRESENT SALES JOB HOLD OUT THIS MUCH PROMISE?

SOME men make mistakes about careers and settle for jobs where their personalities and ambitions are stifled — their qualifications ignored.

AT the Famous Schools of Westport, Conn.—Famous Artists, Famous Writers and Famous Photographers Schools — there's no limit to a determined man's income. He can go as far up the managerial ladder as his ambition permits.

OUR famous courses are advertised in Life, Readers Digest, etc. and on TV. Responses to our advertising result in a very high percentage of sales. There is no canvassing. The high commissions paid weekly and company fringe benefits permit a conscientious salesman to enter the upper income bracket quickly.

BECAUSE OF OUR RAPID EXPANSION WE NEED A MAN IN THIS AREA IMMEDIATELY!

IDEALLY the man we are looking for is over 25 years old, married, bondable, knows how to sell and how to motivate people to self-improvement. Owns a late model car and can do some traveling.

Mail full details and telephone number to:

DOES YOUR PRESENT SALES JOB HOLD OUT THIS MUCH PROMISE?
SOME men make mistakes about careers and settle for jobs where their personalities and ambitions are stifled — their qualifications ignored.
AT the Famous Schools of Westport, Conn.—Famous Artists, Famous Writers and Famous Photographers Schools — there's no limit to a determined man's income. He can go as far up the managerial ladder as his ambition permits.
OUR famous courses are advertised in Life, Readers Digest, etc. and on TV. Responses to our advertising result in a very high percentage of sales. There is no canvassing. The high commissions paid weekly and company fringe benefits permit a conscientious salesman to enter the upper income bracket quickly.
BECAUSE OF OUR RAPID EXPANSION WE NEED A MAN IN THIS AREA IMMEDIATELY!
IDEALLY the man we are looking for is over 25 years old, married, bondable, knows how to sell and how to motivate people to self-improvement. Owns a late model car and can do some traveling.

Justice And Young Bride Honeymoon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — U.S. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and his youthful fourth bride embarked on a secluded honeymoon Saturday with a second honeymoon — to Red China — a possibility later this year.

"I'm already learning to speak Chinese," said the new Mrs. Douglas.

Douglas, 67, wed Cathleen Curran Heffernan, 23, Friday night at a friend's home in suburban Encino.

The couple checked out of a West Los Angeles hotel early Saturday. Douglas said they would honeymoon in the Pacific Northwest.

The jurist said he had been invited by the Communist Chinese government to visit Peking late this year.

In Washington, State Department ofifcials confirmed they had received a request from Douglas for permission to visit Red China. No specific decision has been made, but permission was expected to be granted, officials said.

A long-time advocate of Red China's admission to the United Nations, Douglas also has urged demilitarization of the Nationalist Chinese stronghold of Formosa.

Washington officials said Douglas would have no problem getting U.S. permission to travel to China. The U.S. government recently dropped prohibitions on travel to Red China for such persons as newsmen, scholars and doctors. The Chinese, however, have not yet allowed any Americans in those professions to visit the mainland.

Douglas was refused permission by the State Department in 1959 to travel to Red China as a newsman. At the time, the department said Douglas could not qualify as a full-time journalist. Douglas said National Geographic magazine had asked him to do a picture story on the Chinese mainland.

The wedding was the first for the blonde, blue-eyed college sociology major from Portland, Ore.

Douglas was divorced June 24 from his third wife, the former Joan C. Martin, 26, whom he married 2½ years ago.

His second wife, the former Mercedes Hester, 18 years his junior, divorced him in 1963, after 10 years of marriage.

His first marriage, of 30 years, to the former Mildred Riddle, ended in divorce in 1953.

'We really got married spontaneously," said the new Mrs. Douglas. "I think my parents will be very pleased. They've known about it for two hours. We decided to get married only two days ago."

The ceremony was at the home of businessman Edward Silver. Silver said a champagne reception for eight followed the ceremony.

The bride's parents were informed of the wedding by Portland newsmen, relatives said. They refused to comment.

Douglas said they planned to visit his bride's parents in Portland during their honeymoon. They are Curtis B. Heffernan, a clerk for the Spokane, Portland & Seattle Railway, and Mary Curran Heffernan, an employe on the Portland sheriff's office.

Douglas smilingly kissed his bride after the ceremony and said: "She's a wonderful girl from a wonderful family. She's also a wonderful outdoors girl and horsewoman."

Added the bride: "I'm a tomboy. I have three brothers at home. I'm sure they will approve, too."

Her eldest brother, Danny, is a Marine enlisted man in Hong Kong.

The other two, Michael and Barry, live with their parents.

"I only met Bill a little more than a year ago through mutual friends, and became involved socially with him last December," said the bride.

The justice said he saw no reason their 44-year age difference should be a barrier to a happy marriage, adding it was mutual interests that brought them together.

"Cathy has been working in sociology, dealing with disturbed people in a clinical situation which relations in many ways to the law," Douglas said.

West Monroe Negro Fled Jail Twice

A check of records in the West Monroe Police Department showed Saturday that the 26-year-old Negro being held in Marshall, Tex., in connection with a murder and escape counts, escaped two times from the jail in West Monroe.

Johnny Lee Jackson, was captured Friday at 1102 Arkansas St., Monroe, and later returned to Marshall. He and three other prisoners escaped from the Marshall jail July 10.

The other three were apprehended in Tennessee earlier in the week.

Jackson on Oct. 11, 1964, was booked for carrying a concealed weapon; discharging a firearm, a pistol; aggravated assault and drunk and disturbing the peace. He was convicted Oct. 16 in West Monroe City court and sentenced to one year in jail, plus a substantial fine.

On Dec. 24 he escaped from the city jail, by breaking through the walls.

Recaptured on Oct. 8, 1965, he was sentenced to six months in addition to the original term but escaped again eight days later.

The murder in Waskom, for which he was wanted by Texas authorities, occurred while he was free from the West Monroe jail.

West Monroe has no maximum security cells, areas where hardened prisoners can be put for safekeeping. All must be kept in the open cells, or bullpens.

Chief Johnny B. Mitchell said Saturday the sentences are still outstanding against Jackson.

Viet Nam Gets British Help

LONDON (UPI) — Although Britain refuses to send troops or war materials to Viet Nam it is sending a civilian medical team.

The team of child health specialists, consisting of four doctors and six nurses, will go next month under the auspieces of the Ministry of Overseas Development.

Coming at a delicate moment of Anglo-American differences over the escalation of the war, the move appeared to be a token of continued British support for U.S. policy.

The medical project is to run for five years at an estimated annual cost of about $280,000.

Economic Crisis Gripping Britain

LONDON (AP) — Britain is gripped by one of its worst economic crises in two decases, but it doesn't show.

This "swinging" island kingdom is enjoying full employment and steadily rising wages. Shops are filled with foreign and domestic goods.

Night clubs and theaters and the latest import from the United States, the Playboy Club, are jammed. So are gambling casinos. Betting shops report businessis fine and race tracks are crowded.

Newspapers chronicle with cheesecake art the steady inching up milady's leg of the mini - skirts.

Now that the seamen's strike is over, the English Channel ferries are crowded with Britons leaving for European holidays.

All the signs of booming prosperity are there.

And that's the problem Prime Minister Harold Wilson faces: how to bring home to the British people their dire economic straits.

Repeated appeals for a return to "The Spirit of Dunkerque" have gone unheeded and Wilson was forced to clamp down last week the tightest credit squeeze since World War II. But financial experts say it isn't enough.

Wilson warned the nation Thursday further drastic measures will follow shortly and said before leaving for Moscow Saturday that a "prepared package" will be presented when he returns Tuesday.

What's wrong?

Britain is a highly industrialized, trading nation. It depends for its living on the sale abroad of the product of its factories. But many factories have been slow to modernize; workers have opposed installation of labor-saving machinery, and restrictive practices by management and union have become almost conmonplace.

The result: prices of British goods have soared in an increasingly competitive world market.

At the same time the breakup of the old British Empire left this country with a host of military and economic assistance commitments around the world that cost Britain $1.4 billion a year—money that British industry is earning in ever-decreasing amounts.

And the British consumer's taste for foreign products—Scandinavian furniture, French wines, American planes—has sharpened so that this nation is buying more than it is selling abroad. Trade deficits have become a permanent fixture.

The government has been forced to borrow from foreign banks, governments and international institutions such as the International Monetary Fund to meet its commitments and prop up the pound.

Today Britain owes abroad the totality of its reserves of gold and convertible currency.

Foreign confidence in the ability, or even desire, of the British people to overcome their economic woes is dwindling. Britain has experienced four serious economic crises with runs on sterling, sending the pound tumbling in the 21 months Wilson's Labor party government has been in office.

But these are the effects of the continuing crisis. The causes are the nation's high financial commitments for defense in Europe and "east of Suez" and the slowest rate of increasing productivity—the individual output of each worker —of any major industrial nation.

Wilson's ministers are working against time preparing a list of new measures to cut government expenses, especially overseas military; assure a better distribution of scarce skilled workers, cut demand and purchasing power at home, and foster exports.

Most experts agree, however, that what is needed most of all is a psychological shock to bring home to the people the depth of the crisis. This may come in a government-decreed freeze of prices, dividends and wages. The planned deflation may bring widespread unemployment.

If this doesn't succeed, devaluation of the pound must follow to make export prices more competitive. The Labor government, however, has said it will resort to devaluation only as a last rseort.

King Tried To Engineer Italian Coup

MILAN, Italy (UPI) —The late King Victor Emmanuel III vainly tried in 1940 to engineer the overthrow of Benito Mussolini to keep Italy from entering the war on Adolf Hitler's side, the magazine Domenica del Corriere said Saturday.

It said if the King's plan had worked, the Fascist dictator would have been toppled then in exactly the same way he actually was three years later, when Italy was on the verge of defeat.

The magazine said its correspondent Luigi Cavicchioli learned of the attempt of an interview in Portugal with exiled King Umberto, Victor Emmanuel's son.

Cavicchiolo said Victor Emmanuel, anxious to keep Italy neutral, "felt there was only one way to wrest power from Mussolini's hands with an acceptable margin of risk and following a constitutional practice—bring about a no-confidence vote in the grand council of fascism."

He said the King's aide, Duke Acquarone, approached nearly all leading Fascists in the final weeks of 1939 and early in 1940, "sounding out their views about Mussolini's pro-German policy and about the prospect of a war on Hitler's side."

He said the talks gave Acquarone "the certainty that if the members of the grand council had to vote according to conscience, a majority would have voted in favor of neutrality and against Mussolini."

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:

There have been many improvements on nylon net washers for dishes and walls, and I have another to offer.

I cut one-half-inch-thick foam rubber into four-inch by five-inch pieces, then cut four thicknesses of nylon net into eight-and-three-quarter-inch by 21-inch pieces.

Place foam rubber in center of netting, folding each side over the foam rubber.

Put a pin on each side of the netting to hold foam rubber in place, then sew on the sewing machine all around the sides of the foam rubber to keep it in place.

You can sew two rows to make it more attractive. With pinking shears, cut along the outer edge of the net on all four sides.

If you wish to hang it up, crochet a loop, draw through the netting, and tie with a double knot.

It holds water, retains soap for a long time, and does a beautiful job on dishes, pots, pans, and walls, and they last so long.

These are very beautiful and always clean, as dirt washes right out of the foam rubber.

DEAR HELOISE:

What is the easiest way to remove the skin from a tomato without wasting part of the fruit?

H. P. O.

* * *

Dip it into boiling water for about six seconds, then rinse under the cold water faucet! Pierce the skin with a knife, and all the skin comes right off.

Some people pierce the stem with a fork, and hold the tomato over a gas flame a bit, then rinse. This works, too.

IT'S THE NET WORTH

DEAR HELOISE:

My 12-year-old made several small drawstring bags of nylon net so she can wash all her teen-doll dresses in the machine, using her own little net laundry bags.

Also, we used net last year as a foundation for crepe paper operetta costumes that were to represent flowers. Just made full, gathered skirts of the net and sewed the crepe paper petals to them.

They looked so crisp and were light and easy to dance in.

I'd never have tried it (nor thought of it) if all those wonderful suggestions for using net hadn't been in your column.

Roberta

DEAR HELOISE:

I have one of my only granddaughter's booties that I made into a pincushion.

I cut out a piece of cardboard just the shape of her birth certificate footprint (not really necessary), wrote her name and birth date on it, and placed it in the bottom of the bootee. Then I stuffed the bootee with cotton.

I cut another piece of cardboard about an inch wide, and made it into a circle to fit the ankle. I added more cotton and covered the top with a piece of silk, working the silk down in the ankle, and tied a ribbon around it.

My granddaughter is 15 now, and that pincushion still sits on my dresser. It would be a nice gift to knit three matching bootees, and make one into a pincushion.

DEAR FOLKS:

Do you know those clay flower pots we buy for our plants? And, those darling little clay saucers that sometimes come underneath them, but which are usually bought separately?

This clay saucer is a fantastic gadget, either placed upside down or laid right-side up on the burner of your gas stove. It acts as a warmer. You can either set your percolator in it to keep the coffee warm, or place the pan containing any vegetable, which has completed cooking, on this little gadget.

As they are quite inexpensive, I suggest that you try one. Be sure to get one big enough so that your favorite pan or coffee pot will fit inside it.

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Living in an area with an ample supply of dust and spiders, I found that spiderwebs and cobwebs are more easily seen and gotten down after the lights are turned on in the evening.

Night Duster

* * *

You're so right! And haven't you found this is especially true if you have company . . . and your husband happens to be facing that cobweb??? You can count on him to mention it!

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

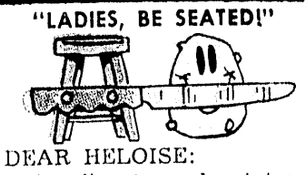

I have discovered an easy way to keep my hair clips and various-sized curlers separated and neat.

The plastic tray from the top of my cosmetic case is sectioned. In the long section, I have my brush and combs. In the smallest section, I have hair pins, and in each of the remaining sections, I have my curlers separated according to size.

This eliminates fumbling through a bag for a certain size.

Phyllis Schilsky

"LADIES, BE SEATED!"

DEAR HELOISE:

Standing to peel potatoes or vegetables for stew or salad, or even just washing dishes, used to really bother me.

Now I relax and sit. Here's how to make it comfy:

Open your under-the-sink cabinets all the way, place a high stool between the doors, put your feet on the floor of the cabinets, and proceed to do your work.

Mrs. O. Zimpleman

DEAR HELOISE:

I was invited to a bridal shower. I had a pair of pillowcases with pretty tatting on them but didn't have any wrapping paper.

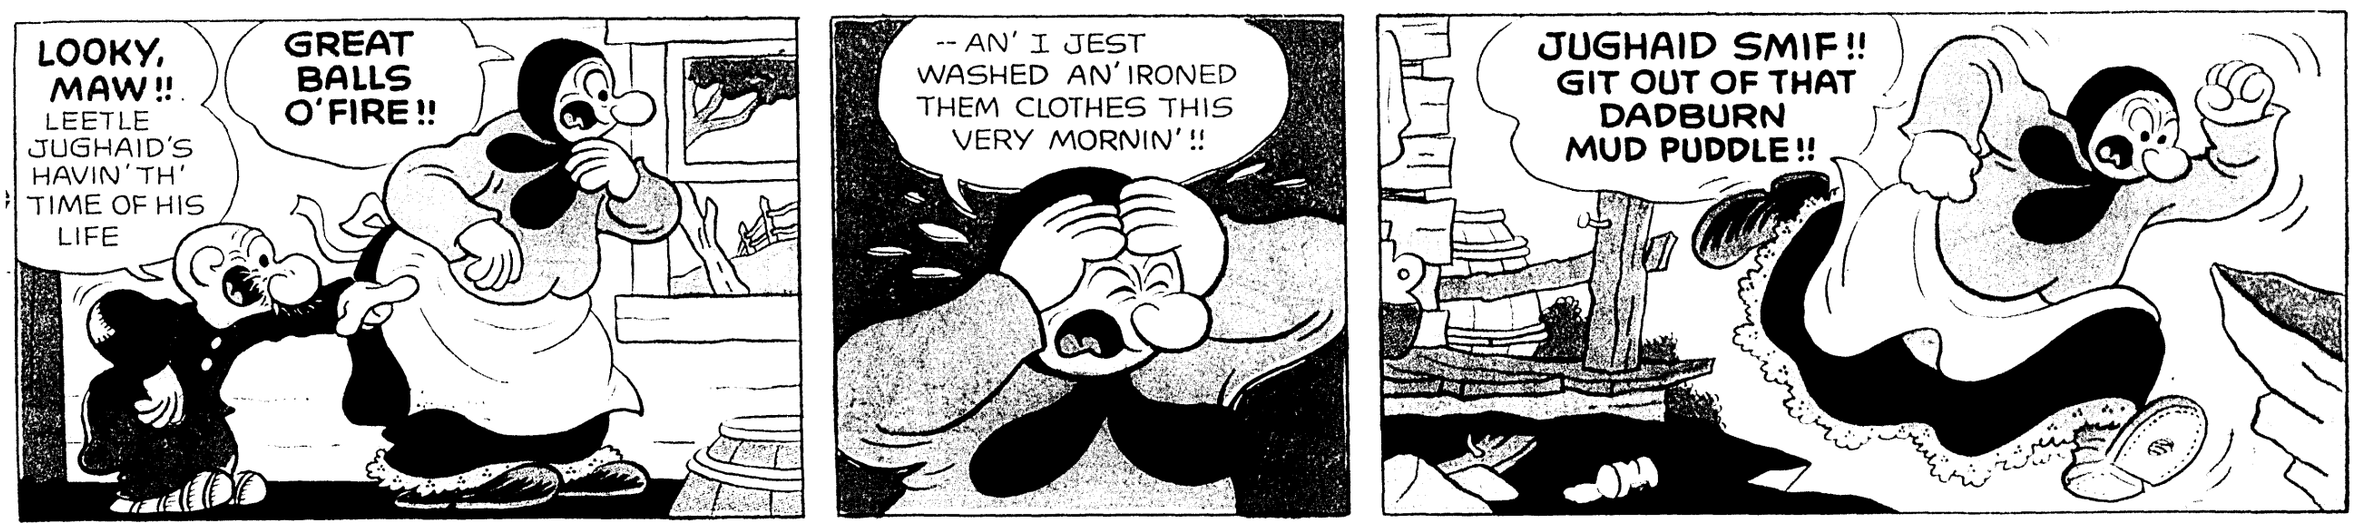

Living in the country, I didn't want to drive into town, so I used a double length of pink net to wrap the pillowcases, then tied the package with pink and blue ribbon.

The idea was new to the group, and I received many smiles on my originality, as the bride can find many uses for the net.
